Besieged South Africa writes off Rhodesia

. . . but margin for compromise is vanishing in the 'kraal' of Deep South

● The author of the following story recently returned to London from a two-month tour of southern Africa.

By GAVIN YOUNG
Colonist - Observer Service

LONDON — "We are already at war," South Africa's military chief of staff warned the other day, and quite suddenly his voice has become only one in a doomsday chorus in the Deep White South of Africa.

While their timid counterparts in Ian Smith's Rhodesian dream world to the north play down the black guerrilla war on their doorsteps, some newspaper editors in Johannesburg are sticking dramatically blownup pictures of huge tanks on their front pages, with captions like "Our iron fist packs a powerful punch." A knockout punch, white Afrikaners tell one another smugly, destined for the oncoming jaw of black African nationalism.

Since the coup in Portugal last April, the government of Prime Minister Balthazar Johannes Vorster in South Africa has been encouraging while South Africans to "think warlike."

Nevertheless, those blond, crewcut soldiers of apartheid crouching out in the bush along South Africa's northern frontiers have in their kitbags an 11-page, government-issue booklet designed to help them win over the Black Menace, as far as may be possible, with kindness.

. . . mixture of war psychosis and clumsy open hand

"Avoid the bad habit of abusing a Bantu as an 'ape' or 'baboon'," the booklet's author, Dr. P. J. Riekert, advises, "if a hand is extended in greeting take it. Your hand will not change color."

The officially induced war psychosis and this clumsy booklet illustrate two things: First, Vorster's intention to meet the upsurge of black aspirations in South Africa with irresistible force, and second,

Thousands prepared to face Carmen fury

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hurricane Carmen smashed into the marshy Louisiana Gulf coast Saturday night and then stalled with wind gusts up to 150 miles an hour swirling around its centre. More than 100,000 persons fled their homes ahead of the storm.

The first hurricane of the 1974 season to make a U.S. landfall already had taken four lives in moving from the Atlantic Ocean through the Caribbean and northward in the Gulf of Mexico.

As Carmen's winds zoomed inland, the projected path ahead of the storm was virtually deserted.

Carmen's "eye" stalled about 20 miles offshore west of Grand Isle, a spit of land near the mouth of the Mississippi River. Only 20 coast guardsmen remained there, riding out 100-mile-plus winds in a reinforced concrete communications centre.

Ahead of the storm residents waited throughout the night in scores of evacuation centres. The Red Cross described the evacuation of 45,000 persons in Mississippi and nearly 60,000 in Louisiana as a smoothly co-ordinated operation.

The "eye" of Carmen was less than 70 miles from New Orleans where the city's 600,000 residents took to shelters and sandbagged homes and stores well in advance of the storm.

Mozambique whites rebel

Reuter, AP

A clandestine former servicemen's organization calling itself the Dragons of Death seized control Saturday night of Mozambique's main radio station in Lourenco Marques and claimed its supporters in the police and the army now controlled the territory.

There was no confirmation of this report from any other source.

The occupation of the radio station came in the midst of festivities to celebrate an agreement on independence signed in Lusaka, Zambia, earlier in the day between the Portuguese government and the Frelimo guerrilla movement.

The broadcast demanded immediate independence for Mozambique without the participation of Frelimo — the Mozambique Liberation Front.

Several hours after the station was taken over, an announcer said Police and army in Mozambique had sided with the Dragons, and the whole territory was under the control of these forces.

The rebel radio said supporters had taken over the capital's airport, the post office, power station, oil refinery and the important provincial towns of Beira, Nampula, Quelimane and Vila Cabral.

In Lisbon the Portuguese government and armed forces said that right-wing demonstrators who seized a radio station in Mozambique were broadcasting false and alarming reports, giving the impression of a rebellion there.

Police and army appeared to have made no immediate attempt to put a stop to the broadcasts in Mozambique.

The radio station called on all police units to report to their posts, while the leaders of the Dragons and the army in Mozambique would be holding a meeting at the government house here.

The radio station branded Portuguese Foreign Minister

Citizens army in Tory plans

LONDON (Reuter) — A citizens' army to help the government maintain law and order in Britain will be set up if the Conservatives win the next general election, a senior party spokesman said Saturday night.

Geoffrey Rippon, Conservative spokesman on foreign affairs, said such a force would have to be created "for home defence and duties in aid of the civil power."

Rippon's remarks were the first indication that the Tories are trying to seize the initiative on the law-and-order issue from assorted former army officers who have announced similar volunteer forces in recent weeks.

"We must harness the voluntary spirit and sense of patriotism" which, Rippon said, "imbues people now desperately seeking an opportunity to serve their country."

Meanwhile, the Sunday Times said Prime Minister Harold Wilson told Queen Elizabeth Saturday he planned general elections for Oct. 10.

Evel dubs rocket

By JIM WILLSE

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — All the hullabaloo, hokum and hype will be left behind for a few moments today when Evel Knievel straps himself in a toy-like missile for his ride across the Snake River Canyon.

The time for the army of promoters and pitchmen to ballyhoo incredible danger of the canyon jump is largely passed; they have sold just about all the tickets they are going to sell.

Even Knievel, never one to minimize his own heroics, rates the probability of landing safely as "100 per cent — and that's it."

Still, there is that chance . . .

"Sure, he should make it. If we can put a man on the moon, we ought to be able to shoot one across a canyon," John Lewis, a 30-year-old schoolteacher from Kansas City, said Saturday. "But then again, when I look at that contraption and that canyon, I kind of wonder."

It is the spectacle of the 600-foot deep canyon and the pipestem-thin launch ramp above it that make the jump such a public relations man's dream.

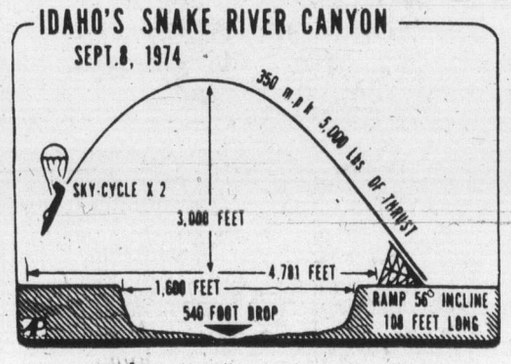

Diagram of Snake Canyon leap

"Look at that," says promoter Robert Arum, pointing at the 13-foot Sky-Cycle missile that is dwarfed first by the 108-foot launch rail and then by the crevice beyond. "If it's a fraud, then it's a fraud. Let it speak for itself."

Arum's Top Rank Inc. and other backers have already paid $6 million to Knievel, the 34-year-old son of a Montana auto dealer. If they have calculated the appeal of the stunt correctly, they may realize as much as $27 million, with 60 per cent or about $16 million going to the star.

It seems simple enough. Build up enough steam in the missile's engine to produce 400 miles an hour — the velocity needed to carry it well beyond the 1,600-foot width of the canyon — then bring it down by parachute.

The chief engineer, missile developer Robert Truax, says the chances are about the same as for a test pilot trying out a new plane for the first time.

Everyone connected with the promotion is fond of reminding skeptics of the two test firings that wound up in the canyon.

Yet Truax says the first was intended only to test the ramp and surprised no one by

Air Canada replaces cracked casings

Rolls-Royce engines checked

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Air Canada said Saturday the airline has been conducting tests on its 12 Lockheed Tristar jets following reports of engine casing defects.

"We received notice from Britain's Rolls Royce Co., who make the RB-211 engines, that cast alloy engine casings sometimes develop cracks, so we've been doing checks every 100 hours of flight time," the spokesman said.

"So far we've found two cracked casings, one of which was causing a loss of hydraulic fluid, and they were taken care of."

The spokesman said each of the 12 planes has three RB-211 jets and the airline has 10 spare engines.

Rolls Royce had already sent Air Canada 10 spare castings made of a similar but heavier alloy, the airline spokesman said, adding that more casings were on the way.

All Nippon Airways grounded its six Tristars Wednesday after two made emergency landings using only the tail engine. They were found to be losing oil through cracks in the cast alloy outer casings of the two wing engines.

The Japanese transport ministry has approved an All Nippon Airways plan to fit its Tristars with engines with improved metal casings before flying resumes, a ministry spokesman said.

This followed an overnight investigation by experts from the airline and the Rolls-Royce Co.

The ministry spokesman said the airline was expected to complete the replacement of the engine casings by early next month.

Mario Soares, who signed the accord in Lusaka as a traitor.

It also castigated as traitors Frelimo supporters in Mozambique who for the last three days have been holding mass demonstrations in support of the liberation organization.

A radio announcer said the Dragons had a list of 29,000 known Frelimo supporters and it advised them to "shut up."

At about the same time as the radio station was being taken over a group of disgruntled whites entered the central prison in Lourenco Marques and freed about 200 members of the DGS — the disbanded secret police — who were imprisoned following last April's coup in Portugal.

A wave of protests has been mounted by white groups who are opposed to the independence agreement negotiated in Lusaka between the Frelimo guerrillas and the Portuguese government.

Rhodesians move second tribe

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The 16,500 members of the Nadzina tribal trust-reserve in northeast Rhodesia are being put into 10 protected villages, the security force said Saturday.

It is the second mass movement of tribesmen into wired villages in two months. The first was at Chiweshe, where 47,000 men, women and children were put into 21 villages.

"The security forces are establishing protected villages in Madziwa to isolate terrorists from the population and thus cut them off from both the people and food supplies," a security force spokesman said.

The tribesmen from the 500-square-mile Madziwa reserve are being invited to enter the villages voluntarily. But if they do no do this by Oct. 31 they will be forcibly moved, the spokesman said.

THE COMMUNICATION gap is often evident concerning different ity departments.

Moss Street, between Richardson and Carnsew, was given a fine repaving job about four weeks ago and one long-time resident of the street says it was the first time such a job had been done in 44 years.

However, at the beginning of this year, another resident on Moss complained to the city that his storm drains were clogged up. Complaint appeared to have fallen on deaf ears — until this week when a crew showed up, dug up the new pavement, and repaired the clogged drains.

Now that's a communication gap . . .

MORE INPUT to Robert Strachan's plea for ideas on how to stop the highway carnage. Strachan should check with the authorities in Connecticut to find out what system they are using, because at this time they have 45,000 drivers OFF the road — in other words, their driving privileges have been suspended. Now Connecticut isn't a large state and to have 45,000 current suspensions would seem to indicate they have some pretty stiff regulations as to careless, reckless and drunken driving . . .

TELEVISION broke out of its somnolism this week with that magnificent Henry Fonda portrayal of lawyer Clarence Darrow. If Fonda doesn't win an award for his performance, there is no justification for such awards . . .

ONE OF THE OLDEST churches in our area will hold its 100th anniversary celebration Nov. 3. The Reformed Episcopal Church, which received its property from Sir James Douglas away back in 1874, is asking descendents of the original congregation to attend the celebration. Incidentally, Sir James Douglas also gave them their church organ after it had been dredged out of Vancouver harbor. The church has embarked on a renovation program and this, naturally, costs money. They're looking for about $40,000, so if you happen to be of a mind to contribute, do so by sending your donation to the Centennial Renovation Fund, P.O. Box 751, Victoria . . .

HAVE BEEN asked by many people just where the government hopes to get the qualified practitioners to set up the proposed acupuncture clinics here and in Vancouver. Agreed, it could be a problem, but I can tell them where to get one top hand. Kok Yuen Leung, who has just opened up a second clinic (in Salem) for the Oregon State Medical Society acupuncture wing, is still a British Columbian at heart and he would be more than happy to come back and make his contribution to the success of the new venture. And men of his capabilities are not all that easy to come by . . .

AT THE RECENT NDP convention in Kamloops, one of the most quoted phrases by delegates was, "this is our government, you rule for us, not for everybody."

Sick thinking on the part of those delegates who believe this, and just another reason why so many British Columbians, while not strong NDPers, but who voted NDP the last time around, have become afraid of what they created . . .

THE FIGURE staggers the imagination—14 million rotten eggs! How can Agriculture Minister Eugene Whalen continue to defend the policies of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency and how can Prime Minister Trudeau allow him to make excuses for such a boondoggle? . . .

CHEERS for Ald. Bill Tindall who told B.C. Rentalsman Barrie Clark to do his own dirty work and leave Victoria city council out of it. Clark wants the city to carry out site inspections in cases of disputes between landlord and tenant. Let Clark use one of his assistants to carry out such inspections, or, let him start earning some of his own inflated salary by doing it himself. . .

TIMES HAVE CHANGED. A recent filler in the paper mentioned that in 1904 the first United States motorist was jailed for five days for speeding — for doing 20 miles per hour. Where have such tough laws gone? . . .

THIS DEPARTMENT is being deluged with calls offering ideas on how to get bad drivers off the road and keep them off. One suggestion — that pictures of all convicted drunk and reckless drivers be printed in the papers. Sort of an embarrassment thing. Like to, but I'm told this would be an invasion of privacy. Next suggestion has merit — that The Daily Colonist print, in a prominent box in the same spot in the paper every week, the names and addresses of all license suspensions for that week. Then, if a neighbor saw that person flaunting the suspension by continuing to drive, a simple phone call to the police could trip him up.

Stranded tourists get break

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has given British Airways and Air Canada permission to fly stranded British tourists home.

About 800 vacationers were stranded in Canada when a British travel agency suspended operations two weeks ago.

Stephen Howe, public relations officer for British Airways, said Friday the commission agreed to allow the tourists on charter flights after learning that about 50 were stranded Thursday at Toronto International Airport.

He said they spent the night in airport hotels or sleeping in the terminals because the two airlines could only accommodate a few passengers that night on regular flights.

Howe said the vacationers will be placed on charter flights to Britain tonight.

He estimated that 300 tourists still are stranded in Canada although British Airways and Air Canada have managed to transport hundreds back home in the last two weeks.

Knievel landing in the canyon. In the second test, two weeks ago, everything appeared to be working fine when the parachute popped a few seconds early, floating the Sky-Cycle neatly down into the canyon.

That test was conducted in secret, and there is some doubt it would have been made public at all if it had been completely successful.

Until the past few days, the promoters had been saying confidently that 50,000 people — double the population of Twin Falls — would pay $25 a head to see the jump in person. But although the stream of cars, campers and motorcycles continued Saturday, it appeared that estimate would be high.

The main revenue is to come from the two-hour closed circuit telecast being presented at about 280 theatres in the U.S. and Canada. For an average price of $10 the viewer gets to see the jump, shot from nine angles and replayed in slow motion, plus a variety of other attractions.

Among the scheduled performers are 69-year-old tightrope walker Karl Wallenda teetering at the edge of the canyon, and someone named Sensational Parker, performing an unspecified feat of daring. David Frost and former U.S. astronaut James Lovell will be the commentators.

The show begins at 1 p.m. B.C. time with the actual three-minute jump scheduled to take place around 2:30 p.m., but for those assembled in this southern Idaho city, the show began a week ago.

Out of the powdery dust of the Qualls' family cow pasture emerged a midway of concessions, selling beer, Evel Knievel T-shirts ($4) and various other memorabilia.

The surrounding land was kept by Cliff Qualls and his two sons to rent out to campers. Some of them have paid more than $40 to place their tent next to someone else's at night and during the day to navigate the organic minefield left by the pasture's former occupants.

"It's not so much seeing the jump, it's being at the jump," explained John Berman, a 29-year-old businessman from New York City. In fact, only a limited view of the other side of the canyon is available from behind the six-foot-high metal fences erected to keep the spectators from falling over the edge.

At the heart of the show, of course, is Knievel, the arrogant, eccentric stuntman who brought himself to this moment through more than 300 motorcycle leaps over trucks and cars, shrewd business dealings and unrelenting promotion of himself.

"I'm here to risk my life," he intones in his flat Western drawl over and over again. "I wish I didn't have to do this, but I'm going to."

Your good health

By G. C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Since the fourth month of my last pregnancy I have had a pain in my right hip and leg. At first it wasn't bad but in the last few weeks it has become extreme.

I have been to at least 12 different doctors and most of them have different opinions or none at all. One said it was because I gained so much weight during my pregnancy but I have lost 40 pounds.

About the first or second month of my pregnancy I fell on the ice and seemed to land on my right side. Is it possible I injured my hip? I do not think I can take this pain much longer.—Mrs. H.S.S.

Whether it was the fall or the weight or something else entirely doesn't really much matter. The question is what is wrong — what was damaged? And what needs to be done about it? You may, for example, have suffered some displacement that puts pressure on a nerve. If your weight gain caused some shift in bone structure, losing the weight afterward wouldn't necessarily repair things.

You say you have visited "at least 12 doctors." From past experience, I am inclined to discount such figures, and also to suspect that some of the "visits" hav have been no more than casual questions to an obstetrician or pediatrician on the order of "do you know why my hip hurts?" Has your lower spine or hip been x-rayed?

Plane, boats search for missing swimmer

YOUNGSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — An airplane, a 40-foot launch and several volunteer craft are searching for a young Toronto man missing after apparently attempting to swim across Lake Ontario.

Neil McNeill, 23, set off with three others, but the boat accompanying them developed mechanical problems and was forced to turn back. The other three were rescued early Saturday night.

Turks firing again, Greeks claim

U.S. Ambassador busy in Ankara

Associated Press

Greek-Cypriot national guards protested Saturday that Turkish forces had opened fire along the northwest coast of Cyprus where they have extended their hold on the island by 12 miles since the Aug. 16 cease-fire.

Despite the fighting and United Nations reports of shooting in Nicosia, Turkish- and Greek-Cypriot authorities prepared for release of a least 4,478 war prisoners and detainees, the UN peacekeeping force reported.

In Ankara, capital of Turkey, Premier Bulent Ecevit met for the second day in a row with U.S. Ambassador William Macomber. Turkish sources said Macomber on Friday had conveyed serious U.S. concern over renewed military activity on Cyprus.

The sources said that after seeing the ambassador, Ecevit met with his top military commanders and then telephoned U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger to assure him that no new Turkish military operation is underway or being considered.

They said Ecevit told Kissinger that the military action was small scale, mostly infighters, and was provoked by continuous Greek-Cypriot armed action against Turkish enclaves.

The Greek-Cypriot national guard protested that the Turks had shelled the village of Kato Pyrgos Friday night in a strategic zone commanding Morphou Bay, where the bulk of the island's copper is exported by the American-owned Cyprus Mines Corp. Vice-President Raouf Denktash, the Turkish-Cypriot leader, said Thursday that Turkish-Cypriot forces controlled the area.

Denktash and Greek-Cypriot leader Glafkos Clerides, the president of Cyprus, went ahead with a five-point agreement reached Friday, a UN spokesman said.

In their preliminary peace talks, the rival leaders agreed to exchange war prisoners, civilian detainees and hostages from the Cyprus crisis. The International Red Cross says 3,314 Turkish-Cypriot men are held by the Greeks in schools and prison camps, and 1,164 Greek-Cypriots are PoWs on the island.

It was not clear whether the agreement covered another 1,188 known Greek prisoners who have been shipped to camps in Turkey.

The UN spokesman said the two sides, with the UN and the Red Cross, were taking quick action on the agreement. But he declined to say what steps were under way or when the first prisoners might be freed.

$2 million program

Ottawa sweetens women's activity

OTTAWA (CP) — A $2 million program to encourage the activities of women's groups will be Canada's contribution to 1975 as International Women's Year, State Secretary Hugh Faulkner announced Saturday.

Faulkner, addressing a United Nations seminar on women's rights, said the program should promote a greater understanding of women's issues.

He said priority will be given to projects enabling women's groups to develop their own resources and which will have effects reaching beyond 1975.

A meeting of representatives of women's groups is scheduled here Oct. 19-20 to explain the program in detail.

It is to include a series of 10 monthly seminars, which Faulkner said should "encourage decision makers in the public and private sector to do their part in changing the status of women." The first, Women in Politics, will be in February but no specific date or location was available.

Other projects will include a publication on women's rights and a program for native women, which will include films and regional conferences.

Ford charts 22-month inflation war

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has decided against any quick public move to pressure the Federal Reserve Board to relax its tight money policy, sources reported Saturday.

Instead, the sources said Ford was sticking with his plan to move deliberately in moulding a package of anti-inflation proposals.

That package plan probably won't be completed for at least a month, and perhaps not until late in the year, one White House adviser indicated.

The disclosures came after Ford said in a Philadelphia speech Friday night he is charting a 22-month battle plan for what he called his "all-out war against inflation."

"We are going after, one and all, Democrats, Republicans and Independents, the public enemy of inflation in 1974 and we will lick him before July 4, 1976," Ford told a dinner meeting commemorating the 200th anniversary of the First Continental Congress.

One aide suggested Saturday that Ford had picked the date partly for rhetorical and symbolic purposes — it's the 200th anniversary of the birth of the United States.

But Senator Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield (Dem.-Mont.) said Saturday, "We can't afford to wait that long."

One administration source acknowledged that Ford's timetable is intended to ease the pressure for prompt anti-inflation action.

The president believes the country's economic problems are "too serious for doing something that looks good in the public mind but could really have bad long-range effects," said one official close to Ford.

He is against any public relations tinkering operation just for the sake of saying, 'We've done something'," this adviser said.

A consensus of the economists who participated in a White House inflation conference Thursday suggested moves to ease the tight money policy, which is blamed for high interest rates and a scarcity of credit.

Administration officials have argued that looser money might increase productivity but would also drive up prices and make inflation worse.

In Paris, financial chiefs from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan met Saturday for talks on the world's economic problems and quickly decided to bring Italy into the consultations.

West Germany recently gave the rocky Italian economy a $2 billion credit line as its problems reached crisis proportions.

Oregon family of four gone without a trace

COPPER, Ore. (AP) — The food was on the picnic table, a pan of dishwater had been set out and dishes and utensils were placed neatly near a camp stove. Clothes were folded on a cot.

But a search of the campsite turned up no sign of Richard Cowden, his wife and two children.

The Cowdens, of White City, Ore., have been missing since Sept. 1. They were to have gone for dinner to Mrs. Cowden's mother's house in Copper, a mile from the camp.

They didn't show up.

The last time they were seen was last Sunday morning when Cowden and his son David, five, went to the store in Copper for a quart of milk.

Searchers combed the rugged Siskiyou Mountains in a 25-mile radius of the camp all week but found nothing.

The U.S. National Guard joined the search Saturday.

"It's getting to look really strange," said Sgt. Ernest Walden of the Oregon State Police. "It's not logical that a couple like that would take off with two young kids and leave all their belongings."

Mrs. Cowden's mother, Ruth Grayson, checked the family's belongings in the camp and said they were all apparently wearing only bathing suits when they vanished.

Their pickup truck was in the camp.

The family's basset hound, Droppy, turned up Monday at a Copper general store and scratched on the door.

The Carberry Creek area where the family was camping is near the California border. It is criss-crossed with logging roads and honeycombed with old gold mine shafts sunk as long as 100 years ago. The Cowdens had camped in the area before, and were reported to have known it well.

Still to come

IT LOOKS AS THOUGH the provincial government is going to lower speed limits after all. The word isn't definite yet, or wasn't at the time of this writing. But the indications are that the decision has been made.

Why the government doesn't come right out and say so is something to wonder about. The ways of people in public office are sometimes devious, and this may be the reason.

There is no question that slower highway driving will reduce the amount of flesh and metal tearing taking place. The United States experience confirms this in no uncertain statistics. Canadian driving attitudes and conditions are similar to what they were in the south before speed limits were cut back. Have we become so nationalistic in our feelings that there is a reluctance to follow the lead of the United States even with a good thing?

Slowness to act on the U.S. experience can hardly be laid to a lack of awareness of the extent of driving violence here. Government motor vehicle office reports have been showing increasing numbers of fatalities alarmingly, and not just in recent months.

But it was only the other day that Transport and Communications Minister Robert Strachan found voice to the situation. After seeing the latest death - and - damage records he was prompted to issue an urgent personal appeal that "something be done."

"We are killing and maiming ourselves at an unprecedented rate and nothing we have done to stem the flow of blood has worked so far," is the way he chose to express his concern.

Long-time advocates of reduced speed limits may have noticed that Mr. Strachan's "appeal" came a few days after the Insurance Corporation of B.C., which comes under his ministry, had reported a 25 per cent increase in car coverage damage claims.

Whether the "something to be done" about accidents "lies in stricter enforcement, tougher laws against drinking drivers, reduced limits, the mandatory use of seat belts or an increase in the minimum age for young drivers, I don't know," the minister further stated. "But the time is ripe for more drastic rules . . ."

He "sandwiched" the lower speed limit between other possible moves, but it was there, and next day Highways Minister Graham Lea made it known there had been a get - together with Mr. Strachan's and the attorney-general's departments which obviously took place just before the transport and communications minister made his statement.

And Mr. Lea hinted that lower speed limits may be introduced. From the three-departments meeting were recommendations regarding speed limits for the highways board, which is composed of senior officials of his department who handle working problems relating to highways and make recommendations to the minister.

Presumably, the highways board now will give the minister its views on what already has been decided. It will help build-up the long-awaited announcement. Meanwhile, there will be more death and destruction.

Rental housing squeeze

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S "rentalsman," Barrie Clark, says he expects to recommend to the government an increase effective on Oct. 1 in the 8 per cent which now, under interim legislation pending the proclamation of the new Landlord and Tenant Act, is the most that landlords may raise housing rents in a year. There is the exception that owners may appeal to the rentalsman in cases of financial hardship for permission to go beyond the 8 per cent.

Mr. Clark does not know yet what maximum annual rate of increase he will propose; his staff is still doing research on the matter. It is fitting, however, that at a time when most costs are rising so rapidly, landlords should be allowed to keep a fair rate of return.

It is not only fitting, but it seems essential if the Victoria and Vancouver areas are to get out of their severe rental housing pinch. And unfortunately, this is only one of three factors discouraging the construction of homes for tenants. The other two are the high cost of mortgage money for private developers and the federal government's discontinuation of tax benefits for investors in apartments. According to building authorities there is virtually no interest in the two metropolitan areas in rental apartment construction, and not a great deal of interest in putting up condominiums for those who can afford to buy them.

Yet the vacancy rate for rental accommodation is three in a thousand in Vancouver, the lowest in Canada, and not much better in Victoria. And this with people by the scores of thousands per year flowing into British Columbia, some with the money to buy homes, many without. If the province were a country in its own right, the latest annual population estimates would place it behind only Kuwait and the Bahamas in rate of growth — Kuwait with an extraordinary 9.8 per cent, the Bahamas with 4.6, both explainable by their small starting bases, and British Columbia with 3.5 per cent, sufficient to double the number of residents in 20 years.

It is ironical that some of this influx may result from the promise of an easier life in a province that is relatively generous to its poor, and that the very people who come to British Columbia for this reason are those most likely to want places to rent.

But it cannot be said that the provincial government has done its utmost — not yet, at any rate — to provide the needed accommodation, nor in company with the federal government to encourage its provision by private investors. More action, quickly, is needed.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest, and if signed with pen-names, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

Against the mall

It has been my intention to write in opposition to the Government St. mall for some time. Having resided in this city since 1907 I feel that I have the right to request that the aforementioned mall should not be proceeded with further until the citizens express their views.

The "charge of the very light brigade" mentioned Sept. 3 is surely an error of judgment on the part of the author. Lloyd Davies and Pip Holmes are citizens whose qualities are very well known and their valued advice should be taken into consideration.

There is a lot to consider: the name would have to be changed from Government St. to Bottleneck Way. Please give the citizens of Victoria a chance to vote on this contentious issue at our civic elections.

Insurance

On July 15 we were the innocent victims of a car accident. While patiently waiting for a red light to change to green we were accosted on the rear end by an Alberta car, who seconds before was quite unceremoniously hit by a Saskatchewan car.

But we knew the wonderful NDP government, who is all for helping the people of British Columbia with its famous Autoplan, would certainly make our troubles small ones.

Beware you unsuspecting British Columbians—if you are hit by a car insured anywhere else but in B.C. you will find the friendly staff at the ICBC office calmly telling you to either make a claim on your own collision coverage and pay the deductible that you carry, or sue the person who hit you. They say that as the erring vehicle was not insured by them, they can't and won't lift a finger until you claim on your own collision coverage. They will then try to recover your money and theirs but they seem to have little interest in the matter and can offer no hope of ever actually recovering the money.

It seems extremely strange and bewildering that the taxpayers' money of this province should be needlessly spent to cover a collision claim because the Insurance Corporation of B.C. has no idea of how to collect the money from another insurance company.

Our extremely well advertised Autoplan, I'm sure, will go down in history as one of Premier Barrett's biggest and most expensive blunders for the people of British Columbia.

Out in open

I salute you for your front page headline of Aug. 14. ("Welcome to our country of Kebeck," Hecklers boo Trudeau, Bourassa). It is only right that the public should know what is going on in this country of ours. So many editors forget that freedom of the press cuts both ways and buries items of first importance on the inside pages and sometimes omits them altogether.

When a large section of the country is opposing the will of the government the matter should be brought into the open for discussion and not be subjected to a blanket of silence. I wish more newspapers thoughout the country would follow your lead. We do not want any more of those surprises when the federal government calls out the army in the middle of the night.

Mining

If one knew less of socialist non-think, it would be unbelievable that Mr. Nimsick, the minister of mines, would attempt to cover up the ghastly mess he has made of mining in B.C. by advertisements (made at taxpayers' expense) of goodies he will provide for prospectors. (Prospectors can just have a nice holiday at taxpayers' expense).

Existing known ore bodies should be developed into producing mines. No mining company will spend the great sums needed to develop a working mine only to have the government take all the money that belongs to the shareholder who risked his money to develop the mine. I have a few shares in a B.C. mine and my few dollars, with that of other shareholders, developed a good mine, giving steady jobs to many men. Last year, this mine earned $1.20 per share, but the B.C. government took all but 32 cents of this earning. Now, to survive, this company must develop mines in other countries or provinces, giving jobs to people in those places rather than in B.C.

Really, Mr. Nimsick, do you think it is good business to kill employment in B.C. and cover up with fake advertisements in the newspapers? You propose nice, paid holidays for prospectors, but what will they do if they do discover any good prospects? No one will risk money to develop it. Certainly this government, which only has experience in giving away other people's money, does not have the know-how to make money and jobs in new industry.

Ferry aides

This is in rebuttal to your Sept. 1 editorial on government employees.

I am one of those kids or students who wears those orange fluorescent vests.

You probably heard or saw the change of shift talking about the events of the day or something like that. I'm not interested in that. The part about idle ferry hours of horseplay. When you stand there for seven hours when there are no cars or people to help or direct, you have to do something to relieve the boredom.

I'm sure if you asked anyone who rode the ferries or worked there this summer you would probably get a positive answer. If you were forced to sit in a line you were probably happy to receive the page of games for the kids, told where to get food, the bathrooms, phones or answer your questions about when you will get on a ferry. Ask an old lady or man, the ladies with babies and small children who rode the courtesy mini-bus to and from the ferries. We have received many compliments as well as complaints about our mini-buses and passenger aides.

I admit we were thrust upon the ferries but they are not up to their ears in summer students or horseplay. I feel we were a useful service to the ferries and the passengers.

The potential PC leaders

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

So okay, let's look quickly over the 11 possible candidates the Conservative caucus could field two years from now in the race for the leadership.

The caucus, that is the Conservatives in the Commons, 95 MPs, range from those far enough left they could be interchangeable with the New Democrats, to those so far right that they view moderate Robert Stanfield as a bit of a socialist.

A wildly varied bunch, but perhaps the very breadth of the socio-economic opinion is the basic strength of Conservatism.

At odds most of the time and united usually only in the pinches, the caucus this time is solid in its determination that the new leader will come from within its ranks. For except in the case of former Prime Minister Diefenbaker, the caucus, since the days of Richard Bedford Bennett, has had leadership thrust upon it from the "outside" by the party panjandrums.

But if there's talent of leadership among the Conservatives with a working knowledge of federal politics and Parliament, it has to be resident in the caucus and no other place.

So who, then, are the 11 potential candidates among the 95 MPs who fancy themselves, or are fancied by friends and associates as possible leaders?

Well, from east to west, in Newfoundland there's James McGrath, 42, of Irish descent, married with six children, a broker, 17-year Commons veteran, able and aggressively ambitious, a moderate.

Prince Edward Island has David MacDonald, 38, United Church clergyman, married, nine years in the House, on the bit in the Commons, inventive — he broke new campaign ground with an election trailer — personable if oversensitive to criticism, a left winger of genuine conviction.

From Nova Scotia Robert Coates, 46, lawyer, married, two children, in Parliament since 1957, enormously able, intensively active. An instinct for going for the Liberal jugular, deadly with questions revealing government waste and extravagance. A gifted Trudeau-baiter, makes news and relishes the clash and clamor of the Commons.

In New Brunswick, Gordon Fairweather, 51, lawyer, former provincial attorney general, married, three children, in Parliament 12 years, generally regarded as one of the best brains in the House. A reformer of independent mind enough to put personal conviction ahead of political expediency, far enough to the Left to be comfortable with New Democrats.

Claude Wagner, of Quebec, a former hard-lining provincial attorney general, with a firm enough sense of law and order that he could defy separatist hoodlums and use force to crush anti - monarchist rioters during a royal visit. A handsome 49, family man with three children, in politics 10 years. Charismatic. A prop and pillar of the Right.

In Ontario, Walter Baker, Sinclair Stevens and Allan Lawrence, in Parliament only two years, but still, standouts.

Baker, 44, lawyer, married, three children. Able, personable, talented, tough but disciplined parliamentarian. Enjoys politics. The only Conservative east of the Manitoba border to increase his majority. Right of centre.

Allan Lawrence, lawyer, married two children, in Ontario legislature 14 years, four of them in cabinet. Excellent parliamentarian, aggressive, ambitious.

Sinclair Stevens, 47, lawyer, business executive, handsome, attractive, articulate, smooth. Long active in political organization, clever, a conservative Conservative.

Jack Horner, 47, married, five children, a rancher, a real cowboy and proud of it. Hugely vigorous, ruggedly handsome, keen, analytical mind, a reasoned and seasoned speaker always worth the listening. Easy, relaxed, nice sense of humor. A private enterpriser if there ever was one, and firmly on the Right.

Woolliams, 58, married, two children, a lawyer, skilled parliamentarisn, first class speaker with a huge voice. Has already declared himself in the running for leader. A big, handsome redhead with a ready wit. Personable, popular. Firmly on the Right, except for being a confirmed abolitionist of capital punishment.

From the West Coast, John Fraser, 43, married, three children, a lawyer. In Commons only two years, but already a man to watch. Middle of the road.

In South Africa

A church-state clash

By STANLEY UYS
from Cape Town

A bill, which imposes a "ferocious" penalty of a £6,000 fine or 10 years' imprisonment on anyone who encourages anyone else, even indirectly, not to perform military service, has just passed its second reading in the South African Parliament — in spite of a warning by the Catholic archbishop of Cape Town, the Most Rev. Denis Hurley, that it could create a new generation of Christian martyrs.

Only the seven Progressive Party MPs voted against the bill, which they believe will remove from the arena of debate the question of the morality of the anti-guerrilla wars being fought by South Africa on its northern borders.

The Defence Bill was introduced immediately after the South African Council of Churches had approved a resolution challenging the "justness" of the anti-guerrilla wars. The Christian churches in South Africa have been thrown into a ferment of controversy by this resolution.

In a widely-distributed letter, Dr. Theo Kotze, Cape director of the anti-apartheid Christian Institute of Southern Africa, writes:

"The implications of the bill are terribly serious for the whole church . . . This bill restricts our pastoral duty, it inhibits the counselling of ministers and others. We cannot under any circumstances surrender our duty to be pastors to the flock of Christ and we must make this known.

"We dare not surrender the right to encourage young people to face moral issues and there are serious moral issues at stake. The enormous penalties the bill prescribes do not cancel the imperative of obedience to our Lord."

In his statement, Archbishop Hurley said: "The religious freedom of the West has cost the lives of many martyrs . . . Our government is now creating a martyr situation, because there are some convinced people in this country — some Christians, some humanists — who will have to make the agonizing choice between witnessing to their faith in justice and reconciliation and facing the crushing penalty of 10 years in jail.

"These people firmly believe that to support — or even not to oppose — armed defence of the present white domination in South Africa is to betray their own conscience. It is a terrible thing for a government to put a man's conscience on the rack."

Speaking in Parliament, the leader of the Progressive Party, Colin Eglin, said: "I ask this House to stop and think again before it attempts by legislation to silence discussion on the issue of military service. This discussion is part of the debate on the morality or immorality of violence, on civilized mankind's dilemma, on the legitimacy of violence, be it in maintaining a system or destroying it, be it in defence of a state or in the attack on a state. The debate on this great moral issue will continue."

Many South Africans, including white politicians and clergymen, believe South Africa can no more win a guerrilla war on its borders than the United States could win the war in Vietnam, or Portugal the war in Mozambique, or than Rhodesians can win the war now taking place in their country.

The alternative to a guerrilla war, they say, is to create a just society in South Africa — but this argument might be outlawed under the new legislation, unless the wording of the clause is changed by a select committee to which the bill has been referred.

Progressive Party MPs fear a "war psychosis" is being created in South Africa to disarm them politically and to prevent them from speaking their minds freely on the moral issue of guerrilla violence which is looming ever larger in the race debate between the government and its opponents.

Government newspapers are encouraging this climate by advocating a "patriotic consensus" on defence issues.

Critics of the defence bill warn that it will inhibit discussion on "institutionalized violence" — a concept which maintains that the manner in which race policies are enforced in South Africa constitutes violence, just as much as guerrilla warfare does on the borders.

The Defence Bill prohibits anyone from advising in any manner whatsoever anyone else not to render military service, and from using any language or doing any act or thing to encourage anyone not to render military service.

Easier access needed to West Coast Trail

You don't really have to be an enthusiastic hiker or a young person to enjoy at least part of the West Coast Trail in Pacific Rim National Park.

The easiest way is to take an enjoyable weekend and camp at beautiful Pachena Beach, where the Ohiaht Indian Band operates Anacla Park campground, bordering the Pachena River estuary and beautiful sandy Pachena Beach, which is something like a miniature Long Beach.

This campground is the stating point for the western end of the West Coast Trail and the first four to five miles of trail, out to Pachena Lighthouse on the Pacific Coast, is an enjoyable and easy hike along a fine trail.

It is after the Pachena Lighthouse the trail starts to get little rougher and sometimes very rough.

This first four or five miles is the easiest and most popular part of the trail for obvious reasons. It is a comfortable day hike — there and back — from the campground and pretty well anyone from grandmother to little toddlers can make it.

Thousands who visit the West Coast Trail each summer go no further than the lighthouse.

Others who haven't the time, or the stamina, to make the whole rugged 45-mile trail hike, often go as far as they can in one day, maybe two days, and then hike back again. They may reach the first difficult crossing at the Klanawa or they may make Tsusiat Falls. But, always they must remember they have to hike back again.

The campground skirts the beach with a buffer of logs and beautiful tall trees sheltering campers from the coastal winds.

There are pit toilets and you can get water from the band store at the entrance to the camp. There is no sani-station for campers with holding tanks as yet, so be sure to arrive with an empty holding tank.

There is almost unlimited camping room and the band has big plans for improvements under direction of National Park experts. Cost is $3 a night, payable at the store, which also has gas pump.

Start of the trail is through the Ross Bible camp at the eastern end of the Indian campground and there is an information hut and registration point as you reach the start of the trail, a hundred yards on.

Those who don't want to hike the trail can have a fine outdoor holiday at the campground and on the beach.

Others can hike as much of the trail as they wish . . . a few hundred yards and then head to the beach and back by the rocky shoreline and on sandy Pachena beach, or out to the lighthouse and on the way they could watch a sea lion colony in March through May, or they can carry on along the Pacific Ocean stretch of trail, which is really the most scenic.

Pachena Bay is 72 miles from Lake Cowichan or 48 miles from Port Alberni, mostly by logging roads which are described in our Logging Road Travels book and will be described again in new detail in an up-coming Sunday column.

The idea of the full 45-mile hike from Pachena Bay, near Bamfield, to Port Renfrew, or vice versa, is a challenge for the young, the fit, and the experienced. Sometimes it is tackled by the unfit and the ill-equipped and this presents a problem, sometimes disaster.

There are many people who haven't the full week of time required to make the trip or haven't the health to attempt it, but who would dearly love the opportunity to see this rugged and historic part of our west coast.

I have seen most of it in short hikes, sometimes made from boat landings, but from a health standpoint neither Taffy or I would be wise to attempt the full hike.

We are by no means alone and I think it is now time to consider some access trails to intercept the trail at various points. They would enable many people who could not otherwise see this rugged west coast area to make one or two-day trips to the area. They would also serve as escape points for those who get ill along the trail, find they are unable to complete the trip, or as rescue points for injured or lost hikers.

There are several places where north-south trails could be established with a camping spot two, three, four, or five miles from the main coastal trail.

Logging roads from the Bamfield area now skirt the Klanawa River and it shouldn't be much of a problem to establish a base camp on the Klanawa and build a trail down river to the West Coast Trail.

The most obvious spot for a north-south connecting trail would be through the Nitinat Triangle Lakes. I am on record as not being opposed to some logging in the Nitinat Triangle. But, I would insist on any logging being an introduction to a new type of landscape logging to preserve the beauty of the lakeshores and by widely dispersed patch logging preserving as much as possible the esthetic values of the surrounding mountain slope areas. This could be a test logging area for all future timber cutting in our beautiful B.C. woods.

I am in favor of insisting that all future logging — everywhere — be done by landscaping like a park and to preserve and protect the environment rather than to keep certain sections as definite parks and let logging continue as it had in the past in other places. I want to be able to enjoy all our forests, not only certain protected areas.

The Nitinat logging road could be extended a couple of miles more than it is now to reach Hobiton Lake and a camping area established there. Maybe later there would be roads skirting back of the lake, reaching the head of Tsusiat Lake where there could be another campground, but it shouldn't be necessary to log the lake shores. Tsusiat Lake could be the base camp for a trail leading to the West Coast Trail at Tsusiat Falls, the spectacular beauty spot of the entire trail.

That lake-road system could either be used by canoers to provide a boating-hiking adventure to the west coast, or by hikers without boats. It would provide a lovely centre-of-the-trail access route.

There should be another camping area on the west shore at the foot of Nitinat Lake and this should be provided with boat wharfage. Then boaters could cruise down the lake, tie up their boats and hike westerly as far as they liked, with Tsusiat Falls an obvious destination.

There could be another campground and boat wharf on the east shore of the foot of Nitinat Lake, near the start of the westward trail to Clo-oose. That for the moment would mean another boat trip down the lake, but it won't be too long before logging roads skirt down along Nitinat Lake to a suitable point to create a camping area for a start of a trail to the Clo-oose area.

There is going to have to be a bridge of some sort across the Gordon River at Port Renfrew and this would mean another approach for a shorter hike along the easterly start of the trail.

We have gone by our aluminum boat to Camper Creek and to the beach near Walbran Creek and hiked along those portions of the trail, but landings on those west coast beaches can be dangerous and shouldn't be attempted except by the most experienced . . . even then you can run into trouble with a change in weather and surf conditions.

Those are some suggestions for making the rugged west coast available to thousands of people who might not otherwise see it. The purists who want the trail kept for themselves will undoubtedly object. But there really is no reason why they can't still make the full strenuous 45-mile hike. They shouldn't really expect the others to be deprived from this area.

Employers getting involved

Course in retirement helps to face future

Opinions vary on when employees should start thinking of their retirement plans, but a growing number of employers seem to agree they have a responsibility to help workers with those plans.

At a recent Toronto seminar on retirement sponsored by the Canadian Management Centre, one expert said an early start on retirement counselling might upset the employee but another said: "People want information, and some, the sooner the better."

One such program, started more than three years ago by Frank McGuigan, head of personnel research at the federal department of public works, now is considered exemplary for industry and other ministries.

The program, offered initially to some employees between ages 60 and 65, included guest speakers at 10 weekly meetings discussing such topics as legal problems of estate planning, moving to a warmer climate, mobile homes and over-all life-style.

The format with slight variations, now is offered to those 50 and older and will be available on a national scale by fall.

"The program is simply offered in recognition that retirement represents an abrupt change in lifestyle," McGuigan said in an interview.

"They lose their routine, status and sense of identity to some extent.

"People are confronted with a drop in income of 40 to 60 per cent — in some cases higher — and that in itself requires some adjustment."

Ken Bertrim, personnel manager with E. S. and A. Robinson (Canada) Ltd., Toronto manufacturer of packaging materials, agreed there are limits on economic guidance.

"Our job is just to tell the man where he could get his information. The rest is up to him."

Faye Patching, an employee relations officer at Canada Packers Ltd., said the company puts staff through a graduated program that begins at age 63 with a review of pensions, benefits and employee plans and ends with a personal and detailed session six months before retirement.

Classes on retirement, including discussions on finance, health and housing, are offered to employees 55 and older.

McGuigan of the public works department said the only criticism he has heard is "we should have had it sooner and that it's mainly oriented to married employees."

"Essentially, we've made a start where we hadn't done anything before.

"Industry and government didn't know how to tackle it, but programs have been successful elsewhere, such as in Britain and the U.S., proving it can be done."

Industry growth, grain please Soviet leaders

MOSCOW (UPI) — Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev said Saturday the Soviet Union will have "not a bad harvest" of grain this year despite unfavorable crops in some areas.

The grain harvest has been good in Russia, the Ukraine, Moldavia, Byelourussia and the Baltic republics, Brezhnev said in a nationally televised speech at ceremonies in Novorossisk, a Black Sea resort. He awarded the city the Order of Lenin and Gold Star medal for its heroism in the Second World War.

"The situation, however, is unfavorable in some regions of Siberia and a part of Kazakhstan," he said. "But on the whole we expect not a bad harvest of grain and other crops in the country."

Western experts have estimated the Soviet grain crop at 200 million metric tons, just below the target of 205.6 million, for 1974.

Brezhnev said Soviet industrial production grew 8.1 per cent in the first eight months of the year. He said if this pace is maintained, industry will achieve the targets of the five-year plan that ends next year.

The original target for industrial growth this year was 8.5 per cent. After a disatrous entire economy, the goal was scaled down to 6.8 per cent growth.

But he's concerned for industry

Hip-shooter has nothing to hide

By GORDON LEGGE

TORONTO (CP) — When the petroleum industry was caught in the federal-provincial crossfire over sharing of tax revenues, Jerry McAfee was one man who got upset.

It was an understandable reaction for the president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

But unlike many corporation executives, McAfee did not sit fuming in his seventh-floor office at Toronto headquarters while lieutenants were dispatched to carry the word.

Instead he mounted a series of speaking engagements in eastern Canada and the Maritimes to criticize sharply the governments and vigorously defend the industry.

"Unfortunately, the Canadian oil industry today is caught as the bone of contention in the middle of a jurisdictional tug-of-war between the federal an dvarious provincial governments," McAfee said at the time.

"Instead of working out rational solutions on an intergovernmental basis in the interests of Canada as a whole, they each take another bit out of what is already a badly bitten industry.

"While the industry, for its part has demonstrated its willingness to co-operate with every reasonable request of governments, I, for one, do not think it should be the role of industry to try to resolve conflicting, overlapping and sometimes deliberately preemptive government policies."

Talk such as that has earned Jerry McAfee the label of the "Texas-Irish hip-shooter" but also a reputation as one of the industry's most articulate and effective spokesmen.

Yet it is in the area of communications that McAfee suggests that both he and the industry could be doing a much better job.

"We've been so badly misunderstood in spite of our best efforts in the past," he said in an interview. "We've got to find a better way of getting our story over, a better way of communicating with people and with government."

In five years as Gulf Canada president, McAfee, 57, has made a point of carrying the message in his easy southern drawl to anyone who cares to listen.

He has addressed himself to the industry's traditional problems — taxation, future oil supplies, exploration, prices, the role of government — and more recently to — nationalism, the environment, inter-government disputes, and the world-wide energy crisis.

What he has said has not been all that unusual. His stand on the industry's problems are those universally voiced in the industry.

But in these uneasy times McAfee is concerned about an erosion of public confidence in big business and big government.

For his part he wants to restore confidence in business and says the industry has nothing to hide.

When Gulf's net earnings for 1973 were 58 per cent higher than the previous year and the industry was under attack for the substantial profits, he invited financial writers to discuss the results.

He said: "We've called this press conference to announce our 1973 earnings of which we are pretty darn proud. Far from being apologetic or negative, it's the other way around. We worked hard to achieve these results."

He went on to say that the figure that counted was the return on investment which was 10.1 per cent — a fair figure, he said, but by no means astounding.

Communicating, he stresses repeatedly, is the single most important factor in solving any problem.

"I don't know any way to answer questions except straight on top of the table. If I don't know, I'll tell you right off the bat. If it is something we are not prepared to talk about I'll tell you that too," he told visiting reporters.

Not that he won't dodge an uncomfortable question. Normally genial and unassuming, he will frown a bit indicating some displeasure and then, like the seasoned politician, smoothly sidestep the question with some verbal manoeuvring.

His company, 68.5 per cent owned by Gulf Oil Corp. of Pittsburgh, Pa., is he country's second largest refiner, third in terms of sales of refined products and natural gas and fourth in production of crude oil and natural gas liquids.

Gulf accounts for 20 per cent of Canadian refining capacity, has 10,000 direct employees and 7,000 outlets including bulk plants, distributorships, and service stations.

After more than 30 years as an oil man, it's hard to separate the man from the industry.

His association with Gulf began with his father who spent more than 40 years in Gulf labs as a research scientist. Jerry McAfee grew up in Port Arthur, Texas, with a Gulf refinery in his back yard.

His high school and university vacations were spent rolling barrels in that refinery for 40 cents an hour.

He received a degree in chemical engineering from University of Texas and a doctorate from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1940. He spent the war years with a small independent working on the design and start-up of aviation gasoline plants. In 1945, he returned to Port Arthur to "put down roots" with Gulf.

That lasted about five years until he eventually started moving around, spending much of his time in research and development. He holds 17 U.S. patents.

He moved to Canada in 1967 as executive vice-president and in 1969 was appointed chief executive officer.

His climb up the corporate ladder was probably in part due to two personal characteristics he exhibits. One, he is considered decisive by his colleagues, offering a "sense of purpose," and he exudes optimism.

"I'm a great believer that each individual has a certain contribution to make at a given time and a given place and it's up to us to make the best contribution we can," he said.

So when is a person successful?

"The only measure of development is within a person," McAfee said. "And if he gets satisfaction, genuine satisfaction, out of what he is doing then he is a success, no matter what his particular role in life turns out to be.

"The measure of a man's success is the degree to which deep down in his heart he has been of some service to his fellow man."

Unless a person can feel at the end of the day he has done something for other people, that person might as well have not got up in the morning, McAfee said.

Head down, he pauses for reflection and then adds with a wide grin: "It's a great business to be in and I wouldn't be anywhere else."

Chrysler's 75s

Up, up and up

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Friday it would have little choice but to raise prices several times during the 1975 model year on top of an expected $400 to $500 introductory price boost this fall.

Company Chairman Lynn Townsend said there would be "repricing, probably several times, during the model year" as long as costs continue to rise.

Unlike General Motors and Ford Motor Co., Chrysler hasn't said exactly how much it plans to increase prices this fall, but Townsend said the boost will be "right in the ballpark" with the firm's two chief competitors.

BOND WEEK

Crossroads pause

TORONTO (CP) — Activity on the bond market continued to be mixed this week as investors stand at the crossroads between rampant inflation and a severe recession.

The short end of the market was unchanged while mid- and long-term issues gained about one-quarter point. Provincial and corporate issues were up about one-quarter point.

Dealers said the main activity consisted of liquidating unsold balances of new issues.

The process was more difficult because of the apathetic mood dominating the market before Labor Day.

They said current Canadian monetary policy indicating a high plateau for interest rates offers two alternatives: either rampant inflation or severe recession capable of producing major movements up or down respectively.

Day-to-day money was available at 8½ per cent. Three-month treasury bills were traded at an average of 9.10 per cent, unchanged from the previous week, and six-month bills at 9.20 per cent, also unchanged.

Barnsley must remain

BARNSLEY, England (Reuter) — Defence Secretary Roy Mason demanded this week that the legendary brewery of this Yorkshire mining town be kept open because the quality of Britain's beer must be preserved.

Mason said modern brewers are "thrusting upon the consumer a form of alcoholic fizz . . . just a cold, insipid, clinical version of traditional bitter beer."

He issued his call to save the Barnsley Brewery through a group known as Campaign for Real Ale, which maintains that the traditional British pint of beer is in danger of extinction as brewers substitute cheaper chemical processes for the proper aging of beer in the barrel.

To South Africa, Rhodesia has already 'gone black'

the unpreparedness of the Afrikaner mentally to meet them with anything else. The Afrikanner reaction to political change farther north is to dig in

Eighty years ago, as Cecil Rhodes and Dr. Starr Jameson founded Rhodesia, thus blocking Boer expansion north from the Transvaal, the great Boer leader, Paul Kruger, complained that the British were "trying to shut up the Boers in a kraal (corral)."

Today, as two major bastions of white supremacy, Portugal's Angola and Mozambique, are being inexorably dismantled, and a third bastion, Rhodesia, is lapped about on three sides by African guerrillas toting communist-made automatic rifles and rocket launchers, Kruger's descendants are seeing the kraal closed, not by their rivals but by people they have turned into their deadly enemies.

Can they really seal themselves off behind a screen of tanks, guns, jet planes and electronic gear and let the rest of the world go by, indefinitely? It seems less and less likely.

In the first place, Mozambique has been signed over to Frelimo, the Mozambique Liberation Front, and non South Africa will have to defend a 2,000-mile border with black Africa. But more than that, it seems probable that both Rhodesia and South Africa will soon have to face a serious upsurge of domestic racial violence.

This would spring from the black fury, matured over many years, at the shocking discrimination under which they live, freshly inflamed by the heady example of African nationalist victories in nearby Portuguese Africa. In such a black-white confrontation, African moderates and white liberals would very likely be swept to political oblivion.

What, on the military front, is the situation? To the northeast Portugal's war with Frelimo is clearly over. Frelimo's leaders have asked General Antonio de Spinola and his Armed Forces Movement in Lisbon to leave Portuguese troops in Mozambique to assist a peaceful transfer of power.

By now there is probably nothing that anyone can do to prevent this Frelimo takeover. One can sympathize with whites who want multiparty democracy instead. But, as Frelimo controls the guns and possibly the majority of African support, that ideal is unattainable.

After 400 years of Portugal's "civilizing mission," Mozambique's blacks were still treated by whites as third-rate citizens. Their trust in whites is non-existent, and Frelimo promises them majority rule, jobs and a yearned-for dignity.

The white bankers, shopkeepers and garage owners in Beira and Lourenco Marques who talk boldly of raising a mercenary army to force Frelimo to accept democracy seem dangerously naive. Essentially, they are prepared to kill Africans in order to maintain white economic supremacy.

So the least bloody, if not ideal, solution would be a smooth Frelimo takeover. With victory, Frelimo's leadership, now a mixture of ideologists an dorthodox African nationalists of the Kenneth Kaunda and Julius Nyerere stamp, could mellow into nonalignment and limited socialism.

But it is likely that Rhodesia will soon be coping with a hostile eastern frontier of virtually indefensible length.

Rhodesian African nationalists, the ZANU guerrillas, are already operating 30 miles from Salisbury. Thousands of tribal Africans are being uprooted by the Smith government and corralled into fortified villages to protect them, it is said, from ZANU, but actually to stop them collaborating with, and harboring, ZANU guerrillas.

A disrupting military callup is causing an exodus of exactly the sort of white Rhodesian that Prime Minister Ian Smith most needs — the young.

Because of a shortage of white manpower, half the Rhodesian army will soon be black — a risky state of affairs.

Economically, things look even shakier. Salisbury's sleek, well-scrubbed look is misleading. Rhodesian businessmen are appalled by the imminent economic effects of the fall of Mozambique to African nationalism. The closing of the ports of Beira and Lourenco Marques to Rhodesian imports and exports could itself be catastrophic.

In the minds of the South African government, Rhodesia has been to all intends and purposes written off: it has already, in the opinion of

Vorster's planners, "gone black."

So, of course, has Angola. But in Angola immense unexploited wealth could produce an international political nightmare, as well as an ultimate economic blessing for someone. Oil and diamonds are just the things to convince the superpowers (or even ordinary powers) that the gamble of intervention is worth the risk.

Mozambique has only one nationalist organization, Frelimo. The several Angolan liberation groups are already finding various powerful backers; the danger of heavily armed factions springing up, each supported militarily and financially from outside, is there.

The whites I met in Angola, whether rich or poor, seem determined to be good Angolans, not simply expatriate Portuguese. They say bluntly that they are ready to live under a majority black government.

In Rhodesia the patriotic element is largely missing. Most Rhodesian whites are postwar, urban British immigrants with an attachment to the languorous, twenties-style way of life, the swimming pool, the two cars and the houseboys.

Old Rhodesian settlers, tanned farmers and stolid mining engineers, think that, if terrorist bombs begin to go off, those glossy Rhodesian suburbs will empty quickly.

It is partly this that makes Vorster keep urging Smith to reach a settlement with his African majority. Smith, he thinks, should stop stalling and accept ultimate majority rule.

According to the pragmatic Vorster, Smith should have a stab at placating his blacks, because South Africa is not going to waste much time and cash in defending Smith.

But the signs are that Smith is not going to give nearly enough to take the steam out of African militants. The moderates of the African National Council, led by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, are on the point of being overtaken by more forceful men who will concentrate on guns to make their point, not negotiations.

South Africans think it likely that force will shift Smith. ZANU terror is obviously going to intensify. A Rhodesian army of only 5,000 men will soon be spread impossibly thinly from Botswana to southern Mozambique.

In South Africa itself effects of this African advance are being physically felt. Farmers in the north Transvaal are putting anti-grenade and rocket screens over their windows, as Rhodesian farmers did many months ago. Army units are taking over the Caprivi Strip in South West Africa (between the borders of Zambia; Botswana and Rhodesia). Armored vehicles crouch among the lions in the Kruger National Park.

But while urging Smith to settle, what is the Vorster government doing to placate its Africans? Nothing that one can see. The black-white gulf is a Grand Canyon of mistrust.

"You can have impeccable anti-apartheid credentials," a liberal Afrikaner told me. "You can be watched by the police, you can have been jailed or banned by the government — young blacks don't care. They won't have anything to do with you now, because you're white. The country has never seen this before."

White South Africans now speak nervously of deep labor unrest. And that, too, is unprecedented.

All strikes are illegal. Yet, there have been 193 in the last two and a half years, in which 100,000 Africans have registered their discontent, much of it based on the difference between white and black wages. In general manufacturing, whites average $100 monthly, blacks $18, in textiles, white $120 and blacks $12.

South Africa has 5,250,000 African workers. It is an industrial society, with a complex economy, and it makes some people very rich. Such a society could be very seriously damaged by any kind of major labor upheaval.

Such an upheaval is possible. The strikes show that the black labor force is no longer a soulless mass to be exploited. Particularly as the exhilirating news of the advance of African nationalism wings across those defences on South Africa's northern borders into the homes of millions of blacks, who have little enough to inspire them.

The inexorably tragic look of the future in South Africa is daunting. So is the apparent impossibility of compromise. The African guerrilla advance can hardly be stopped from seeping through into bits of South Africa.

An influential African leader, Chief Mangope, made an impassioned plea to white South African businessmen last month. "Our black sorrow is a sorrow beyond words and only equalled by our intense impatience," he said. "The black skin is still daily trodden into the dust, hundreds and thousands of times. Don't make us use the sword."

Cuban patchup in sight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Cuban puzzle is beginning to fall into place, and when all pieces mesh later this fall, the Organization of American States will probably have ended its Cuban quarantine and the United States and Cuba could be beginning to patch up their differences.

Perhaps the most interesting piece of this diplomatic jigsaw is the report by diplomatic sources in Washington that high-level Cuban and American officials have met in Berne, Switzerland.

White House and state department officials said they had no knowledge of such a meeting. But their denial had all the appearance of a pro forma one, and the report reflects a pattern of events that have been building up since President Ford took office a month ago.

Three Latin American governments — Costa Rica, Colombia and Venezuela — have been carrying out a quiet diplomatic campaign to lift the diplomatic and economic sanctions imposed on Cuba by the OAS in 1964.

That campaign may succeed by Nov. 11 when Western Hemisphere foreign ministers, including State Secretary Henry Kissinger, will meet in Quito, Ecuador, at the call of the OAS council, to decide the fate of the embargo.

When the drive to lift the sanctions began, the U.S. government was headed by Richard Nixon, considered a hard-liner on Cuba. Ford has been less adamantly opposed to a change of status.

The day after Ford said the United States would act in concert with the OAS on the Cuban matter, Mexico's Foreign Secretary Emilio Rabasa — who has been in close contact with both Prime Minister Fidel Castro and Kissinger this year — met with Ford and Kissinger.

He said that, if asked, Mexico would be happy to act as intermediary between Havana and Washington.

Recall House to solve grain crisis—John D

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Diefenbaker said Saturday Parliament should be recalled to end the Vancouver grain handlers work stoppage which he said is costing Canada markets abroad.

But the former Prairie Conservative prime minister spoke against giving the handlers the full recommendations of the Perry report as advocated by the federal government.

He said at a news conference that granting the full amount recommended in the federal conciliation report by Neil Perry would be inflationary and would set off a round of wage demands by unions across Canada.

He said Labor Minister John Munro is in an impossible position because the federal government has said if the grain companies do not settle on the basis of the Perry report Parliament will force them to.

"Never was there a more serious mistake made," Diefenbaker said, adding that the federal statement stopped all negotiations.

Saying that Parliament should have been called four weeks ago to prevent a handlers work stoppage, he said there must come a time when the national economic interest takes priority over a labor dispute.

He said Canada has lost grain contracts totalling 75 million bushels because of the work stoppage here and "these losses cannot be retrieved."

Parliament should impose a return to work, he said, and should give the grain handlers "some reasonable increase."

$120 million over budget

Victoria Ald. Malcolm Anderson said Saturday reports that provincial welfare costs are running about $120 million over budget this year could be just the "tip of the iceberg."

"When the government finally admits to the real costs," he said, the amount over budget could be far more than $120 million.

Anderson had beeen quoted as saying the higher welfare costs could cost Victoria at least $500,000 more this year than the $5 million budgeted.

But he later told The Colonist his estimate was based on the increase in Vancouver's welfare costs and he had not checked his estimate with the city controller.

He was commenting on Vancouver reports that welfare costs this year are expected to exceed the $264.5 million budgeted by about $120 million.

The city pays about 15 per cent of local welfare payments, Anderson said.

Reports that welfare spending is over-budget indicate the government has no control over welfare costs and "it's scandalous," he said.

Costs of administering the welfare system have "doubled,' he claimed, and there are "vast numbers who still qualify (for welfare) under loose rules."

Ald. Percy Frampton said the increase "will certainly affect the city" because increased costs will have to be passed on to the taxpayers.

The welfare system is "so good" that recipients ask: "What the hell is the use of working," he claimed.

"I know people on welfare that live almost as well as I do," Frampton said.

Anderson asked how welfare costs could be so high when "want ad pages are filled with jobs going begging."

If social assistance costs are as high as they are in "a good year", think how high they will be when the economy is not as strong, he said.

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi was unavailable for comment.

Erotic sculptures a feature of temples

KHAJURAHO, India — The 1970s have been described by many Canadians as liberal years.

They say, for example, it is a time for unabashed sexuality and freedom in motion pictures, books and the arts. And in everyday life.

This so-called liberation, of course, disturbs some people. They point to the downtown areas of major Canadian cities such as Montreal, Toronto or Vancouver — scorning the honkey-tonk atmosphere of porno theatres, body-rub parlors and book stores.

But controversy over such issues is hardly new. And, in fact, some of the most sensuous works of art can be found 500 years before Columbus discovered America.

Khajuraho, in north-central India, is a classic case. It flourished from the 9th to 13th century as the religious and political capital of the Chandella kings before being destroyed under a Moslem invasion. Khajuraho is now just a small, unimportant village. But the temples of the Chandella kings remain (20 of an original 85) built with a few exceptions between 950 to 1050.

The sculptures in these temples depict feasting, music and dancing — and handsome men and voluptuous women immortalized in stone for all to see in the most intimate and varied postures of sensual love. There is probably no equivalent in the world to these sculptures. For the mature adult, a trip to Khajuraho can be a most rewarding artistic and spiritual experience. Here are human and divine forms throbbing with life, all carved with great skill. In fact, they are masterpieces. And all these results were achieved in just 100 years — a rather remarkable feat.

But why this passion for building such temples with the intricate carvings? Basically, India was extremely well off at this time. People had riches, the land bore plenty of food, and all amenities for the good life were there. The seclusion of women which was to follow in other rules was unheard of at the time. People dressed in richly ornamented clothing, and their biggest worry was in getting to all the fairs, hunts, feasts and music and dancing festivals which went on. Thus, the climate was perfect for creative efforts — and temple building came to the fore as the major form.

The Chandellas ruled for five centuries before being overcome by Mahmud the Turk, who began the Holy War against the "idolaters" of India in 1100. By 1200, the Sultans of Delhi had complete rule over the once glorious and fun-loving Chandella kingdom.

The temples were built as a sort of haven for the gods by the Chandella kings. There are no other temples like them in any other part of India, even though they are dedicated to such deities as Siva, Vishnu and the Jain Tirthankaras (perfect souls). Each temple stands on a high platform. The larger shrines have a central sanctuary for the honoured god and one more at each corner for the lesser deities. But the most noteworthy aspect of the Khajuraho temple is the shikara, or spire, which is surrounded and flanked by a number of similar towers which appear to push each other toward the sky.

The sculptures which have given Khajuraho its reputation are the "mithuna couples", those "rioting figures of love and lust". These figures are carved out in minute detail.

They were formed because of the Tantric doctrine, a popular cult during Chandella times. It emphasized the woman as the dominant principle of creation and taught that the senses are the equal of the spirit so that their imaginative indulgence could lead to heaven as well as more vigorous paths.

But one must remember that although the carvings of the mithuna groups are sensual, many do portray the tenderness and tranquility of human love fulfilled.

The temples are in three groups in an area of about eight square miles. The largest and most important is the western group, comprising the oldest and largest temples. The eastern group are comprised of Brahman and Jain shrines situated close to the present Khajuraho village. The southern group are a mile south of the village, but only two temples remain. However, they are worth the visit.

STAMP PACKET

Collector interest high

By LESLIE DREW
Colonist Staff Writer

Collector interest in the Broken Dollar variety of Die 1 of the latest Canadian $1 stamp depicting Vancouver appears to be unflagging, judging from auction catalogues.

Harnat has some superb examples coming up at its public auction in Toronto Sept. 29, and the estimated cash value, which the firm says is meant to represent the true market value, is illuminating.

For a vertical pair, one with the variety, the ECV is given as $10 to $20 plus; a block of four, one with the variety, rates an TCV of $20 to $30, and a horizontal strip of four, three with the Broken Dollar variety and one with the Broken Dollar and dot after Postes, carries an ECV of between $75 and $100. All have never been hinged.

Two in set of four due Sept. 23

Total printing of the four additional 8-cent Olympic commemoratives in the Keeping Fit series, to be issued Sept. 23, will be 60 million.

The issue uses the latent or hidden image engraving technique introduced with the first Olympic commemoratives March 22 (the image of the 1976 Olympic Games symbol becomes visible when the stamp is held obliquely toward a lightsource), and this time the stamps are red-colored, with four designs setenant on one sheet, depicting showshoeing, skiing, skating and curling.

Mexican wine improved

By STAN DELAPLANE

MEXICO CITY — At 7400 breath-taking feet, Mexico City is a town where you sit down a lot. Fortunately it's flat. If it was hilly we'd never make it.

There are nine million people officially — they say it's closer to ten really. The Government sends out propaganda to the back country: Don't come to Mexico City! It's healthier where you are! (But as the old song goes: "How you Going to Keep Them Down on the Farm . . .?") Indians on burro economy point their sandals toward the Big Town.

It used to be the smoggiest city in the world but it seems somewhat better — to me. Mexican wine has improved. (It had no way to go but up so it did. France needn't worry though.)

Mexican beer as always, the best outside of Germany.

EXCELLENT restaurants! The Rivoli in the touristy Pink Zone, distinguished, fine food service, is far and away the Three Star.

You MUST go to Anderson's on the Reforma. Musical. Unusual list of food. It's part of the group that runs El Shrimp Bucket in Mazatlan — and a half a dozen others in the resort towns of Mexico.

Below the city the Metro runs swiftly and silently on rubber tires: 8c a ride. It saved the city from an unmovable crush of traffic. CLEAN stations with gay arcades of shops. Like Montreal.

There is still much traffic above ground. Volkswagen yellow metered cabs always filled. Orange cabs (with hooded meters) — the price is argued by you and the driver beforehand — lined up before each tourist hotel.

These cabs get three times the metered rate: Pink Zone to the main square, $2.40. Yellow cabs, 80c. (Mexicans don't tip cab drivers.)

Tourist hotels run around $24. Mexican rum-and-coca cola, $1.60. American cigarettes (made in Mexico) are marked 40c on the mackage. But I haven't found anyone who sells them under 80c.

Travel Tips

I've been afraid to ask for Scotch. I think the nudge is $3 on the bottom line.

"We're thinking of driving down to Mexico . . ."

I haven't driven in Mexico for a long time so I rented a car in Guadalajara. On the new toll highway it's a breeze — but you miss the colorful towns of Mexican country life. On the old free roads, I was always behind a line of slow trucks gulping diesel exhaust.

Gas is 60c. There's a LOT of traffic. I got to Mexico City nerved up and worn out. And I think the plane would have been cheaper.

You have to drive in Mexico City a lot before you can do it comfortably. Better to learn the Metro. Cheapest and fastest. Or the route we all use the most — Chapultepec Park down Paseo de la Reforma to Zocalo, the great square — take the pesero.

The pesero loads his cab wherever somebody waves him down. Lets off each passenger anywhere along the route. (Used to charge a peso — 8c — but inflation's put it up to 2.)

You will know the pesero because he waves his fingers out the side. Two fingers up, he's going where you want to go. Three fingers, he's branching off half way down.

"Have they fixed up the water so you can drink it in Mexico?" The sign in my room at the El Presidente says don't use tap water. But they've got a separate faucet marked "Purified ice water."

". . . if we can get TV?"

My room has TV. There are good Mexican stations. Pro football comes in — with A Mexican announcer calling the plays in Spanish and sometimes wonderfully off. For $10 a month, residents get cable television with all channels piped in from the States.

"Can we use credit cards?"

I haven't seen ANY shop or restaurant in the tourist zone that doesn't take EVERY card. You can charge phone calls on your Ma Bell card.

Cognac barrels eaten by flames

COGNAC, France (AP) — Thousands of gallons of cognac went up in flames in a fire in the aging cellars of the House of Martell, one of France's largest distillers.

Flames dozens of feet high rose from the buildings, but firemen were unable to approach the scene because of the intense heat. Barrels of cognac exploded throughout the morning.

Cabbage rots in fields for lack of pickers

And some Peninsula farmers are blaming federal government immigration policy, welfare programs, and unemployment insurance for the shortage of fruit and vegetable pickers.

The labor shortage cost him about 25 per cent of his crop this season, he claimed.

He said the government "should take these long-haired hippies and instead of paying them welfare, make them go to work. Work or starve."

Besides welfare and unemployment insurance, Ratcliffe complained that farmers can't compete for reliable help because there are "too many jobs paying too much money."

"When I started out I was able to hire girls 14 to 22 years old who were good personnel. Now all we get are punks, 11 to 16-year-olds whose mothers want us to babysit."

He added that some vegetable growers are lucky enough to hire East Indian immigrants, but the government has cut off new immigrants.

S. R. Purdy, manager of Canada Manpower in Victoria, took exception to farmers' criticism of give-away programs.

He said Manpower started an in-depth counselling program in June and as a result 15 welfare families are moving to jobs outside Victoria.

And a minimum of eight persons receiving unemployment insurance are interviewed every day and given jobs if they want to work, or taken off insurance benefits if they don't.

He added he had received no complaints from local farmers and no requests for immigrant labor.

Tom Michell, a director of the Saanich Fruit Growers Association, and an executive of the Island Vegetable Association, said some growers of cabbage and other vegetables are suffering from the labor shortage now, and potato growers will probably be added to the list when that crop has to be stored.

"We've been getting lots of calls from millhands looking for work because of the strike, but I'm disappointed that they are leaving the East Indians out," he added, referring to government immigration policies.

Stan Klubi, president of Saanich Fruit Growers, said farmers are also plagued by a decline in labor "quality."

He said students and youngsters are not prepared for outdoor work in summer heat and are easily discouraged, although good pickers can earn more than $20 a day.

St. Aidan's United gets new associate minister

Rev. Clare Holmes will be installed as associate minister of St. Aidan's United Church at an induction service and reception in the church at Richmond and Cedar Hill Crossroad at 7:30 p.m. today.

He will share the ministry of the 700-family congregation with the present minister, Rev. Rae Allan.

Holmes will also serve for one-third of his time in a team ministry at the University of Victoria. He will share offices at 103 Lansdowne Commons block with Rev. Marlowe Anderson, Anglican, and Rev. Leo Robert, Roman Catholic.

Holmes, a native of Vancouver, comes to Victoria after five years as minister with the Port McNeill Anglican-United Fellowship.

Previous to the Vancouver Island charge he ministered for five years at Lynn Lake, Man.

Two Esquimalt women stabbed 40 and 29 times

By STEPHEN BREWER
Colonist Reporter

As the morbid and curious looked on, Esquimalt police continued their search Saturday for clues which might lead them to the "miniature Jack the Ripper" who had murdered two women the day before.

Only the Closed sign in the window of Ray's Food Market, and the swarm of tired, anxious policemen inside, hinted at the bizarre double murder which had taken place there the afternoon before.

An RCMP tracking dog — flown in from Vancouver for the investigation — sniffed disinterestedly in the weeds around the 1325 Esquimalt Road corner grocery.

In his office two blocks down the street, Esquimalt Police Chief Arthur Burton talked wearily of his department's search for the "brutal, vicious" murderer, the "miniature Jack the Ripper" who had killed Jane Isabel Plume, 51, of 1153 Munro, and Florence Isabel Bevan, 62, of 1324 Lyall, sometime between 2:05 and 2:30 p.m. the day before.

The clues were slim.

Police were searching for a man reported to have been in the store at 2:05 p.m., when the last witness they have so far interviewed had left it.

The man — described as being between 5'9" and 5'10", in his early 20s, clean-shaven and with dark hair — was heard talking to Mrs. Plume about a can of shrimp when the witness left.

What role, if any, that man had played in the mystery surrounding the murders was unclear, even to Burton.

In disbelieving tones, the chief talked of the murders.

One woman had been stabbed 40 times, the other 29; both had been beaten.

"He left virtually no clues," Burton mourned.

Every lead is being checked — a man in Hope was questioned Saturday, but police have been unable to place him any closer to Esquimalt than Gabriola Island the day of the killings.

"Every kook" on the lower end of Vancouver Island was being questioned, checked and checked again, Burton said.

Calls were going out to any city in North America where similar crimes had been committed in the last few years.

Lead after lead has turned up nothing.

"What set him off? What was it," Burton asked.

"Was this some guy off the street, going through the till when he was surprised, who panicked and stabbed them with a knife from his rucksack?

"Or was it something in their family backgrounds, some grudge?"

But questions were all the police had: The only clues were a single bloody footprint on the floor of the store and the theft of about $80 from the cash register and one woman's watch.

Nothing else made sense; everything else raised new questions, not answers.

Why was there no sign of a struggle in the tiny, crowded storeroom where the murders had taken place?

Where was the weapon used in the savage, brutal attacks?

Why was one of the bodies warmer than the other when police arrived on the scene?

Who was the grey-haired man reported to have unlocked the store's door just after 2 p.m. — was he the murderer?

Or was he an innocent passerby, too frightened by the scene of carnage he witnessed inside to do anything but flee?

Did he even exist?

In a house two doors from Ray's Market, an anxious young woman asked similar questions.

In hushed tones, she talked of the surrealistic fear which had settled suddenly, unexpectedly on her neighborhood, a place where few people had ever bothered to lock the doors — before Friday.

"I'm shocked . . . and scared.

"The guy must have been nuts to go in there and kill those women for a lousy 80 bucks.

"It's scary to think he's still out there, loose.

"It makes me sick . . . and scares hell out of me.

"I can't help thinking it happened less than 100 yards from my front door, that I had just been in there, that I go there every day.

"I can't help thinking how close I might have come to being one of those women on the floor."

And, she wondered, why?

"Why would anyone pick them? It couldn't have been anyone with a grudge against them — no one could have had a grudge against them."

Why were two seemingly inoffensive women selected as the victims for the most bizarre crime to rock Esquimalt in 15 years?

The question seemed to be on everyone's lips.

But late Saturday, only one man knew for sure.

"When we find the man who can answer that question, we'll have found the answer to all the questions," a weary policeman said.

"We'll have found the man who did it."

Kay Lines, at table, talks to James Bay residents

James Bay development heading for a showdown

City council will have "the last say" on how $2 million in federal Neighborhood Improvement Program funds is spent in James Bay and Victoria West, Ald. P. J. Frampton said Saturday.

Frampton, chairman of the city's neighborhood, housing, and community services committee, outlined council's position following a meeting held by the James Bay N.I.P. committee to release the findings of a community survey.

Completed last week, the door-to-door survey of 1,600 of the area's 5,284 residences showed most people favored the funds being used for a recreational centre, followed closely by the acquisition of land for low-cost duplex or small cluster housing.

Frampton said the James Bay survey presented "good ideas" but added: "There are other ways of getting money for housing."

He said council would likely look at specific areas within James Bay, rather than a community-wide program, to benefit from the project, funded 50 per cent federally with the province and city equally sharing the rest.

He said community participation was necessary to qualify for the federal project but council would decide on the final spending, using "our own good judgment."

Following the meeting, attended by almost 300 people, Kay Lines of the James Bay N.I.P. committee said council should be prepared to act upon the survey's major recommendations.

During the two-hour meeting, she said her committee would recommend the entire community be a Neighborhood Improvement Area to allow everyone a chance at the home-improvement loans.

Further tensions between the committee and the city surfaced at the meeting when some James Bay residents complained they had not been included in the survey.

"It was almost a miracle that the survey was completed in six weeks," Lines told the meeting.

The committee had an Aug. 31 deadline for the survey in order to present its findings to council, which must meet the Nov. 31 federal deadline.

Although the city knew of the grants last March, Lines said her committee only learned two months ago that the funds would be available.

Frampton told the meeting the city had originally thought it would handle the programs.

Frampton rejected a charge by Lines that city administrative costs for the project were eating up the funds that should be used in the community.

He said the city would need to hire an additional planner to help in these projects. This and other administrative costs, he said, "may well be the city's contribution to the project."

Landlords able to raise rents above 8 per cent

By LORRAINE ATHERTON
Colonist Reporter

Landlords will be able to raise rents above government guidelines, beginning Oct. 1, unless tenants complain, B.C. Rentalsman Barrie Clark has announced.

He said a new rent increase limit will be set Sept. 16 and take effect Oct. 1, when most sections of the new Landlord and Tenant Act will be proclaimed.

Present ceiling is 8 per cent.

But landlords will be permitted to raise rents as high as they wish unless a tenant makes a formal appeal within 30 days.

"If there is no appeal, the increase will be legal under the act," Clark said.

The act originally placed the onus on landlords to file appeals if they wished to raise rents above the provincial limit.

Now a landlord will not have to open his books and justify rent increases unless a tenant files a complaint.

Tenants will not have the right of appeal if the increase is less than or equal to the provincial limit.

Jim Nelson, manager of Victoria Rental Aid Bureau, Saturday called the new regulations "a step backward," and said the NDP government had made a mistake in hiring Clark, a former Liberal MLA, as rentalsman.

The new regulations are biased toward landlords because few tenants will risk eviction to place a complaint, Nelson said.

"Tenants in Victoria know there is no place else to go, so they'll pay whatever landlords ask.

"Pensioners and low-income families will have a hard time," he added.

Gordon Reeson, president of Victoria Apartment Owners Association, said he could not predict what effect the new regulations will have.

Benefit to landlords will depend on how realistic Clark's new rent increase limit is, and how sympathetic the rentalsman is to landlords trying to keep up with rising costs.

Under the act, landlords are still required to give tenants three months' notice of rent increases, and rents may not be increased more than once a year.

The change will probably reduce the number of appeals handled by the rentalsman office, Victoria Landlord and Tenant Bureau manager Basil Wallace said.

"I know of over 150 landlords in the area who are in a financial bind because of the 8 per cent rent freeze. They had been decent to their tenants and not raised rents for two to four years, and now are rapped by rising costs," he said.

After Oct. 1, they will not be required to file appeals with the rentalsman if their tenants agree to rent increases.

QUALICUM BEACH — Nanaimo Region Board is contributing $7,500 toward the operation of the village's waste disposal site. Many residents from outside the village are using the village garbage dump, and council will continue to share the operating cost with the board in 1975.

Murder charge laid in Saanich shooting

Saanich police have charged Roland Henry Bird, 35, with murder following the shooting death Thursday of Mrs. Marlene Hutcheon, 34, at the 1238 Oakmount house where they both lived.

Bird, also known as Roland Tobacco, is under 24-hour police guard in Royal Jubilee Hospital where he is recuperating from a gunshot wound.

Both Bird and Mrs. Hutcheon were found by police Thursday afternoon in the Oakmount residence.

In Victoria Provincial Court Saturday, Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre was advised of Bird's arrest but no charge was read.

Truck drivers, firms trying to settle today

Representatives of 150 striking truck drivers and transport companies expect to meet in Duncan today in an effort to end a five-day strike that has put over 900 persons out of work on Vancouver Island.

The meeting, originally scheduled for Friday, was cancelled after management negotiators were unable to attend.

Hugh Robinson, vice-president of Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America, said Saturday members are eager to settle the matter as soon as possible.

NDPer uncovers all the dirt

This German baron forced into hiding

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

This isn't easy, but unless I make a full confession now, somebody will find me out sooner or later.

Ever since the provincial government brought in the Islands Trust Act, I've had sleepless nights because of a feeling the legislation was aimed straight at me.

When the act was introduced in the Legislature last spring, an anonymous writer told readers of the NDP's weekly newsletter the reasons behind the legislation.

It was to protect the beautiful Gulf Islands from exploitation by "Hong Kong sweatshop operators, California surgeons and German barons."

There you are, I thought. Game over.

You see, until that point, I thought I had managed to cleverly conceal my ownership of 2,052,000 square inches of Gulf Islands waterfront land.

And then, suddenly, this bit about German barons exploiting the Gulf Islands.

I began to smell a rat. This chap, whoever he was, knew something.

Admittedly, I'm not a nobleman. Somewhere along the line my forefathers missed the boat when the powers that be separated the barons from the peasants.

But I was born in Germany and came to Canada a mere 17 years ago.

To cover my tracks, I even took out Canadian citizenship, but the newsletter writer had apparently uncovered all the dirt.

Here I was, a German, sitting on a 50-by-285-foot estate on the foreshore of this island.

As is often the case with rapacious entrepreneurs, interested only in ripoff profits, I had never visited my holding.

Therefore, very understandably so, the newsletter writer scared the living daylight out of me, and I feel I can only redeem myself by confessing my crime.

Oh yes, I tried to cover the whole thing up earlier this year, by putting the property on the market.

But it didn't sell. Too hot, I guess.

So all I can do now is regret my ruthless action, hang onto the land, and, someday, retire on it.

Unless, of course, I can find a German baron willing to take it off my hands, or a California surgeon, or a Hong Kong sweatshop operator.

Meanwhile, I'll stay in hiding.

Tahsis mill goes on short week

TAHSIS — Frank Grobb, vice-president of Tahsis Co. Ltd., said that because of the depressed world lumber market and a shortage of logs, the company's main sawmill here will go to a four-day work week, starting Monday.

Grobb said there won't be any layoffs among the mill's 525 workers, but warned production is dependent on sales, which are poor and could get worse.

Victoria drivers 'subsidize others'

Drivers in Greater Victoria will be subsidizing motorists in higher-risk regions of the province under a proposed Autoplan scheme, a director of the Victoria Insurance Agents Association charged Saturday night.

The plan to equalize automobile insurance premiums by paying British Columbia drivers outside the Greater Victoria region a $30 to $40 subsidy "makes good political sense but it's not good underwriting," Ted Smith said in a telephone interview.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said it would be "grossly unfair for a city with a substantially lower accident frequency to subsidize less careful drivers." Auto insurance rates in the Victoria area are the lowest in B.C.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke, vice-chairman of the Insurance Corporation of B.C., said the reduction, to take effect next year, will be partly financed from gasoline royalties.

The government shouldn't be using higher tax revenues as a "bloodbank for ICBC," the mayor said.

"It's very, very basic primitive politics. The government is buying people off by lowering the premiums," Pollen charged.

Echoing Pollen's statement, B.C. Conservative leader, Dr. Scott Wallace said the reduction is "the biggest political con-game that the NDP has had the nerve to try."

"If people in private enterprise did what the government is doing, they'd be in jail," the Oak Bay MLA claimed.

And making Victoria drivers pay the same premiums as motorists in higher-risk areas "contradicts the basic principles of insurance," the Conservative leader added.

Instead of using higher gasoline royalties to reduce insurance premiums, the government should lower the price of gasoline, Wallace suggested.

Jim Gorst, Esquimalt NDP MLA, said the government is running "an honest effort to equalize auto insurance charges."

People contributing to the provincial economy in northern B.C., where rates are generally higher, are "entitled to reasonably equal auto insurance charges," Gorst said.

Lions take humiliating setback after enjoying early success

VANCOUVER — It figured to be a game that could turn the season around for B.C. Lions, and when it was over the 30,187 fans who showed up at Empire Stadium Saturday night must have felt that it had.

Impressive winners over Edmonton Eskimos in their last game, the Lions could perhaps have found the poise and maturity they've been seeking had they been able to follow it up with a win over Saskatchewan Roughriders. Instead, they collapsed completely in the last 25 minutes and absorbed a shattering 38-16 setback.

Defeat will be the harder to forget in that it came after the Lions had dominated the first half and were 16-0 leaders with five minutes gone in the third quarter.

It was right after Ivan MacMillan, who didn't miss in this one, had kicked his third field goal to make it 16-0 that Ron Lancaster and George Reed finally got things started.

Lancaster, who had completed 10 passes in the first half but for only 74 yards, threw three touchdown passes, and Reed, who had netted only 14 yards rushing in the first two quarters, kept the suddenly-inept B.C. defence loose by rambling for 128 yards in the last 25 minutes.

Looking like a club that didn't have a chance after MacMillan had made his third three-pointer, Riders started modestly enough as Reed ran for six yards, and then for five to get a first down.

Four plays later, Riders had their first touchdown. Tom Campana capped the six-play, 75-yard march by getting behind defence backs in the end zone, and Lancaster did the rest, evading eager pursuers and lofting a long pass to get the last 46 yards in one throw.

The score came at 5:26 of the third quarter, and it looked for a few minutes as if the Lions might regain control. But a fired-up Saskatchewan defence kept them from getting out of their own zone, and then Reed suddenly rekindled things by breaking through for 22 yards on a draw play.

Lions made their last gesture of defiance there, Reed getting thrown for a seven-yard loss by the blitzing Dan Dever. But the play didn't turn things around. Lancaster combined with Steve Molnar for a second-down pass play which brought 31 yards, and the rout was on.

Seven plays later, Lancaster completed a second touchdown march with a 10-yard pass to Campana, again behind defenders in the end zone.

The score came 71 seconds into a fourth quarter which produced 31 Saskatchewan points as the Lions completely lost their poise.

They were penalized for rough play on the convert which brought the score to 16-14, but Monroe Eley came from well inside the end zone to run the kickoff out to the 24-yard line. And when Lou Harris got away for 12 yards, there was rekindled hope among the fans.

However, quarterback Don Moorhead, who had played a strong first half, flustered under the pressure. On the next play, he unloaded after being chased back and Steve Smear made an easy interception.

Lancaster exploited the situation immediately, throwing on the first play after the changeover and connecting with Steve Mazurak for a 44-yard scoring play only 34 seconds after Campana had scored.

Moorhead, again chased back, was intercepted on the first play after the return of the kickoff, but the Lions managed to stay in contention until less than two minutes from time.

With Riders needing only a field goal to wrap it up, the Lions intercepted Lancaster twice in the next 10 minutes. But Johnny Musso fumbled on a third-and-one try, the Riders got the ball back only 33 yards away, and the floodgates finally burst.

Brian Berg kicked a 21-yard field goal at 13:15. Riders got the ball back almost immediately and Reed, who had a 25-yard jaunt in the march, went over from six yards at 13:59. Finally, Ken McEachern picked off a pass thrown by Karl Douglas and ran 32 yards to score at 14:37, completing a surge in which the Riders got 17 points in 82 seconds.

Led by tackle Garrett Hunsperger, the B.C. defence was outstanding in the first half. It kept Reed under control, twice throwing him for losses and causing him to fumble once, and it forced Lancaster to hurry his throws and to stay with short passes.

Meanwhile, the B.C. offence looked adequate if not overpowering. With Musso, who missed six games because of a knee operation, looking somewhat like his old self in his first start, Moorhead had things moving reasonably well. Musso ran for more than 50 yards in 10 carries and caught four passes for 42 yards. Lou Harris carried 16 times for 68 yards and Brock Ainsley accepted four passes for 73 yards.

Ticat kicker wins battle of booters

OTTAWA — Ian Sunter defeated Gerry Organ Saturday afternoon, and his 16-10 victory brought Hamilton Tiger-Cats second place in the Eastern Football Conference.

It was the second win of the week over the Grey Cup champions who were beaten, 11-10, in Hamilton last Sunday.

Sunter, who started the game leading Organ by two points in the individual scoring race, boosted his margin by kicking field goals from 33, 25, 28, 31 and 24 yards and getting the last point of the game with a 57-yard punt.

Organ got only four field-goal chances, and he was good from 25, 41, and 14 yards. He got a single point on a wide try from 24 yards midway through the third quarter.

No one else scored any points in a game which produced only 27 first downs, 17 of them by the Riders, and was mainly a passing battle. Hamilton rushed for only 42 yards, while Ottawa got 53 from its ball-carriers.

In the air, it was between Jerry Keeling, who completed 20 of 38 throws to get Riders 297 yards, and Bill Etter, who completed 18 of 27 passes for 280 yards. Veteran Don Jonas was sent in only once by Ticats, and he threw two incomplete passes. Rick Cassata threw three passes for Riders, and didn't quite complete any.

Despite the fair passing statistics, both defences were outstanding. Etter was thrown eight times for losses while Ticats got to Ottawa quarterbacks four times.

A total of 18,612 fans were on hand for the nationally televised game.

McGriffs dominate events as Kershaw finally topped

The 47-year-old veteran from Bridal Veil, Ore., hooked up with Kershaw in a time-trial battle, won it and then left no doubt in the Canada 200 super-stock feature by beating the Victoria driver by nearly two laps.

Doug McGriff, 27-year-old son of the winner, was second in the event for the second straight year. He was runnerup to Kershaw in last year's race.

The win for McGriff was worth $1,200. He won an additional $500 put up by the track for anyone who could beat Kershaw, riding a streak of 13 main events at Western before Saturday's race.

McGriff also picked up $100 for his record-shattering run in the time trials. Together with Doug's $700 for second, the McGriff family took home at least $2,500. The third member of the family racing, Hershel McGriff, Jr., was unofficially in the top 10 finishers and will also pick up some prize money.

. . . finishes fifth

Starting off in 12th spot in the 24-car field, McGriff made it clear he wanted the lead quickly.

After Gordie Hemrich of Langley Speedway held the lead for the first six laps, Rick O'Dell of Victoria took over until the 17th when Don Dowdy of Yakima, the "A" trophy dash winner, took over.

However, Dowdy could only hold off McGriff until the 23rd and the classy veteran took over a lead he never relinquished.

At the halfway point of the 200-lap event, only five drivers, Hershel and Doug McGriff, O'Dell, Dowdy and Kershaw, were on the same lap.

But by the 125th lap, it was a two-car race with Hershhel beginning to draw away from his older son.

Leading Doug by a lap and a half, Hershel left his mandatory 20-second pit stop until the 196th lap when he pulled in, stopped the necessary time and roared out again, still having a half-lap lead on his older son.

Kershaw, who seemd to be having tire problems all night, particularly in the right front, pitted on the 117th lap and lost two laps while his crew attempted to solve the problem.

McGriff ran off three of his required four-lap qualifying in times of 17.47, 17.39, and 17.20 seconds, breaking Kershaw's three-year-old record by .17 seconds on this third run.

Kershaw then came out and ran off all four of his laps with times of 17.31, 17.26, 17.18 and 17.29 seconds, taking the record back off McGriff with the third lap.

McGriff then ran off his final lap and took the record back with a timing of 17.17 seconds.

Track officials said RCMP closed off Millstream road a half-hour before races began because of the tremendous crowd. About 500 of the spectators had to be accommodated in the infield area.

"A" trophy dash: 1. Don Dowdy, Yakima; 2. Gary Kershaw, Victoria; 3. Hershel McGriff, Bridal Veil, Ore.; 4. Ron Eaton, Tacoma.
"B" trophy dash: 1. Gordie Hemrich, Vancouver; 2. Dave Dalby, Victoria; 3. Ross Surgenor, Victoria; 4. Ken Barnes, Vancouver.
Main event: 1. Hershel McGriff; 2. Doug McGriff, Bridal Veil, Ore.; 3. Rick O'Dell, Victoria (unofficial); 4. Don Dowdy (unofficial); 5. Gary Kershaw (unofficial).

Par round enough for tourney lead

Despite a nightmare 14th hole, Al MacLeod of Cowichan was the only competitor to match par Saturday in the opening round of the 36-hole, Molson's - Esquimalt tournament at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

MacLeod, a member of the 6339-yard Esquimalt course, had a double-bogey five on the 141-yard 14th. But the Duncan school teacher didn't let that rattle him and came through with a 72, giving him a one-stroke lead over Grant Milliken of Gorge Vale, Bob Hunt of Uplands and Bob Kerr of Vancouver Marine Drive.

MacLeod is also in a two-way deadlock with Jeff Jones of Gorge Vale for third place in the net division of the tourney, which is being restricted to amateurs for the first time.

MacLeod and Jones, who shot a two-over 74, have a 68 net and trail Keith Lawrence and Barry McCue, both from the host club, by one stroke.

MacLeod started on the fourth tee in the afternoon round of the tournament, which required a shotgun start.

Cec Ferguson, the Vancouver Island Open and city amateur champion who is playing on his home course, had the best chance to take the lead in the morning round.

Ferguson started his back nine with a birdie on the 10th and came through with an eagle on the 440-yard, par-five 11th. But on the next hole, a 408-yard par four, Ferguson struggled to a triple-bogey seven and finally had to settle for 74 to share fifth place with Jones and veteran Gordon Millin of Royal Colwood.

The tourney ends today with presentation of prizes scheduled for 6:30 p.m. in the clubhouse.

Morrall sparks Miami victory

Associated Press

Earl Morrall, 40-year-old veteran quarterback, threw a pair of second-half touchdown passes Saturday night to lead Miami Dolphins to a 30-7 National Football League exhibition victory over Chicago Bears.

Dolphins, two-time Super Bowl champions, were held without a first down in the first 20 minutes of play before Bob Griese, Miami's No. 1 quarterback, connected on a 10-yard touchdown pass to Paul Warfield with 1:34 left in the first half.

The hometown Bears, however, came back to score a minute later on a fake field goal attempt which saw Norm Hodgins lug the ball 17 yards for a tying touchdown.

Morrall took over in the second half and hit Howard Twilley with a 21-yard scoring pass and Marlin Briscoe with a 19-yard touchdown pass. Rookie Don Strock closed out the scoring with a 30-yard touchdown strike to Melvin Baker in the final quarter.

Cougars obtain goalkeeper from Memorial Cup champs

By STAN COOPER

Victoria Cougars, on the eve of opening their 1974-75 training camp, have acquired a player who may go along way to making it a winning season for the Western Canada Hockey League club.

He's goalkeeper Bob Leslie, a five-feet-10-inch, 175-pounder who served as backup to all-star Ed Staniowski with Regina Pats last season.

Cougar coach and general-manager Patty Ginnell said the 19-year-old should be in Victoria for the start of training camp which opens Monday morning at Victoria Racquet Club.

"I've been after a goalkeeper with Western Canada League experience," Ginnell said, "and when Del Wilson phoned to say Regina was going with Staniowski and a younger goalkeeper as backup, I grabbed Leslie."

The goalkeeper was acquired for "future considerations" and if he sticks with the Cougars, Ginnell will either send the Pats a player or make a cash settlement.

"Who knows, he may be another Foubister," Ginnell continued, referring to Jim Foubister, most valuable player with the Cougars in '73-'74. Foubister was picked up as a free agent from Winnipeg Clubs midway through the campaign and was responsible for much of the Cougars' success in the last three months of the season.

He'll be one of 11 netminders vying for the spot vacated by Foubister, who is trying for a position with New York Islanders, the team that nabbed him in the National Hockey League's amateur draft.

Ginnell has invited about 80 players to camp, including 21 defencemen, 17 centres, 15 leftwingers and 17 rightwingers.

There are 11 holdovers — backup goalkeeper Glen Anwailer, defencemen Rick LaPointe, Tim Williams, Rick Peter and Jerry Nicholson; centres Mel Bridgman, Derek Haas and Al McLaren, leftwingers Danny Lucas and Peter Morris and right-winger Bruce Van Camp.

Cougars will work out at the Racquet Club this week and move to Memorial Arena, Sept. 16. The team will play six exhibition games, three in Victoria, two in Kamloops and the other in Nanaimo.

Exhibition action starts Sept. 21 when Nanaimo Clippers, the Cougar affiliate in the B.C. Junior Hockey League, play host to the WCHL Kamloops Chiefs.

Cougars will play Kamloops at Memorial Arena, Sept. 22 and 23 before moving to Nanaimo for a Sept. 24 game with Seattle Totems of the Central Professional Hockey League.

Then it's on to Kamloops for games, Sept. 25 and 26, and Cougars will wind up their pre-season schedule with a Sept. 28 game against Seattle at Memorial Arena.

GORDON BROWN, a former Manitoban who spent 18 years as an accountant with Eatons before moving to this province some time ago, has been appointed as the new manager of the Victoria Curling Club. Brown, who was a member of Winnipeg's Deer Lodge Curling Club for 15 years, was picked from 20 applicants and starts his new job tomorrow . . . Ed Danielson aced the 154-yard eighth hole at the Nanaimo Golf and Country Club on Labor Day, but was sharing the spotlight a minute or two later. Ex-Victorian Bob Cunningham, playing in the following foursome, stepped up and duplicated the shot . . . it was just a bit of an improvement on what happened at Cedar Hill two weeks earlier. There, during play in a club seniors' competition, Tom Skelton aced the 126-yard 12th hole and Dave Fyvie came along a few minutes later to also find the cup with his tee shot. The only difference was that there was a foursome between the quartets which included Skelton and Fyvie . . . Duncan curling veteran Ron Harper has been improving steadily after suffering a stroke in July, and everyone will welcome the news that a complete recovery is expected . . . Eastern Football Conference placekickers are getting field goals with dullish regularity — 61 in the first 21 games — but they haven't come close to matching last season's performance on converts. They got the extra point 111 times out of 113 chances in 1973 but have already failed five times this season . . . Sports Illustrated has done it again. This time it was the Boston Red Sox who headed for obscurity after an SI feature story, and in view of many such incidents in the past one doesn't have to be that superstitious to believe that SI notice might have had more to do with the pennant race in the American League East than the pitching of the Baltimore Orioles. If memory serves, New York Yankees went into a slump earlier this season after a similar story, and it would be only fair to get the Orioles featured before the schedule runs out.

JIM MOODY, hoping to get a second Victoria team in the Northwest International Fastball League, has a sponsor ready and has Don Bates interested in moving to the city. Bates, the 18-year-old pitcher for Saskatchewan in the Canadian men's softball tournament, would certainly make an excellent start for a new club . . . already here from Saskatoon is Dennis Bayak, who gave up his job with a radio station there to accept a job with Victoria Cougars. He'll do their publicity work, and also the play-by-play action for the club's radio broadcasts . . . Bill Sturken, and you have to be an old-timer if you remember when he was a man-about-town and among the tenpinners at Arcade Alleys, was a recent visitor to the city . . . Marv Levy, coach of the Montreal Alouettes, says about football that "offence sells tickets, kicking wins games and defence wins championships." It's a good summation, and scores prove that coaches are interested least of all in selling tickets. But then selling tickets is really no problem if a team wins often enough. Fans, unfortunately, are likely to get more excited by dull 9-4 victories, if there are enough of them, than they are about 35-41 defeats . . . Don Pries, a hustling infielder here in the days when the city had a professional baseball team, has moved up another rung. He quit his job as assistant to general-manager J. Frank Cashen of Baltimore Orioles and is now assistant to Jim Wilson, who heads up the Central Scouting Bureau, which will handle scouting duties for 17 of the 24 major league clubs . . . coach Pat Ginnell of the Victoria Cougars likes his players on the rugged side, and Gordie Roberts, the 17-year-old Detroit defenceman who recently threw in his lot with the Cougars, had a lot of statistics which interested Ginnell. Not only were there 25 goals and 53 assists while playing in the Tier Two Southern Ontario Junior League last season, but there was also that impressive penalty total — 340 minutes . . .

PADDY LANIGAN finally got back to Victoria, but he had to retire to make it. He is, of course, most likely to be found at Royal Colwood . . . Reg Midgeley, who injured his knee during a round of golf in Bellingham, is waiting for the date for the removal of a cartilage . . . it was only about 10 days ago that a female caller, who explained she had been out of the country, wanted to know who had won the Stanley Cup last spring. Her telephone call came less than 24 hours after someone had called to ask how the 1972 Team Canada-Russia hockey series had ended, and then wanted to know who had won when told that it had produced a 4-3-1 result . . . John Robertson is now a former Montreal sports columnist. He recently shocked his managing editor by accepting a lucrative contract and becoming a Montreal hot-liner . . . Bud Dunnett is at work trying to form a lawn-bowling club in Parksville . . . Ron Poole, who started his B.C. Junior Hockey League career with Victoria Cougars and ended it with Kamloops Chiefs last season, left Saturday for London, Ont., to try and win a spot with Washington Capitals, one of the two new NHL clubs this season . . . Mrs. W. Rowan, 4110 Torquay, won the new car raffled off by the Victoria Baseball Association . . . one thing that certainly seems evident is that Russ Jackson is among those who look better without a beard . . . best news yet for the future of professional lacrosse is the appointment of Robert Wussler as the Columbia Broadcasting System's vice-president in charge of sports. He is determined to make his network No. 1 in sports, and one of his thoughts is that professional box lacrosse has a chance to make it as a TV sport. That would seem to indicate that the National Lacrosse League is to get is hoped-for television exposure . . . the B.C. amateur baseball championship is to be decided in Victoria next August, and it won't be long before committees start the planning. Unless the format is changed, it will take a maximum of 11 games to decide the winner . . . and there was a bit of a shock the other night when I came home and turned on the television set. Thought for a minute that Eddie Borde had decided on a new career instead of retirement, but it was just George Gobel trying to avoid retirement.

Morgan cracks home run

Reds edge Dodgers

Joe Morgan's two-run home run spoiled Mike Marshall's record-tying appearance and kept the Cincinnati Reds late season hex over the Los Angeles Dodgers alive.

The eighth-inning blast capped a comeback that gave Cincinnati a 7-5 win over the first-place Dodgers and moved the Reds to within two-and-a-half games of the National League's West Division leaders.

Marshall, who tied the record of 92 appearances he set with Montreal Expos last season, came into the game in the sixth inning.

He got Tony Perez to ground into a double play to end the inning, but in the eighth, he gave up a one-out walk to Pete Rose and then Morgan hit his 20th home run of the season.

The victory was a big one for the Reds, who had lost, 3-1, to the Dodgers Friday, but have now won three of their last four games with Los Angeles and are threatening to steal a second straight pennant from the Dodgers.

Dodgers, who have been in first place since April, play their last game in Cincinnati today, and have a three-game series with the Reds starting Sept. 15 in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles appeared to be on the way to an easy win Saturday, nailing starter Clay Kirby for five runs in the first two innings.

But Cincinnati's relievers Pedro Borbon, Tom and Clay Carroll and Fred Norman combined to shut out the Dodgers the rest of the way.

Dave Concepcion made it 5-3 with a home run in the third inning and Johnny Bench got the Reds to within a run with his 28th home run of the season in the fourth inning.

Cincinnati drove Andy Messersmith from the mound after Bench's homer, tying it at 5-5 on Concepcion's run-scoring single after a walk to Dan Driessen and a single by Cesar Geronimo.

In the East Division, the Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals continued to run away from the rest of the pack.

Pittsburgh edged Montreal Expos, 6-5, in 12 innings, to stay ahead of the Cardinals, who got by New York Mets, 2-1, on Lou Brock's two-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning.

Brock didn't steal any bases Saturday — he was picked off first base once — but is only three behind the major-league record of 104 set by Maury Wills of the Dodgers in 1962.

Shutout string cut

Baltimore Orioles finally had their shutout string broken, but they kept their win streak alive.

The Orioles won their 10th straight, eding Cleveland Indians, 3-2, in an American League game Saturday, but had their shutout streak stopped one inning shy of tying a major-league record.

Charley Spikes hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the ninth inning and the Orioles missed the record of six consecutive shutouts set by the 1903 Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Orioles also fell short of the major-league record for consecutive shutout innings of 56 held by the same Pirates. But the Orioles, who hadn't been scored on since the eighth inning of a 7-1 win over Kansas City last Sunday set an American League record of 54 innings, seven better than the record set by Cleveland Indians in 1948, while posting a record five straight shutouts.

Saturday's win kept the Orioles tied in second with Boston Red Sox, who ended an eight-game losing streak by defeating Milwaukee Brewers, 4-3, in 10 innings, and moved them to within a game of the New York Yankees.

At New York, Graig Nettles homered in both games and the Yankees split a doubleheader with Detroit Tigers losing 8-3 in the opener and taking the second game, 1-0.

Rizzuto in WIHL

NELSON (CP) — Garth Rizzuto, 27, of Winnipeg, a veteran of both the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association, Sturday signed a one-year contract as player-coach of Nelson Maple Leafs of the Western International Hockey League.

Rizzuto was drafted by Vancouver Canucks of the NHL in 1970, then jumped to Winnipeg Jets in the WHA for the 1972-73 season.

Rugby tie

DUBLIN (Reuter) — The Irish XV and the Irish Rugby Football Union President's World XV drew 18-18 in the Irish Rugby Centenary International at Landsdowne Road Saturday.

Halftime score was 12-12.

Barry Legh and former-Victorian Rob Hindson represented Canada on the World XV.

Dolphins aiming for first win

If Victoria Dolphins intend to prove they can win in the Big Four Junior Football League, it's not likely they'll get a better opportunity than today.

The winless Dolphins tackle North Shore Cougars at 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Both teams are winless in three starts this season and while Dolphins have the poorest defence record in the league the Cougars have the worst offence record.

Despite head coach Dave Rosbrough's prediction that the usually-powerful Cougars would generate more offence this season, they have managed only six points so far.

Last season the Cougars averaged 19 points a game and finished second in the league with a 5-2 record, with both losses inflicted by champion Vancouver Meralomas.

North Shore has finished second to the Meralomas for three straight seasons.

The Dolphins offence has managed only one touchdown and a total of 13 points, but they will have the benefit of home park and a two-week rest.

UBC bounced

SASKATOON (CP) — University of Saskatchewan Huskies opened their 1974 Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season Saturday by overwhelming University of British Columbia Thunderbirds, 63-0.

Chris ponders in the rain

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert was given 24 more hours Saturday to ponder and plot her predicament—hanging by her fingernails in the United States Open tennis championships.

A cold, drizzling rain forced postponement Saturday of the women's semi-final, in which Evonne Goolagong leads the Wimbledon titleholder and No. one seed, 6-0, 4-3, and the semi-finals in men's singles.

The suspension delayed until Monday the championship matches, with the men and women competing for a $22,500 victor's purse.

The winner of the Goolagong-Evert match will meet second-seeded Billie Jean King, a three-time winner who beat Julie Heldman of Houston, 2-6, 4-3, 6-1.

Boersma helps Liverpool maintain unbeaten run

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool attacked brilliantly for 90 minutes Saturday to defeat struggling Tottenham Hotspur 5-2 and remain undefeated at the top of Division I in the English Football League.

Phil Boersma scored three goals for Liverpool, which has now won five of its first six games, and drawn the other, for 11 points. Boersma's goals made him the top First Division scorer with five.

Ipswich retained its unbeaten home record with a 1-0 win over Everton and remained in second place with 10 points.

Manchester City drew with Coventry 2-2 to stay in third place with nine points.

After its defeat Tottenham dropped to last place with just two points after six games.

Coventry took an early 2-0 lead on goals by Brian Alderson and Colin Stein, but Manchester United came back with goals in the last 20 minutes by Rodney Marsh and Alan Oakes.

Coventry now is the only First Division team without a win, following Birmingham City's surprise 1-0 win at Queen's Park Rangers. Centre half Joe Gallagher scored the goal after an error by the Londoner's debut goalkeeper, Richard Teale.

In Division Two, Manchester United lost its perfect record when Nottingham Forest held them to a 2-2 draw.

It was not until the 80th minute that Sammy McIlroy scored the equalizer after Forest had scored two straight goals after being down 1-0.

Soccer study aids players

LONDON (Reuter) — A government study has recommended that players should have a bigger say in the running of English League soccer.

A report on British professional soccer by the commission of industrial relations suggested that club captains or representative of the Professional Footballer's Association should be present at talks on contracts and that there should be collective discussions between managers and players on all matters affecting their livelihood.

It also recommended that players should be represented on the game's decision-making bodies, and they should be allowed legal representation at disciplinary hearings.

The proposals by the commission of nine men and one woman, who took 15 months to prepare their report, are not enforceable — the commission can only make recommendations.

But the Professional Footballer's Association says it is in favor of the report and the English Football League has agreed to study its recommendations carefully.

Leisure Road charges from behind to win Brighouse Belles Handicap

VANCOUVER (CP) — Favorite Leisure Road came from off the pace to catch Patti Ruth once again and go on to win the $8,500-added Brighouse Belles Handicap, Saturday at Exhibition Park.

Leisure Road, who has a habit of winning by no more than necessary, moved up to take the lead on the outside by a nose entering the stretch.

Patti Ruth, who had set all the pace, dug in down the straightaway and lost by three-quarters of a length.

Leisure Road, ridden by Andy Smith, covered the one and one-sixteenth miles in 1:45 2-5 — her fastest time of the season for the distance. It was the four-year-old filly's fifth victory of the season in which her margins have ranged from two lengths to a neck.

One of those victories came in an allowance race July 1 when Leisure Road again caught Patti Ruth at the top of the stretch and went on to win.

The Brighouse Belles winner paid $3.80, $2.40 and $2.30. Patti Ruth paid $2.50 and $2.70; the three-year-old Our Diamond paid $2.70.

The $5,987 winner's share of the purse brought Leisure Road's season earnings to $20,883.

Perfect mark

Yachts in port

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A race between losing contenders in the America's Cup was postponed for 24 hours Saturday because of foul weather.

Rain, accompanied by winds up to 40 miles an hour, soaked Newport and the area offshore during the morning. Small craft warnings flew along the New England coast.

The race, considered extremely important for its bearing on next week's start of the best four-of-seven America's Cup series between Australian challenger Southern Cross and the U.S. defender Courageous, was to start at 10 a.m. today.

The four 12-metre yachts scheduled to compete are the U.S. hopefuls Mariner and Intrepid, the Australian Gretel II and the French entry, the France.

Player leads by three

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Gary Player, seeking a record-matching fourth victory in the World Series of Golf, fired a three-under-par 67 for a three-stroke lead Saturday in the first round of the two-day chase for a $50,000 first prize.

Player, the Masters and British Open champion, pulled away with a string of three consecutive birdies on the back nine of the 7180-yard Firestone Country Club course.

Final round of the World Series of Golf will be telecast at 2 p.m. today on channel 5.

Lee Trevino, winner of the Professional Golfers' Association championship, was alone in second with a par-70.

Bobby Nichols, the host pro at this course, had a scrambling 71, and United States Open king Hale Irwin thrashed his way to a 76.

The World Series normally brings together the winner of four major titles — the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and P.G.A. With Player sweeping two of the qualifying tournaments, Nichols was designated to round out the foursome because he won the Canadian Open tournament.

Player, a South African rancher who is enjoying the best year of his globe-trotting career, started with a bogey from the deep, clinging rough but got the stroke back with a 10-to-12-foot birdie putt on the second hole.

He hit a fine iron shot that left him a six-foot putt for a birdie on the eighth, then started a string of three in a row with a 20-foot putt on the 12th hole. He made it from 12 feet on the next and just missed holing his second shot for an eagle on the next one.

The final 18 holes will be played today. The second-place finisher gets $15,000, third $7,500 and last $5,000.

Player has won this title three times, one short of the record held by Jack Nicklaus.

Participation on rise but so are the prices

By KING LEE

Participation and prices are up as the 1974-75 bowling season swings into action.

Manager Ken Jones of the 24-lane Town and Country Lanes said his centre experienced a slight increase this season and estimates more than 3000 fivepinners on more than 600 teams through the week.

Jones did some cutting back on his Youth Bowling Council weekend programs and has about 400 youngsters involved in YBC leagues.

Prices have gone up 25 cents for three games and lineage is now $2 for league play.

At Mayfair Lanes, manager Iver Hansen also reported a slight increase with tenpin leagues filled and openings only on Tuesdays and Thursdays in fivepins. Mayfair, has 28 tenpin and 12 fivepin lanes.

Mayfair's tenpin program for youth, affiliated with the American Junior Bowling Congress, involves about 160 this season, up slightly from last season.

The fivepin program, which gets under way this weekend, should draw about 80 bowlers and may be partially affiliated with the Youth Bowling Association.

Hansen said that fees for bowling have gone up five cents a line this season.

Ron Cush of Cush's Bowl said he has about the same number of bowlers this season in his eight-lane, fivepin house. There are still a few openings in the 9:00-11 p.m. Thursday slot and Sunday nights.

Prices at Cush's has gone up 25 cents with evening three-game leagues now at $2.25 and daytime leagues at $2.

Sidney Bowling Lanes was the only centre to report a slight drop with the loss of VU 33 squadron from Victoria International Airport being blamed partially for the decrease.

With leagues getting started on Sept. 16, there are still openings for Monday and Friday leagues in the 12-lane, fivepin centre.

Three-game leagues in the evenings are being charged $1.90 this season, an increase of 25 cents. In the afternoon, the general charge is $1.60, up 15 cents while pensioners and youth will be charged $1.25, an increase of 10 cents.

At Duncan Bowling Centre, partners Don Stout and Howard Kinney are gearing for another full season. With the loss of 12 tenpin lanes at Nanaimo's Fiesta Lanes, the Duncan house has easily filled its six tenpin lanes.

Also filled are the six lanes used for fivepins and the only open bowling available is on Saturdays.

Duncan's YBC fivepin program is holding steady at between 80 and 100 youngsters and a new YBC tenpin program is expected to draw about 30 bowlers.

Fivepin prices have gone up 30 cents from last season with night leagues paying $1.95 and day leagues, $1.80. An increase of 15 cents is in effect in tenpins, night bowlers paying $2.25 and day leagues, $2.10.

Manager Bill Horman of Fiesta said the decision to take out the 12 tenpin machines upstairs was made during the summer. Four of the machines went to Powell River and the remainder went to Eastern Canada.

Eight fivepin string machines have been installed and the other four are expected shortly.

Horman said the lanes are working hard to fill the converted lanes with fivepinners and expects little problem in doing it.

There may be a slight increase in Fiesta's YBC program and the 30-lane house is expecting close to 400 youths.

An increase of 20 cents for three games was made at Fiesta, night leagues now paying $1.95 and day leagues, $1.80.

"Up a little here and there," is the way manager John Brittain of Brechin Lanes in Nanaimo describes his situation. The six-lane operation is also close to capacity and its YBC program will again have between 180 and 200 participating.

Prices have taken a 20-cent jump at night to $1.75 and a 25-cent increase in the day to $1.60.

Henry Washington of Victoria is the only Vancouver Island competitor in the YBC national fivepin championships which get under way today in Ottawa. The 17-year-old, who bowls out of Town and Country, is the senior boys singles representative for B.C.

The championships were originally scheduled for April 21-24 but were postponed because of an airline strike.

100 MILE HOUSE (CP) — Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver set a course record Saturday with a seven-under-par 65 to take the lead in the 36-hole, $9,000 Cariboo Open here.

In second place, with a four-under-par 68 was Dave Barr of Kelowna. Three players were tied for third spot with 70s — Barrie McPhee of Kamloops, Terry Weins and Wayne Vollmer, both of Vancouver.

Aaron forces tie in Southern Open

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Tommy Aaron, striving for his first victory since the 1973 Masters Tournament, blasted a 65 Saturday to surge into a three-way tie with J. C. Snead and young Ben Crenshaw after the third round of the $100,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

Snead fired a 66 while Crenshaw had a 69, giving the trio three-round totals of 205 over the par-70, 6971-yard Green Island Country Club course made soft by Friday's rains.

One stroke back at 206 was Forrest Fezler, last year's runner-up here. He had a 68.

At 207 was a group headed by Bruce Crampton, Phil Rodgers, Rik Massengale and Mike McCullough. Crampton and Rodgers each had 68s, McCullough a 69 and Massengale a 65.

Crenshaw, who made his pro debut by winning the San Antonio-Texas Open, finished with two birdies and a lone bogey in his round.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richard Petty turned in the fastest qualifying speed of 88.852 miles an hour Saturday night and won the pole position for today's Capital City 500 Grand National stock car race.

Overtime goals give Cosmos win

Cosmopolitan Royals scored two overtime goals Saturday to win the first game of the McGavin Cup, a pre-season competition of the Vancouver Island Soccer League's premier division.

Gil McIlreath and Rudy Kuebler scored twice each to give the Royals a 4-3 decision over Oak Bay at Royal Athletic Park.

McIlreath scored the winner at 13 minutes of the overtime and Kuebler added an insurance goal eight minutes later. Kuebler had sent the game into the mandatory two 15-minute overtime periods with the 2-2 goal at 10 minutes of the second half.

McIlreath had given Cosmos the lead at 30 minutes of the first half, scoring from 23 yards, but Oak Bay tied the game four minutes later on Gersey Hrasky's goal and went ahead, 2-1, at three minutes of the second half, when Bret Large deflected Hrasky's corner kick.

The eight-team, knockout event continues today, with UVic Vikings meeting Prospect Lake at 1 p.m. at Topaz Park, Victoria West playing London Boxing Club at 2:15 p.m. at Heywood Ave. Park, and Duncan facing Gorge at 3 p.m. at Topaz.

Electric cars mean clean miles

Story: Don Gain

Imagine downtown Victoria without the noise and noxious fumes of auto traffic.

"I'd love to see that," said Saanich businessman Lou Holker.

He has an idea on how to do it — bring back electric cars and trucks.

There's nothing new about them in Victoria. In the early years of the century they were transporting people and goods about the city.

In Vancouver this summer, a battery-powered electric van has been added to B.C. Hydro's fleet of service vehicles. It will be used experimentally.

Hydro obtained the van through a continent-wide program sponsored by the Electric Vehicle Council of New York to develop a practical electric road vehicle.

Hydro has also ordered two electric passenger cars from England for experimental urban use.

Holker, an avid electric car buff, says the time is ripe for such vehicles to come back.

"They have better motors available now, and better batteries. They're the answer to pollution in crowded cities."

He's owned three electric cars, a Hupp-Yeatts he acquired about 1950 from the estate of Miss Victoria Wilson, another of similar vintage, and a 1937 Detroit Electric in the body of a 1936 Dodge.

Holker sold the Wilson car in 1959 to Stan Reynolds, owner of Western Canadian Pioneer Museum in Wetaskiwin, Alta.

"I'm sorry I ever did it," he said, "but I just had nowhere to keep it so I let it go."

His eyes light up when he talks about electric cars and the classic workmanship that made Miss Wilson's car a thing of beauty with its plate glass windows, mahogany trim and solid white rubber tires.

The lamps were something to behold, he said, bevelled glass, beautiful.

Victor Rolfe remembers when electric vehicles drove on Victoria streets. Now 87, he was a partner in the firm of Jameson and Rolfe which sold Miss Wilson's father the Hupp-Yeatts for $7,000 in 1909.

Other electric car customers he remembers are Mrs. R. P. Rithet, wife of the Victoria magnate; Mrs. T. W. Patterson, wife of a lieutenant-governor; Mrs. Cecil ffrench, whose husband was a wealthy veterinarian, and Mrs. Joseph Hunter whose husband was a director of Wellington Colliery, outside Nanaimo.

Rolfe remembers selling electric trucks to Brackman-Ker, which used them to transport freight from the Outer Wharf, and to other businesses. His company also operated three electric launches to take sightseers along the Gorge.

Electric cars were ladies' cars, Rolfe said, because women were thought to be incapable of cranking the cars of the day, which had no self-starters.

But men did drive them, probably the most colorful being Lee Mong Kow, Chinese immigration officer for the federal government, who wore long robes and a button hat.

Electric delivery trucks were operated in Philadelphia as late as 1960.

The trucks, built between 1910 and 1927, were hauling coal, paper and miscellaneous cargo at a speed of 10 to 12 miles an hour.

"These were 10-ton trucks," Holker said, pointing to pictures in an old edition of Antique Automobile.

"They operated the whole fleet for a year on what it took to run two gasoline trucks. They were quiet. They were clean. I hope they'll come back."

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

PEACH PRUNING (A.S., Ladysmith)

If your peach tree is a fan-shaped, wall-trained specimen, the pruning is a bit too involved to explain in a short paragraph, and I suggest you get a book from the library with sketches showing how the operation is performed to provide the necessary replacement branches. The best time to do the job is in late summer, just after the fruit has been gathered.

A peach tree growing in open ground normally requires very little pruning. The weight of the fruit bends down the branches into an arc, and this induces new shoots from the top of the arc. Any pruning consists of removing the old, infertile tips back to one of these replacement shoots, and the taking out of any badly placed branches. This too can be done in late summer or early fall.

DISEASED POTATO (H.W., Brentwood Bay)

The sliver of potato you sent was too small to recognize any abnormalities, and I think I could help you better if you were to describe in detail just how your tubers differ from healthy ones.

I noticed what appeared to be some scab on the skin, but in such a tiny sample I couldn't tell whether the potato was badly or only lightly scabbed. In any case, scab is only a skin disease of potatoes — a complexion fault, you might say — and once the potato is peeled, it is perfectly wholsome to eat.

GLADIOLUS FROM SEED (T.O'B., Royal Oak)

The seed pods which have formed on your gladiolus may be saved and the seeds sown next spring. They will take about three years to bloom, and the flowers are usually somewhat inferior to those of the parent plant.

Allow the pods to remain on the plant until they dry and show signs of splitting, then gather and spread out in a sunny window to dry thoroughly. When quite dry, the papery seeds are removed from the pods and stored in a cool, dry place until required for sowing in the spring.

Sow in April on the bottom of a flat-bottomed trench, two inches deep and a foot wide. Space out the seeds 1½ inches apart each way and cover with half an inch of sifted topsoil. Weed by hand through the summer and keep well watered.

When the grassy foliage dies down in the fall, you will harvest a number of tiny bulblets which can be planted out in the same way the following summer, but spaced 2½ inches apart each way in their shallow trench.

At the end of the second summer, small and medium-size bulbs will be harvested, most of which should bloom the following summer.

HEDGE LITTER (G.N., Ganges)

While a surface mulch of some kind can be most beneficial to your hedge in the hot, dry weather of summer, such litter should be cleaned out each fall. A hedge seems to be a catch-all for trapping leaves, torn paper and all kinds of wind-blown rubbish, and not only is this unsightly and untidy, but it is also a positive source of danger to the health of your other garden plants.

For one thing, such hedge litter provides an ideal breeding place for slugs and woodlice, and a comfortable winter home for the disease organism that causes scabby apples and pears. All this trapped rubbish should be raked out and either burned or rotted down in the compost heap with a good compost accelerator.

WASHINGTON — Every time you come back from vacation you find some old neighbors have moved out and new people have moved in. Take my neighborhood, for example. You can imagine my surprise when I saw some strange kids playing on the lawn at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Who are those kids?" I asked my friend Marty.

"Oh, didn't you know? The Nixons moved out in August."

"They did?" I said in surprise. "It's funny they didn't mention anything about it when I left in July. It must have been awfully sudden. Did they give any reason why they were leaving?"

"No," Marty said, "one day there were there, and the next day a moving van pulled up and they were gone. You know how old man Nixon used to keep his thoughts to himself, so we weren't too surprised when he upped and left."

"That's a shame," I said. "He was a nice fellow and never caused anyone any bother. I'm sorry I didn't have a chance to say goodbye. Any idea where they went?"

"I'm not too sure. I think maybe Peoria."

"Why Peoria?" I asked.

"Well, they kept talking about Peoria all the time. Every time they did somethisg they wanted to know if it would play in Peoria. So we figured that's probably where they went. But that's just a guess. They could have gone anywhere."

"Does anyone know why they moved?"

"Something to do with trouble in the government. The gossip we heard is that if he resigned, he'd be assured of a pension. But if he tried to stick it out, he'd be canned with nothing. So I guess he took the money and ran."

"Who moved into the house?"

"Family called the Fords. They're really nice people. Everyone seems to like them."

"What's he do for a living?" I asked Marty.

"He used to be a congressman, but now I think he's got some high job in the government, though you wouldn't know it to talk to him. He makes his own breakfast and he leaves the door open so anyone can talk to him. Those are his kids on the lawn there. His wife's a charmer. Used to be in show biz, I hear, but real down to earth. She cooks her own breakfast, too."

"It's good to have nice neighbors," I said.

"Nice isn't the word for it. Do you know the Fords hadn't moved in a week before they gave a dinner dance and invited everyone on the block to come?"

"No kidding?"

"Yup. And they say they're going to have blacks and women and poor people and everyone visit them."

"It's going to be tough to get a parking spot," I said.

"Everyone in the neighborhood is pleased as all get out to have such fine people move in. You never know who you're gonna get to live at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, and it could affect real estate values."

"Any other changes I should know about?" I asked Marty.

"The Ron Zieglers moved to California, and there's talk that Father McLaughlin is going to get a new parish somewhere. I hear the Pat Buchanans are leaving and also the Ken Clawsons.

"Jim St. Clair has gone back to Massachusetts to practice law and the Fred Buzhardts are also leaving town."

"Wow, it's been quite a summer. Anyone besides the Fords moving in that I should know about?"

"Oh yeah, a family named the Rockefellers from New York have just taken a house on Massachusetts Avenue."

"Damn," I said. "There goes the neighborhood."

Scene: The Heavenly Real Estate Office. The Landlord is at his workbench, happily creating a new galaxy as his Business Agent, Mr. Gabriel, enters.

The Landlord: Ah, there is nothing like making a new galaxy to stimulate the imagination and tax the ingenuity. Let me see, a billion stars, a trillion planets, moons and asteroids, all moving in their proper courses. Add a nova or two for flare, sprinkle with dew . . .

Gabriel: Excuse me, sir, another request from that little planet you love so much. The new president of the United States is asking for some guidance and wisdom.

The Landlord (nodding): They always do. It's amazing, Gabriel, how loudly politicians pray in public for guidance and wisdom. Yet the only time I hear a fervent prayer from them is on Election Eve. However, this new President seems a decent sort. What's the problem this time? War? Poverty? Corruption?

Gabriel: No, sir, it's the economy.

The Landlord (frowning): Have they, then, exhausted the waving fields of grain I blessed them with?

The Landlord: The fruited plains, perhaps?

Gabriel: Still fruited, sir.

The Landlord: Then, obviously, they must not have enough workers to grow the food and make the goods they need.

Gabriel: No, sir, they have too many. Currently one in twenty are unemployed.

The Landlord: Then what, on Earth, is the problem?

Gabriel: Money, sir.

The Landlord (testily): By me! You know I detest that subject.

Gabriel: Yes, sir, but prices are soaring us-ward. The people can no longer afford to buy things.

The Landlord: There is a me-given law to remedy that, Gabriel. I believe I called it, "Supply and Demand."

Gabriel: No offense, sir, but it isn't working.

The Landlord: Then tell the new president to pass a law forbidding prices to rise higher. That seems simple.

Gabriel: He says that's been tried and it doesn't work either.

The Landlord: Perhaps if he employed persuasion . . .

Gabriel: He has, sir. To no avail.

The Landlord: What if he gathered the wisest men in the country together and . . .

Gabriel: He's already scheduled just such a meeting, sir. But no one has much hope for it. He says if you would kindly solve the problem of money, he thinks he could handle all the rest.

The Landlord (irritably): Who does he think I am, Mammon?

Gabriel: I'm sure he doesn't, sir. But the problem . . .

The Landlord (scowling): What problem? I have provided bounty for all and the vigor to reap it.

Gabriel: Yes, sir. But I thought you might enjoy employing your imagination and ingenuity to create a simple solution to their sky-rocketing inflation, plummeting stock market, soaring hog futures, plunging car loadings, coupled with . . . Sir? Excuse me, Sir?

The Landlord (who has turned to his workbench): And if I put a few nebulae here, pin a dwarf star there, add three parsecs of meadow flowers, seven symphonies of birdsong . . .

James Bacon's Hollywood

Here we are in the city which is the most affluent of the new Germany, a sort of Bavarian Beverly Hills' . . . Munich.

Naturally the first place I visited was a beer hall. In Munich, they don't serve your table with mugs or steins of beer. They put kegs on the table. This has got to be the biggest beer drinking city.

And then Norman Jewison put me in his new movie, Rollerball.

It's rather a challenging role because I play a Japanese fan cheering the Tokyo team against Houston in the futuristic game which is the ultimate in violence.

Rollerball is a game that has never been played before and hopefully never again. In fact, Jewison is making up the rules day by day as he shoots.

To give you an idea of how violent the game is, at least three of the 11 stuntmen brought over from Hollywood have been in and out of hospitals in the last week.

Norman took over the Olympic basketball stadium. In it he has constructed a $200,000 set that might possibly be one of the biggest indoor sets ever built for the movies.

This is where the games take place. The movie is set in the year 2018 when the world is ruled by corporations — instead of governments.

Jimmy Caan plays the superstar of the game of Rollerball which is the ultimate violent action sport combining some of the rougher aspects of hockey, pro football, boxing, judo, motorbike racing and roller derby and a little of roulette with a cannon ball.

Everybody, including Caan, has gotten shook up in the month they have been filming in Munich.

The amazing thing about the game is that it is something that might well be on ABC's Wide World of Sports in the 21st century — or even sooner.

"We had 2,000 extras working the other day when we were shooting and after about 40 seconds, they became rabid fans," says Jewison.

It's a little frightening to think about it because the game briefly is this. Each side has 10 players, three on motorbikes and seven on roller skates.

The ball spins around the track like the ball in a roulette wheel while the players commit all sorts of mayhem in trying to field the ball into a magnetized goal.

"The first time we played it," says Norman, "the participants got so competitive that a few wound up in the hospital. We have it under control now."

Many of the players are roller hockey professionals.

"So far all I've done is work in this track, sometimes with the heat up to 120 degrees. It's like being in stir 12 hours a day and six days a week. On Sunday's, I just lick my wounds. I'll sure be glad to see Connie."

Jimmy says he took this part not because of the game aspect but because it is basically a story of a man fighting the establishment.

"It is the story of a man with spirit in a wholly computerized age."

Mrs. Sauve on pollution

'Very big problem' in Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve has suggested that Quebec may be under special pressure to impose stricter pollution controls.

She was speaking on the CTV network program Question Period, taped Friday for broadcast today.

"Yes, indeed," Mrs. Sauve replied when asked if it was fair to say that Quebec has been a particular offender, especially with regard to untreated sewage.

"It's a very big problem in the St. Lawrence . . . and I am meeting . . . next week to discuss many of the questions and this one in particular."

She said her meeting, probably with Quebec Environment Minister Victor Goldbloom, will consist of asking how the province intends to correct the situation and what help Otawa can provide.

"Treating the used waters of municipalities is really the biggest problem that we probably have and the federal government has offered a number of programs lending money to municipalities free of interest . . . .

"But the municipalities themselves are under the jurisdiction of the provinces . . . ."

Mrs. Sauve, science minister until her environment appointment a month ago, was pressed on the Quebec issue when one of the interviewers on the Questions Period panel said Quebec "doesn't care very much" about balancing economic development with environmental controls.

"Well," she replied without elaboration, "they will have to answer for that."

One thing she intends to stress in her new portfolio is keeping other ministers aware of environmental considerations.

"That is the role of the department of the environment: to make other departments . . . conscious that the problem of the eenvironment has to be taken into account."

Mrs. Sauve had little sympathy for millionaire oil developer John Shaheen, who apparently has complained that environmental equipment added $9 million to the cost of his huge refinery in Newfoundland.

"Some people have paid $600 million for depollution . . . in their activity and you've got to look at that . . . as a kind of trade-off."

Mrs. Sauve said companies obviously must accept the need for strict environmental controls and that any new development, especially in natural-resource exploitation, will have to take this into account.

Fall from tower kills woman

PISA, Italy (UPI) — A young woman fell to her death from the leaning tower of Pisa. Police said the woman appeared to be in her 20s, but carried no identification.

They said she fell about 180 feet from the bell chamber at the top of the tilted tower to the garden at its base. They said they did not know whether it was an accident or suicide.

Seniors reach peak

ALAGNA SESIA, Italy (AP) — Eighty men and women ranging in age from 51 to 78 have climbed a 13,677-foot peak on Europe's second tallest mountain to prove age is no barrier to physical fitness.

The group completed the climb on 15,203-foot Mount Rosa Thursday and tramped down to this Alpine village on Friday, happy and sprightly, said doctors who accompanied them.

All men were over 60, as provided by the rules of the Alpine Club of Malnate, which organized the climb "not as a speed contest but as a demonstration of youthful zest at an advanced age."

Francesco Revelli, 90, was the oldest climber. He did not make it all the way to the finish line at 13,677 feet, acceding to a doctor's request to stop halfway up.

A dozen who climbed to the first stop Wednesday remained there Thursday, mainly because they stayed up singing and drinking until 2 o'clock in the morning.

No. 1 GAS SAVER

Honda Civic is incredibly stingy with gasoline. Of all 1974 cars tested for gas mileage by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency the 4-speed Honda Civic came in first at 34.9 miles per Canadian gallon.

Honda Civic judged Car of the Year by Road and Track Magazine: May 1973.

The Civic's acceleration is more than a match for that of competing 1200 c.c. sedans, with a few with larger engines as well. 1200 c.c. in the Civic feels more like the 1600 c.c. of, say, the Datsun 510 or the Toyota Corolla (1600 c.c.).

Anniversary

Lonsbury 50th

The weekend of August 4th, was one of surprises for Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lonsbury of 195 Maddock Ave., West, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary. The surprises were provided by their family Mr. and Mrs. D. B. (Donald and Christina) Street of Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. G. K. (Glen and Brenda Lee) Martin of Portland, Ore., and Mr. and Mrs. B. L. (Brian and Donna) Lonsbury, of Surrey.

Lured away from the residence on Saturday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Lonsbury returned home to find a new color television had been installed. Later they were hosted at dinner at Hy's. Under the impression that the dinner party consisted of their immediate family, they were surprised and delighted to find their party had expanded to include Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rullins and Mr. Donald Rullins of New Westminster. Mrs. Rullins (Joan) is a sister of Mrs. Lonsbury. Also at their table was Dr. and Mrs. K. G. Tolman of Salt Lake City, Utah. Dr. Tolman, formerly of Vancouver and presently a professor of Medicine at Salt Lake City, is a great nephew of Mr. Lonsbury.

Dinner was followed by dancing at McMorrans' where some 25 couples formed the party of celebrants which included Mrs. W. P. Lonsbury, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Henkel, Mr. Glen Lonsbury and Miss Doreen Lillimo, all of Edmonton, and Mr. and Mrs. Elton Hutton of Duncan.

On Sunday, Aug. 4th, a reception was held at the residence where during the afternoon, more than a hundred guests offered congratulations to which was added congratulations by telephone and telegrams and cards from such widely separated points as Nova Scotia, Ontario, Florida and California. One card because of its difference, entitles it to special mention. Sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. J. Krasney of Victoria, a tree was planted in Canada Park in Israel, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lonsbury's 50th anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonsbury were married in Alberta, August 4th, 1924. They moved to New Westminster in 1928 and to the West Kootenay's in 1934. In 1943 Mr. Lonsbury was transferred by the Provincial Government to Victoria where he retired from the Provincial Service in 1969.

9 IN MEMORIAM

—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

BAKER — In loving memory of William Baker, a beloved father and grandfather, who was taken from us so suddenly one year ago, Sept. 8, 1973.
Always remembered and sadly missed.—Daughter Shirley and Family.

BROOKS—In treasured memory of our son, Neil Lamont Brooks, who died as the result of an accident, at Westwood, Coquitlam, on Sept. 8, 1968.
Time slips by, but we, who loved him so dearly, are unlikely to forget him, no matter how many years pass by.—Harold and Dorothy Brooks.

McCAIG — In loving memory of Mrs. Isabella McCaig, mother, who passed away Sept. 8, 1973. Ever remembered by her sons, Neil and Duncan and Donald, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.
Dear Mother, you are not forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more,
Still in memory you are with us,
As you always were before.

WEBBER — In loving memory of our dear Mother Clara H. Webber, who passed away peacefully Sept. 9, 1964.
As time unfolds another year
Memories keep you ever near.
Silent thoughts of times together
Hold memories that will last forever.

WOODS—In loving memory of my loving husband Stewart E. Woods, who passed away Sept. 8, 1967.
No one knows my longing,
As I write these simple lines.
For a husband's love and kindness,
That are no longer mine.
The home you left is lonely now,
And I am lonely too.
Those behind are good and kind,
But none replaces you.
—Lovingly remembered by his loving wife Mary and Family.

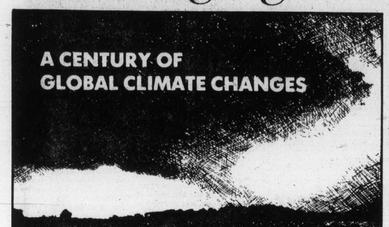
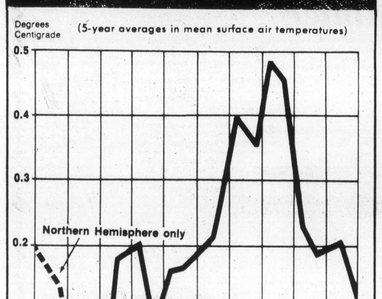
Warning signals point to changes in climate





By DAVID F. SALISBURY

Around the world warning signs raise an insistent alarm — earth's climate is changing, quickly and perhaps forbodingly.

To cite a few of the indicators:

● Six years of drought in the sub-Sahara.

● Year after year of good growing seasons in the American Midwest suddenly broken by several rainless months this summer.

● One half of Bangladesh flooded while its neighbor, India, suffers famine due to lack of rainfall.

● The southward migration of the heat-loving armadillo.

These are just a few of the growing number of signs that, in recent years, have convinced more and more climatologists that earth is poised on the brink of a new climatic regime.

"The studies of many scholars . . . attest that a new climatic pattern is now emerging. We believe this climatic change poses a threat to the people of the world. Its direction . . . indicates major crop failures almost certainly within the decade."

This was the unanimous verdict of a group of climatologists who gathered in Bonn in May at the behest of the International Federation of Institutes for Advanced Study. Their report dealt with the effect of climate on the quality of life.

They could only come to some very general conclusions about this imminent climate change — colder temperatures in the northern latitudes, an increasing variability in the weather with more frequent and severe storms — because the processes behind climate change still elude scientific analysis.

"It's a long step from this kind of warning to climate predictions that will help farmers decide what and where to plant," acknowledges Dr. Walter Orr Roberts of the National Centre for Atmospheric Research (NCAR), chairman of one of the panels at the Bonn conference.

"Mankind is marching into the future armed only with the knowledge that substantial climatic changes can occur," agrees Dr. John Imbrie of Brown University, participant if an international research project on the history of earth's climate.

However, both these men and their colleagues are optimistic that climatic predictions are possible within 10 years, if given a high priority by the nations of the world.

Actually, climatology, the study of long-term weather trends, is still in its infancy. Only a handful of experts are involved and they have little financial support.

As recently as the 1950's the earth's climate was assumed to be unchanging. Then some geographers noticed that the average of the world's air temperatures was dropping. This trend, which has continued since 1945, vitalized climatic studies, until then a scientific backwater.

And now climatic knowledge is urgently needed. In the past decade, the "green revolution" made world food surpluses possible. But in the last few years these gains have been eroded by the appetities of an ever-increasing population and a succession of crop failures in many parts of the globe.

"Today, the total food surplus of the world has shrunk to about three weeks' supply. Latest projections indicate that this year mankind will once again eat more food than it grows.

Examination of the history of the world's climate indicates that it has fluctuated widely in the past — oceans rising and falling, ice caps growing and shrinking, deserts forming and vanishing — but it appears that most of the time over the past few million years it has been cooler and less benign than what mankind today considers "normal."

Moreover, there is some evidence which indicates that, when changes in climate come, they come swiftly, within decades. In the past these fluctuations have been associated with the downfall of ancient, flourishing civilizations.

The weather patterns that destroyed a lot of the corn crop and the soybean crop in sections of the American Midwest this summer are identical to conditions in this same area from 1200 to 1400 A.D., says Dr. Reid Bryson, director of the Institute for Environmental Studies at the University of Wisconsin.

"It's in the archaeological literature that during this two hundred years, the farming practices of the Pueblo and other tribes in the area were wiped out," he says. But no expert would be willing to say that this former climatic pattern will be repeated. There are too many uncertainties.

Although droughts and floods are the most dramatic indicators of climatic change, there are many less noted, but to experts, equally convincing events that point in the same direction.

The armadillo, which once ranged as far north as Nebraska, has been retreating steadily southward. A species of head-louring snail reportedly has vanished from the forests of Central Europe. Glaciers which had been retreating until 1940 have begun to advance. The North Atlantic is cooling down about as fast as an ocean can cool. The growing seasons in England and Scandinavia are getting shorter.

Today there are as many as 60 different, often conflicting, theories to explain climatic change, but there is not enough conclusive information to determine which is correct. Some of the most basic ingredients in the climate recipe, such as an accurate measure of the total amount of sunlight falling on the earth, are not well enough known.

Child abuse major social worry

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A report presented to the American Psychological Association convention blames both the family and government structures for child abuse in America.

"Children constitute the most oppressed minority group in this country," Dr. Peter Decourcy said earlier this week. "It is a minority group whose members are regularly humiliated, beaten, mutilated, killed or sexually abused and who have little effective legal or police protection.

"Numerous studies have shown that less than 60 per cent of the cases of serious child abuse are not reported. This is not an isolated problem but rather one that cuts across all socio-economic levels in our society, across all education and intellectual levels, across all races, and across all religious faiths.

"On the basis of current evidence, about the only generalization that can be made about parents who batter their children is that they themselves are usually abused during childhood," Decourcy said.

"Many parents do not fully understand the intellectual limitations of an infant and child. They do not understand that in many cases a child simply does not understand what is expected of him. Too often their only resources in controlling their child is corporal punishment, which frequently reaches an abusive level.

"In many ways we do not think of children as people with the rights and privileges of adults," he told the convention. "Physical punishment and psychological harassment are considered acceptable methods of controlling a child.

Children are often punished by their parents in a variety of unusual and ingenious ways that would not be tolerated in the most backward adult prison, and the parents are not subjected to social censure or legal interference unless extreme neglect and abuse can be shown.

"It is as if the children were objects, bits of property belonging to their parents, to be used in any way the parent sees fit."

Decourcy called for reform in the juvenile courts and welfare departments which admonish the parents without solving the problem.

"All too frequently welfare departments are thoroughly committed to the notion that their ultimate goal, in dealing with an abused child, is the reunion of the family," he said.

Aircraft builders plan joint venture

FARNBOROUGH, England (AP) — Six of Europe's leading aircraft manufacturers have agreed on a joint project to build commercial airliners which they hope can cut substantially into the market now dominated by United States builders.

The companies from Britain, France and West Germany signed an agreement last week, informants said Friday at the Farnborough air show, the annual showcase of the British aviation industry.

The informants said the governments of the three countries have agreed to back the accord and have indicated that their national airlines will purchase from the consortium rather than from U.S. companies.

Airline industry sources said the new consortium, which is yet to be named, may produce a new family of European airliner within the next decade. Past efforts to build up a multinational European aviation industry have met only marginal success.

Doing the Town

With Dorothy Fraser

The majesty of the law . . .

new ringing phrase, don't you think? And we accord full honor to those who help uphold it including one of our own nieces who's a brand new lawyer! Talking to her the other day about what she'll need in the way of legal garments when she begins her articling next week, and later on when she's admitted to the Bar it occurred to us that there must be a number of brand new lawyers male and female being admitted to the Bar this year and they're all going to need legal clothing. Well, if you happen to be one of these no longer any need to go shopping in Vancouver or send away for things because Wilson's are now the Vancouver Island representatives for Harcourts of Toronto, foremost makers of legal clothing in Canada. As of now Wilson's have a full stock of accessories like shirts, collars, legal tabs, shirt studs and carrying cases. And samples of Barristers', Queen's Counsel and Judges' gowns and waistcoats for you to choose from. They take your measurements and order the specific items you need. Actually, one gown along with the long-sleeved waistcoat and proper accessories, is all you'll need for years to come unless they promote you to judge or something. And with these superbly tailored gowns, you'll look every inch the fine lawyer you are or intend to become! . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Fifteen per-cent of the women in France are overweight according to recent statistics.

Dresses to go a-cruising in . . .

No Virginia, cruise clothes have not started to arrive in the stores yet but for any of you lucky ladies who are taking off on cruises planning holidays in Mexico or Hawaii or wherever the sun shines brightly after it bids a fond farewell to Victoria here's a chance to acquire a classy holiday wardrobe at about half of what it would cost you later on. You see, Eaton's Import Room are putting all their summer dresses on sale, starting this Monday . . . Instead of doing like most people and slashing their summer things away to be brought out later and sold at full price they're slashing price tags in half on imported clothes from the Far East and new in fashion only the most fashion-conscious of Victoria women have even seen them yet! We got a pre-view this week of some of the lovely French dresses by a famous designer by the name of Coté d'Azure . . . a pant suit with linen slacks and acrylic V-neck cardigan . . . a 3-piece dress with cotton skirt, shirt top and little knitted pullover with spaghetti straps, in a navy, red and green geometric design. Noticed it was tagged at $26 . . . but this, of course, is now cut in half . . . there are one-piece skirts . . . elegant, understated dresses . . . just about everything you'll need to make your trip an outstanding success clothes-wise. Eaton's Import Room, 383-7141, loc 242.

Full-cut, classic topcoats by Louis Manley . . .

If this is your year for a new topcoat you certainly should make Wilson's your first port of call because it means there'll be a terrific selection of beautiful coats to suit every coat wardrobe need. Last week they got their complete shipment from Louis Manley we told you about the current issue it means there'll be no repeats and no special ordering so if you'd like one, now is the time! There are some beautiful breeds in colors to blend with everything you own. Styles are either single-breasted with raglan sleeves, or double-breasted with the sleeves set in. None are belted a feature we guarantee will appeal to many of you who dislike belts for one reason or another. There's a classic camel hair coat, cut on straight lines and buttoning up to neck. Round Peter Pan collar and raglan sleeves. Another full-cut coat is wool and mohair in a large grey white and black check, or camel black and white. All these full-cut Louis Manley coats are particularly good on the larger figure and prices are far from expensive. The camel hairs cost $150 . . . tweeds are from $160 to $180. W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St. 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Shoes with the soft touch . . .

"Soft as a sneaker, strong as a shoe" that's how Bandolino of Italy describe one of their newest fall shoes the "Sleaker" — squishy, young, two-eyelet tie with cupped crepe sole which we saw at Munday's this week. Dark brown, gold or navy unlined suede, it costs but $23 and is a dandy little walking shoe. This applies, of course to all the new Bandolinos now at Mundays. There's "Marino" in gold or dark brown suede soft and flexi bie as all get-out . . . wrapped crepe sole with semi-wedge heel $25. "Sergio" is another young shoe a tie with heavy crepe sole and heel in camel or whisky calf, priced at $27. A somewhat dressier shoe is named "Provo" It has a suede and calf vamp, open toe and heel, and unit polysole construction which means sole and heel are all in one. Padded insole for extra comfort. Mid-brown or black, at $24. Finally there's a new sandal called "Onda" crepe sole and heel, open toe and back in red, navy, camel or brown calf. Just $22 at Munday's, 1283 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Florgl gifts with a plus . . .

The ceramic elves in Island Florists' window drew us like a magnet when we were hurrying up Fort St. the other day so we had to go in and see them close up. They're the cutest things, made locally, with great imagination and a sly sense of humor. Different sizes to set on your patio or nestle among the flowers. There are adorable ceramic frogs too which, filled with a few flowers, would make a charming gift. (Someone who received one of these as a gift tells us she now uses her frog on the kitchen sink to hold soap pads!) Really, Island Florist has no end of delightful gift items . . . practically any one of which can be filled with flowers to make a double-barrelled gift offering!

One such example is the heavy glass beer mug with silver rim perfect gift for a man in hospital. And for mothers with new babies, Island Florist will arrange flowers in the most adorable musical ceramic cradles, trains, cottages or carousels. Most of these gift items, by the way, have the Island Florist name on the bottom because they're made especially for Island! Other pretties which intrigued us are the miniature old-fashioned wash basins and jugs . . . perfect for putting little plants in . . . And do get yourself one of the special plant sprayers to keep your house plants looking healthy. Island Florist Ltd., 746 Fort St., 385-3113.

Pantsuits for fall and winter . . .

Regardless of what you might have been reading in the slick fashion magazines on the subject of skirts versus pants . . . we can tell you positively that pantsuits are still very much with us . . . and probably will remain so as long as women have breath and voice to proclaim their comfort and practicality . . . and men have eyes to appreciate their good looks! . . . A well-tailored, smartly styled and becomingly colored pantsuit is a pearl of great price . . . and you'll find a good supply of these "pearls" at Charmante's. We were much taken with the Ultra-Suede pantsuits we saw there last week. Two styles, one with a collared V-neck and faggoting trim on the pockets, the other buttoning up to the neck, cinched at the waist with a tie belt. As for double knits you'll find them in either all-wool or polyesters . . . a colorful selection with price tags ranging from $65 up. Charmante also have a lot of new skirts by Munrospun . . . check tweeds in pretty colors, tie neck, small collars and classic styles. And do have a look at the blouses. There's an unusually good selection of Ports . . . Dressy blouses in gold and silver and slinky nylon jersey with ruffled necks . . . great toppers for long skirts. Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-1543.

Why not take up hairdressing? . . .

Maybe you've finished regular school and have been just taking it easy all summer . . . not too sure about what you'd like to do with the months or years ahead? Well, have you thought about becoming a hairdresser? When we suggest this we mean not merely someone who can set hair adequately but a really TOP hair stylist thoroughly trained in every aspect of the beauty business, who can command top wages and work just about anywhere he or she chooses! It's a career worth working at if you've any artistic bent at all . . . and you'll get the expert training you need at Glamour School of Hairdressing. B.C.'s most prestigious hairdressing school. Besides Danny Hajnal who at the moment is in Europe participating in the World Championships (he's trainer of the Canadian Team) Mr. Neils Todd, formerly of Edmonton and one of the world's leading hair stylists . . . is the instructor. So you can appreciate the calibre of whose who'll teach you. As for the school itself . . . it's now located on Fort St near Cook and is a really nice place to work in! New classes start this coming Monday on October 15 and November 9 . . . so why not get busy and register now? When Danny gets back in October he'll be teaching you all the latest European styles. A great PLUS we'd say! Phone . . . Glamour School of Hairdressing, 1119 Fort St., 386-3621 or 386-7643.

Posthumous showing for Victoria painter

Richard Ciccimarra, the Victoria artist who died on a trip to Greece last year, is honored posthumously at an exhibition on view at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, 1040 Moss.

Over 300 people attended the opening Wednesday of the show which had been postponed and delayed due to his illness and now, since his death, has become a commemorative event.

Elusive in life, his art remains elusive in death.

His paintings are made up of haunting shadows, half-lit figures, faceless individuals. As Colin Graham, former curator of the Art Gallery and a close friend of Ciccimarra, said, "A study of the drawings soon reveals the ease with which, in a few abbreviated strokes, he could say all that need be said about a human figure."

Baron Charles Huszar, a long time friend of the artist and guest at the show, lived with him for four years. Together they hunted and fished, but Huszar's most vivid memories are of "unframed paintings, all over the house, and even under my bed."

"He was very particular," the baron recalled. "He burnt many of his paintings, determined to keep only the best."

The show runs until Sept. 22 after which it is hoped that part of the exhibition at least will be circulated to other Canadian centres.

Had he lived, said Graham, Ciccimarra would undoubtedly have received far greater recognition on the Canadian scene. In spite of his early death at 48, the Canada Council had awarded him a Senior Fellowship and the National Gallery bought his work.

'Muscle' part key worry of islanders

By JIM HUME
Colonist Staff Writer

Just before we all start jumping up and down with joy over proclamation of the Islands Trust Act, it might be as well to take a close look at Section Six, the "muscle" section.

It's true that two sub-sections dealing with construction and sub-division plans were not proclaimed by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer on Friday. But they will be as soon as islanders have held elections to place their own representatives on the five-person board of trustees. Those sub-sections then, two and three, are not yet law and probably won't be until late this year or early 1975.

But there's still enough muscle in the other sub-sections to create concern.

Sub-section one is specific. It says that no municipality, or regional district, shall adopt, pass or otherwise approve a community plan, a regional plan, a land-use contract unless those plans are approved by the trust committee. You don't need to be a genius to understand what that means.

Sub-section four is the intriguing one, though, the section which should give us all cause for concern. It states quite carefully that the rules of the new game do not apply to the Crown or to an agency of the Crown. Well, it doesn't take put it that way, this government preferring the positive approach to negatives.

In fact the sub-section states "the Crown shall not develop or dispose of land situated within the trust," words with a nice authoritative ring. Until you get to the next few words which state "unless the Crown or Crown agency first gives notice of the development or disposition to the general trustees."

There's a nice little twist there.

If you own land in the Gulf Islands and want to develop anything from an outhouse to a home, you will need to submit your plans to the Trust for approval.

If you are B.C. Hydro or B.C. Ferries and you want to build anything from a sub-station to a new ferry terminal, you won't need to bother. All you have to do is "give notice" that you've moving the bulldozers in Monday and you're on your way.

Saanich - and the - Islands MLA Hugh Curtis says it well when he notes that the act provides different rules for the ordinary folk and the government, with the government, all-wise and all-powerful, excused from any restraints at all. And that, with the past record of Hydro in mind, isn't too healthy a situation.

Nor is the situation too healthy when you consider the past record of the NDP government in matters affecting the city of Victoria, where there hasn't exactly been a tendency to consult with the local authorities before arbitrary and ruthless decisions are made.

The latest move in this direction, the freezing of the B.C. Land Building in the Langley Street area, is so typical of a people's government which is only for some people but not all. No thought is given to the people who have put time and money into a project, who have worked closely and co-operatively with city officials to bring forth a development they and the city could be proud of.

Just an arbitrary order from Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall and no mention of compensation. No mention either of an alternative scheme, no mention of reasons for the move. Just "freeze it," and to heck with the consequences for developer or city.

It isn't the first time the world has seen such jackbooted action of course, but it is a first time for these parts and it has to leave those of us old enough to remember other protectors of the people feeling seriously concerned.

A week ago at this time I was in Kamloops witnessing the incredible sight and sound of a political party in power carving itself up in the public arena almost as though determined to self-destruct.

That effort apparently didn't worry Premier Barrett who shrugged the bitterness of debate off by saying "the NDP has always been this way." Agriculture Minister David Stupich and Health Minister Dennis Cocke were not quite so reassured. They both expressed concern publicly and urged a softening of delegates' attitudes towards "their" government. So did David Lewis, the national leader, when he addressed the convention.

As a neutral observer I wan't so concerned with the acrimony of the debate. After all, if members of a political party enjoy public self-flagellation, so be it.

What did concern me, and even scared me a bit, was the latest Victoria land freeze. Running the show in B.C. today is a government of some of the people, for some of the people, by some of the people.

Dear Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I hope it isn't too late to add my two-cents worth to the fray regarding the 15-year-old kid who resented taking showers with the guys in his gym class. I'm sure you received a rash of angry letters from people who thought you were evil-minded, immodest, a shameless hussy, or a hustler for nudist camps. But you were right, Ann — as usual. Your suggestion that the boy get professional help for his "problem" was a good one and I hope he takes it.

I am a homosexual who suffered the same uneasiness about showering with my classmates. Normal boys think nothing of romping around in the buff unless, as you said, they are extremely skinny, or very fat, or have some physical deformity. The young man who wrote revealed signs of latent homosexuality. Many of my gay friends, as well as myself, went through the same thing. I know, because we talked about it.

Please print this letter for two reasons — (a) to let your readers know that you were right. And (b) so that poor guy will realize he is not alone.—Another one.

Dear A.O.: Here's your letter and I appreciate the opportunity to reopen the subject. It's been a long time since I've been bombarded with such a blizzard of letters telling me I was "sick," "crazy," "out of my head," etc. A large number of girls wrote, which was interesting, since the same advice does NOT apply to them, although they assumed it did. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a young woman of 20, contemplating marriage to a guy I've gone with for two years. I feel we know each other very well.

My fiance is definitely a "mama's boy." He will not make a decision, of any kind without consulting his mother. We've had many arguments about this and I don't know how to handle it.

I don't want him to be constantly torn between his mother and me. There's got to be a way to show him what he is doing to our love.

How can I get the idea across that a wife should come first? I don't want to damage our relationship or put his mother down. Please tell me what you would do if you were in my shoes.—Second Choice.

Dear Sec.: I'd step out of those shoes and look for a better fit. But then you aren't me. I suspect you are very much in love with the guy and will do anything rather than give him up — in which case, here is what your life will be like. You will continue to play second fiddle to your mother-in-law.

ON VACATION IN HAWAII: Having read James Michener, I was led to believe Hawaii was threatened with destruction by over-zealous missionaries who brought disease, clothes and a bunch of drunken sailors led by Richard Harris who chased Julie Andrews around the island until she couldn't stop coughing.

After spending a week on this island, I don't believe a word of it.

Hawaii is plagued by a fleet of rental cars with new seat belts that will eventually drive their tourists screaming crazy right into the surf.

Our family was in pretty good spirits when we landed on what we called "our last family vacation together." (If you're keeping score, this is the sixth "last family vacation together" in as many years.) We rented a car, stuffed the luggage in the trunk and all piled in.

My husband turned the key and said, "All right, who isn't buckled up?"

"We are all buckled up," said the kids.

"Nonsense," he said. "If we were all buckled up the motor would start and the buzzer wouldn't hum. What about you?" he asked me suspiciously.

"Look for yourself," I said.

He reached down to check. "You're the one. You have your belt hooked into the centre seat strap. That's why the car won't start."

Romantic Hawaii where you can listen to the buzz of the seat belt sign, see the bright red warning light illuminate the sky, relax in a bikini seat belt while your varicose veins throb, an dwatch the sun set over the car rental parking lot.

Aloha to you, fella.

Fall clothing for men

Styling to remain classic

By MARGARET NESS

NEW YORK (CP) — The Men's Fashion Association of America says there will be a relaxed freedom in fall clothing for the male. But while it will be more comfortable, the styling will remain classic.

"These are the kind of fashions that give a man enough space to live his life in," says Chip Tolbert, the association's fashion director.

"They are for that increasingly prevalent breed of man who takes his fashion seriously, knows what he wants and enjoys wearing it."

This relaxed look has taken the place of the "return to elegance" promised a season or so ago but which never came off.

"Instead," says John Weitz, designing a collection for Palm Springs, "clothes grew calmer, more businesslike, more tasteful and more useful."

This has brought into fashion the leisure suit — a pleasant way to look on the weekend but not intended for business. However, all jackets have taken on this more relaxed feeling although the real suit jacket does remain shaped, with choices of either soft or tailored shoulders.

Lapels are wide with a balance achieved by generous flaps on straight or angled hacking pockets. There's an interest in the European-type jacket with high armholes and close-to-the-body fit.

"It's aimed at fashion-minded young men and forward-fashion mature men who are fortunate enough to have young physiques," Chip says. However, casual suits and jackets are more likely to be tailored with a British accent.

Donegal tweeds are universal favorites for fall in every category — suits, topcoats and jackets. Plain donegals are a good foil for patterned shirts and ties.

There are also such colorful donegal tweeds as a green-rust-and-red plaid. In keeping with his relaxed fall look, country tweeds can be dressed up for the city with a shirt and tie for leisure time with a sweater.

Stripes are making a comeback for fall, usually black with white or grey stripes or brown with cafe. One handsome costume consisted of a black-and-grey diagonal weave Chesterfield topcoat over a pin-striped wool flannel suit. Another combination was a brown chalk-stripe wool flannel suit with a grey-and-beige double-breasted vest and trench coat that matched the vest. Incidentally, flannel is popular, both wool and worsted. And they aren't just in the traditional grey. Shown in flannel suits were a tan diagonal weave and a bottle green with tattersal vest.

Vests are real fashion news for fall. Many match the suit. Others are contrasting. Some vests are reversible. There are even sweater vests with fabric suits. Vests are dignified additions to town suits and lendsa casual smartness to leisure jacket-and-slacks outfits.

This leisure or casual field includes the popular Western look, the safari, the waistlength blouson and the jogging suit such as a green-white-and-navy knit in a combination of dacron-orlon-acrylic-and Lycra Spandex.

Says the Men's Fashion Association:

"Colors for tailored clothing and sportswear are straight from the fall palette—earthy outdoor tones such as russet browns, brick, deep forest and bottle greens, camel shades and a lot of multicolor heather mixtures. These are often accented with winter-bright colors as yellow, burgundy, orange, strong greens and the like."

Is there a distinctive Canadian look as opposed to an American?

No, says the Men's Clothing Manufacturers' Association of Ontario.

"American and Canadian men are, generally speaking, on the sume fashion level. There is a slight difference to practised eyes, fuch like an accent that is easily detected by an experienced ear. But most Canadian mnufcturers most Canadian manufacturers are more concerned with quality than with a distinctive Canadian look."

The association also says that the Canadian total look is noted for being a bit ahead of the United States markets.

Incidentally, the Western Canada man usually orders a size or half-size larger than his eastern counterpart. Western Canada prefers a loosefitting garment. Ontario and Quebec prefer stylized and close-fitting clothes.

Trudeau flips through air during picnic

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau bounced about at a picnic Saturday in a day reminiscent of the recently-concluded federal election campaign.

The prime minister, making his first western visit since the July election, succumbed to temptation, climbed up on a trampoline and spent a pleasant few minutes flying into the air, doing back flips and front flips.

"He's very good," said George Goodman, trampoline instructor whose lessons to young people were interrupted by the prime minister.

"It's fun," the prime minister said after he gave up his demonstration with obvious reluctance so the formalities of the picnic could commence.

Trudeau was attending a picnic sponsored by three newly-elected Liberals who took seats from the New Democrats in the election: Simma Holt of Vancouver Kingsway, Mark Raines of Burnaby Seymour and Art Lee of Vancouver East.

Reporters were reminded of the election campaign as the prime minister moved through the crowd of several hundred shaking hands and signing autographs.

The crush was so bad in spots security officials were hard put to provide a little space for the prime minister.

Trudeau, dressed in a short-sleeved shirt, jeans and sneakers, seemed to enjoy himself.

Margaret Trudeau was to have accompanied her husband to the picnic but had to remain at the hotel with a sick Sacha. The Trudeaus brought both children on the trip.

The family was to spend today' horseback riding at Banff, Alta., and on Monday the prime minister was to meet Alberta Liberals before heading back to Ottawa.

Earlier Saturday, the prime minister attended a luncheon of B.C. Liberals. Officials said party members congratulated themselves for increasing their representation in Ottawa to eight MPs from four and there were discussions on how to consolidate gains.

Some speakers said Trudeau still does not fully understand the West and the prime minister agreed, adding it is up to senators and elected members to bring understanding and western points of view to Ottawa.

He underlined that in a short speech at the picnic when he said: "Forget this stuff about Ottawa being a far-away capital. It's your capital and your country. The country will grow in directions you people want."

He said those who had worked to get Liberals elected should stay involved in politics.

Trudeau flew here to attend a banquet given in tribute to Senator Arthur Laing who has spent 40 of his 70 years in public life. He used the opportunity to discuss the state of the economy with business leaders and labor leaders Friday.

He is expected to have other such discussions as his new majority government prepares for the opening of Parliament later this month.

French hotels glad archaic rule killed

PARIS (Reuter) — An old French hotel rule that irritated travellers, embarrassed illicit lovers and often misled detectives is being abolished by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's government.

From mid - September Frenchmen no longer will have to fill in those tell-tale police registration cards that have irked hotel guests in French for 100 years.

Foreign tourists must still fill in the cards but the government is studying a different registration system for them, too.

"These measures will allow people to travel in France without being tracked by police," says Interior Minister Michel Poniatowski.

Abolition of the cards relieves one of this country's worst bureaucratic headaches. Nearly 15 million cards were filled out last year, submerging hoteliers and police in thousands of hours of extra work.

Each day, hotels had to take the forms containing names, addresses, professions, sex, identity card numbers and signatures of all new guests to the local police station. There the cards were sorted and sent to regional headquarters for filing.

Often the forms were found useless or misleading by the police.

Hotel clerks seldom check details written on the cards, and irreverent Frenchmen sometimes taunt police by filling in such things as name: Bluebeard — profession: mass murderer.

Under sex, they might put "insatiable."

Poniatowski acknowledged that criminals invariably entered false names.

"The change is no great drama for us," a police spokesman said. "Any interesting information was always drowned in the flood."

He said the cards rarely led to the arrest of a criminal, though they were often useful in checking alibis.

Hotelkeepers are rejoicing.

Church movie tonight

Secret baptismal services, forbidden Christian meetings and the infamous Sofia court trial of 15 Christian ministers are featured in the film Operation Jericho which will be shown at 8:30 p.m. today in Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The movie was filmed almost entirely in Eastern Europe. Haralan Popov, who spent 13 years in Communist prisons and who subsequently wrote the best-selling paperback, Tortured for His Faith, is one of the ministers who appears in the film.

His son, Paul, will be at Emmanuel Baptist Sunday night to introduce the film.

"There is a real spiritual upsurge in many Communist countries," Rev. Norman Archer of Emmanuel said last week. "The Christian gospel is spreading rapidly but not without much suffering."

Magazine deserves better break

By RAY KERR
Colonist Chess Writer

I would like to take this opportunity to go to bat for one magazine that seems to be getting more and more out of vogue among B.C. chess players.

I'm referring to Northwest Chess, a Seattle-published chess magazine that in my opinion — considering the price — is one of the best bargains anywhere.

The magazine carries plenty of games, lots of B.C. chess news, all important tournament announcements in the Pacific Northwest, up-to-date ratings of all players participating in major Northwest tournaments — and all that for $5 a year.

What's more, the $5 subscription also entitles B.C. players to participate in all Washington and Oregon chess tournaments without joining either federation, but with U.S. Chess Federation membership not included. That's $10 extra, but with that comes another excellent magazine — Chess Life and Review.

What pains me is that Northwest Chess editor Russell Miller of Yakima, Wash., informs me there are only about 30 B.C. subscribers left. There were hundreds a while back.

What has happened in the last year or so is that NWC subscriptions are not mandatory any more for B.C. Chess Federation members. And when something is not mandatory, chess players usually won't go out of their way to acquire it.

Not even if it's only $5.

But I'll try it just the same and recommend that all those whose subscriptions to Northwest Chess have expired, renew them as soon as possible.

The place to send the cheque or money order is Washington Chess Federation, P. O. Box 1631, Yakima, Wash. 98907. And don't forget, it's $5 for adults, $4 those under 21 years of age.

Believe me, it's worth it. I've subscribed to the magazine for well over a decade now and I consider every penny well spent.

A few eyebrows went up when England qualified in its group for the final of the chess Olympiad in Nice, France, while the favored Canadian team got shunted into the consolation group.

But storm signs should've been up before the June Olympiad, particularly after

One of the Games of the Week is from this tournament — a neat win by England's Ray Keene over Spain's Raoul Bellon. Black's 17 . . . P-B4 is poor, and Keene's 19. B-Q5 starts what proves to be the winning sequence.

The other game comes from the Nice Olympiad, where grandmaster William Lombardy helped the U.S. team to the bronze medal (third-place finish) with an interesting win over Juan Galarza of Ecuador.

Lombardy's piece sacrifice with 14. N-Q5 may not have been sound but it certainly must have confused his young and inexperienced opponent. White's 28. RxP signalled the beginning of the end.

Britain, though playing without a single grandmaster, finished first ahead of West Germany, which had two grandmasters, and Denmark and Sweden, which sported supposedly-stronger lineups.

Holbrook as Lincoln a contest of identities

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I want people to feel they're actually seeing Abraham Lincoln," says the man who once made people feel they were really seeing Mark Twain.

So Hal Holbrook studied at becoming Lincoln in mood and thought, just as he had studied at being Mark Twain for the Broadway stage.

The role captivates and costs, just as it once cost Raymond Massey who played Lincoln in Abe Lincoln in Illinois. They used to say Massey was so much a prisoner of the part he wanted to be assassinated.

Now Holbrook is Lincoln, the 16th United States president, in a series of one-hour specials for NBC. The series of six shows will be aired at intervals over the next two years.

For Holbrook, the 12 weeks of filming was a contest of identities.

He became sad and lonely and depressed, isolated from his family in New York, kept from his friends here, literally imprisoned from early morning to night in the Lincoln mask.

Still he was aware of the illusion.

"Television moves too fast," he says now. "There was never fully time to live out the life of a character, as in a play.

"Scenes come and go too quickly and moods and attitudes must be changed. One show was literally nothing but Lincoln telling stories and jokes."

Worse, he worked at the part against the backdrop of Watergate and the ordeal of another president, Richard Nixon, who compared himself with Lincoln.

An independent who leans toward the Democratic party, Holbrook says:

"Lincoln was an honest man; even when he was a shrewd politician, he still had integrity. I have never seen that in Nixon.

"Mr. Lincoln had a deep and solid trust in the people. Nixon never trusted the people . . . Lincoln never isolated himself as Nixon did. He went to the people and he explained what was happening, and he listened."

Holbrook's mastery of Twain, which won him Broadway's Tony award, almost scuttled his career. For six years afterward he was offered few roles under 70 years of age. The turning point was his starring role in The Senator TV series. He is established now and holds no fears about his role as Lincoln.

To become Lincoln visually, Holbrook, 49, lean with a craggy jaw and wavy grey hair, underwent a three-hour transfomation every day.

Layer upon layer of foam rubber was applied to his face to create the familiar, homely features — the big nose, high cheekbones and sunken cheeks. Even his lips were covered. Then he had to endure agonizing itching during the long, hot hours of filming.

George Schaefer, who directed the series, based on Carl Sandburg's massive biography of Lincoln, said:

"When he arrived on the set each day he was Lincoln. The nasal twang, the long-strided gait, the way he used his hands in gestures. Until that makeup and the wardrobe came off after the day's last shot, Holbrook remained in character even off camera."

The first show in the series, Mrs. Lincoln's Husband, looked at Lincoln the family man in the White House. Subsequent shows will examine Lincoln as a prairie lawyer, a sagacious judge of people, a shrewd politician, commander-in-chief during the Civil War and as a post-war president planning for reconstruction in the days before his assassination. The series focuses on Lincoln the man, avoids the momentous events of the Gettysburg Address and the assassination.

Actors serious away from role

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Sutherland and Elliot Gould seem to specialize in movie roles with a distinct manic edge.

Some think they live those roles off-screen. Not so. Serious matters, such as the price of rice or politics, pop into their discussions of acting and what's funny (chicken is, goose isn't.)

Lounging at opposite ends of a long, beige sofa in their hotel suite, the actors Robert Altman first paired as stars in M-A-S-H talked about life, work and interviews.

They're promoting a new film, S-P-Y-S, their third together, in which they play CIA men in trouble with almost everybody.

"We've been doing a lot of interviews, talking to journalists so they'll know what to talk to us about," said Gould. "Evidently some actors have given the impression doing interviews is an unpleasant task."

"We've got a lot to share," Sutherland interrupted.

"Everybody wants to be in movies. Everybody is the central character in their own movie. It's a very social business. So it's really joyful, interesting to participate in interviews, particularly when the two of us are together."

Sutherland, born in Saint John, N.B., is a lanky blonde, six-foot-four and 185 pounds and wears a moustache. At 39, he has a string of film credits, including Klute with Jane Fonda and Don't Look Now with Julie Christie.

Gould, 35, looks heavier. He's six-feet-three and weighs 205, has dark eyes and brown electric-shock curly hair, and is a native of Brooklyn, N.Y. He appeared on Broadway in musicals and drama before he went to Hollywood for movies.

Once married to Barbra Streisand, by who he has a son, Jason, 7, Gould is divorcing Jennifer Bogart with whom he has two children.

Sutherland lives in a Quebec farmhouse with French actress Francine Bisset, who recently gave birth to their first child.

Evel's daredevil stunt 'pretty silly' to locals

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — "It all looks pretty silly to me," said Jerry Hunt, 90, a retired barber. "But it's all right with me, he can do what he wants and I wish him good luck."

Most of the residents of this peaceful town can't understand why Evel Knievel would want to jump over the Snake River Canyon in his sky-cycle, but they wish him well with his attempt Sunday.

Promoters said they expected 50,000 people to attend the event. So far, they estimate that less than half have arrived.

But hotels in the area report that their rooms are sold out and some are already taking advantage of the influx of city slickers to double their room rates.

Interviews with more than a dozen local residents reveal mixed emotions about the jump.

Some think it is just a big publicity stunt, some say it's good for business and tourism in Twin Falls, and others say they're more excited about the country fair that is going on this week.

Mayor Winston Jones, who said he will be at the site today, said he is sure Knievel's jump will be successful.

"With all that engineering know-how he has working for him, I assume he knows what he's doing," the mayor said.

Like several others, Jerry Swensen thinks the whole business is a publicity stunt. Several weeks ago Swensen, who owns a meat market, ran an ad saying Evel Knievel was full of baloney.

"Knievel's been saying he's going to jump the canyon for years, and he's always backing out. He also gave the impression he would do it on a motorcycle, and what's the big deal in going across the canyon in a jet-propelled rocket? It's all a put-on," he said.

Rolling Stones' sound 'less'

By KING LEE

If and when the movie Ladies and Gentlemen, The Rolling Stones does hit Victoria, it will be a little less than its Los Angeles and Chicago openings.

Director-producer Rollin Binzer described the film as "a simple documentary of the Rolling Stones doing 15 songs."

It was shot during the group's 1972 tour of the United States and footage was taken during the Houston and Fort Worth concerts.

The film opens with Brown Sugar then progress through Bitch, Gimme Shelter, Dead Flowers, Happy, Tumblin' Dice, Love in Vain, Sweet Virginia, Can't Always Get What You Want, On Down the Line, Midnight Rambler, Bye, Bye Johnny, Rip This Joint, Jumpin' Jack Flash and Street Fighting Man.

The thing about the Los Angeles and Chicago openings was that it was the quadraphonic-sound version of the film, coming through 44 speakers in four directions at once at a volume of 95 to 110 decibels.

"The film is so loud, so all encompassing, that it makes the show an intensely personal experience," said one female viewer in Chicago, "All the sensations in your head explode out from the force of sound pushing in."

The sound system is worth $60,000 alone and it must be put into a theatre by a crew of three engineers.

However, there are only three existing systems and there isn't sufficient funds to build more. So the film's producers have come up with another sound track, using "surround sound" which is less than quad but more than stereo.

The second version will be playing in most of the cities and the producers say the money made from them will be used to get more quad equipment.

The three quad sound units will be sent only to markets where a demand is assured.

The movie was originally intended as a television special. Just for fun, the producers did four of the numbers in quad and lead-singer Mick Jagger was extremely impressed with the results but said it would never work on television.

'Nixon' trees saved

HILO, Hawaii (UPI) — Parks officials on Hawaii's biggest island hope the two struggling "Nixon trees" have a chance for life now that their names have been removed.

As the Watergate scandal spread closer to the presidency, the name given the trees in honor of Richard Nixon proved to the the kiss of death for them.

Parks officials finally gave up hope of saving the trees as long as they bore the Nixon name.

The two banyans were among a long row of trees that have been planted by celebrities and dignitaries visiting Hawaii over the past four decades.

Most of the others have grown massive, with the unusual central trunk and scores of small trunks distinctive of the banyan.

But the two small banyans planted by Mrs. Nixon in 1972, named Sen. Nixon and Pat Nixon, apparently have been victims o fsentiment against the former president as a result of Watergate.

The Sen. Nixon tree replaced one that had been planted by Nixon in 1952 when he was a senator. The original was destroyed in a tidal wave.

Dan Matsumoto, deputy director of the island's parks and recreation department, said the trees were doing fine until Watergate started to implicate Nixon.

"The trees were cut off or uprooted four times," Matsumoto said, "and the signs were repeatedly vandalized."

Officials kept planting new trees and replacing the signs, but each new attempt met with destruction.

The Nixon trees were part of a grove along Hilo's banyan drive that ncludes large, sprawling banyans with name plates of such distinguished visitors as Franklin D. Roosevelt, baseball great Babe Ruth, movie producer Cecil B. Demille and flier Amelia Earhart.

Victoria taxi firms oppose rival's bid to unite

Application Monday

. . . to operate across entire peninsula

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

At least two Victoria taxi firms will oppose an application by C and C Taxi Service Ltd. to consolidate its Sidney Taxi and Transportation Co. with the main Victoria operation.

The application, which requires the approval of the Motor Carriers Commission (a provincial body), will be heard Monday morning at the provincial courthouse.

The protesting companies, Island Taxi and Blue Bird Cabs Ltd., argue that such a consolidation would give C and C a competitive advantage in the Saanich Peninsula, an area of growing population.

John Prevedoros, general manager of C and C, said Friday that his company is only planning ahead and trying to provide an economical taxi service for peninsula residents.

The heart of the matter lies in the restrictions placed on companies in this area with regard to their operation zones. City companies, for instance, can only pick up and unload passengers within a five-mile radius of Victoria's city hall.

They may take passengers to the 10-mile radius Sidney zone but not pick them up. However, Sidney Taxi can pick up passengers but is limited to its present eight cabs. A consolidation would mean that all 42 C and C cabs could operate fully in both areas.

Prevedoros said that if all his cabs (C and C is the biggest here) were allowed full rights in both areas, his would be a far more economical operation with one result being fewer applications for fare increases. He said his cabs would be driven fewer unproductive miles.

There are, at last count, 29 taxi firms with approximately 140 cabs operating in the Greater Victoria area.

Donald French, manager of Island Taxi and one who is opposed, said the same rights should be provided to all carriers in the area.

"That would be the ideal situation," he said in an interview. "As it is, if this thing (the application) goes through, it would give C and C the whole thing and that smacks of a government-approved monopoly."

French pointed out there are stiff fines if the zone rules are broken. "There's a Mountie out at the airport now whose job it is to check out cabs," he said.

French is in opposition

The Colonist has learned that one company recently was charged with a violation but it was later withdrawn.

"And none of this should have to happen," French added. "The companies in this area by and large have gotten along quite well over the years. Now I'm afraid this feeling may disappear."

Blue Bird manager Bruce Woodward said that he too would be appearing at the hearing and interprets the C and C application as a potential restriction to business.

Woodward said the zones were laid out in the late 1930s and bear little relationship to today's situation.

"They certainly need updating," he added.

With zones as they are, there is an area between Royal Oak and Elk Lake where it is not legal for residents to call either Sidney or Victoria for taxi pickup.

Key operating areas in the Sidney zone are the international airport at Patricia Bay and the two ferry terminals. The only other company operating in the zone is Beacon Taxi of Sidney, a small firm that began last year.

C and C has exclusive rights granted by the federal government to pick up and deliver passengers at the airport but cabs operating under its name can only deliver passengers to the Victoria zone, Prevedoros stated.

"Sidney and the peninsula is a growing area," Prevedoros said. "Why, they need more cabs out there."

The C and C manager asked:

"Why didn't they (the other companies) think of applying for the zone? I think they now see that I've got a good idea.

"We didn't oppose Beacon's application when they started up but we could have," Prevedoros said. He added that C and C made a similar application for increased business a year ago but the commission asked him to resubmit it.

"And now we have this hearing. Well, I welcome it as it will clear the air," he said.

"I've got the only union-driver operation in western Canada here," Prevedoros said. "I pay top wages and fringe benefits and I have to keep the wolf away from the door by operating the best way I know how. It's up to an employer to do the best he can.

"You know one of the last rights we have these days is our right to go broke," he added with a chuckle.

Chase hits 140 mph

Reserve Constable Dan Canyluk of Richmond was injured when his car went out of control on a corner during the chase shortly before midnight Friday.

Police stopped a man who had led the chase, which began when officers spotted a car speeding through residential areas of Richmond at about 60 miles an hour.

One patrol car pursued the speeder and was joined by two others. Three other patrol cars joined in just south of the George Massey tunnel on Highway 99.

Zailow was to appear in court Monday.

Thirty-five die in plane crash

JAKARTA (AP) — Thirty-five of the 39 persons aboard a Garuda Indonesian Airway plane that crashed in south Sumatra on Saturday are dead, Indonesia's official Antara news agency reported today.

Quake rattles South Mexico

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — An earthquake registering 4.5 on the Richter scale shook southern Mexico on Saturday morning, but police said there were no reports of damage or injuries.

The seismological station at Mexico City said the three-second quake's epicentre was 180 miles southwest of Mexico City.

Crash kills Calgarians

INVERMERE, B.C. (CP) — Two Calgary residents were killed and another was seriously injured when their car went out of control off Highway 93 near Marble Canyon and struck a culvert.

Police identified the victims as John K. Neill, 80, and his wife Elizabeth, 75. The car was driven by their daughter, Elizabeth Rennie.

A spokesman for Kelly Douglas Co. Ltd., which operates the Super-Valu chain, said in a telephone interview from Vancouver there are no plans to open new stores in Victoria in the foreseeable future.

The spokesman said at one time the company had five stores in the Victoria area. He did not know when the company began to phase out the stores.

There are approximately 100 Super-Valu stores in Vancouver and throughout the province.

The spokesman, Tom Dole, said Victoria was the only place in B.C. where, "we lost our shirt."

He blamed the wrong choice of stores and wrong locations for Super-Valu's lack of success in Victoria.

The company bought old stores, mainly in downtown locations, which was a wrong move, Dale said.

Someday, he predicted, Super-Valu will have another go at Victoria, but not until "we can do it in a big way."

At the moment, there are too many grocery stores in Victoria; the competition would be too fierce to promise any degree of success for new stores, he added.

The announcement that the last store would close its doors for good came earlier this week in newspaper advertisements.

The building is slated for demolition and the land is to be sold.

Several years ago, Vancouver developer J. A. Reid held an option on the property. He planned at that time to build a $7 million commercial-residential complex on the site, but failed to reach agreement with the city over the project's density and height.

Reid said Friday he was "still involved" in the possible purchase of the land, but added there are no immeiate plans for development.

LONDON — Jittery fellow passengers and an aircraft breakdown made deposed Cyprus president Archbishop Makarios three hours late in flying to Geneva to confer with Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros.

After Makarios boarded a British Airways Trident jetliner, some passengers complained they did not want to travel on the same plane for fear the archbishop's enemies might attack. The captain ordered a check to make sure all baggage from the previous flight had been removed. A hydraulic system breakdown followed, another plane was brought in and the flight took off nearly three hours late with all passengers aboard.

NANAIMO NEGLECTED IN EARLY DAYS

By JAMES K. NESBITT

New Westminster is British Columbia's No. 1 city — incorporated in 1860.

No. 2 on the list is Victoria — 1862.

The Colonist had a correspondent in Nanaimo, and he wrote Jan. 2 of 1874: "The New Year's festivities were opened by the Good Templars with a grand entertainment at the Literary Institute on New year's Eve.

"In the musical department, Mr. S. Waddington, Miss Gough and Mr. James Malpass took a prominent part. Mr. Waddington's fine singing elicited enthusiastic applause.

"On New Year's Day the anniversary of Ebenezer Church was held, and the teachers and friends connected with the Wesleyan Sunday school gave a good entertainment.

"Turning from festivities to the work-a-day world — coal mining is the real basis of well-being in this place.

"There is now considerable interest felt in the movement being made towards developing Harewood mine.

"The contract for driving a tunnel, or shaft, of 600 feet, has been given out to our esteemed townsman, Mr. Walter Aikenhead, and work will be commenced forthwith."

This correspondent signed himself "Blackdiamond," and 1874 was not very old when he proceeded to lash out at the provincial government for ignoring, and bleeding, as he saw it, his favorite city of Nanaimo.

He wrote thusly: "Nanaimo has been the victim of shameful neglect for several years back, and the present year seems to have brought no redress.

"The general opinion seems to be that the government in Victoria — our lackbstre rulers — is trying to freeze us into a municipality.

"The surest way to success in that line would be for the government to remove one or two chief obstacles to incorporation.

"Let them bridge the ravine, replace the present man-trap at Victoria Crescent with a substantial roadway, and expend a reasonable sum in grading some of our principal streets.

"We have no doubt whatever, that the town would be better under municipal government than it is under the present abortion of a provincial government.

"One thing is quite certain — it couldn't be any worse.

"But it would not be fair to start us out in our present naked, starved condition.

"Let them give us a good coat and a full belly, else the very first thing we would have to do would be tax ourselves to do what government ought to have done long ago.

Day after day "Blackdiamond" had his say:

"Notwithstanding the drawbacks the provincial government inflicts upon us, this town is making substantial progress.

"Mechanics, builders and laborers are all kept busy, while three coal mines are in full blast.

"There are 10 stores here, four hotels, four churches, four boarding houses, two Sabbath schools, Masonic Hall, Odd Fellows Hall, Good Templars Hall, a newspaper office, Literary Institute, and other buildings and institutions, as the auctioneer would put it, 'too numerous to mention.' "

"Nanaimo's complaint — once more the attention of the provincial government has been called by a Grand Jury to the dangerous condition of the bridges in Nanaimo, and the total inadequacy of the constabulary force.

"Nanaimo, long important, has grown to be, in point of productiveness, and its marine interests, the most important community in British Cblumbia.

"Denied its fair share of representation in the legislature, it has been systematically cheated out of its fair share of government expenditure.

"For public buildings it can only boast a rough-board, white-washed court house, and a jail scarcely more pretentious than a well-to-do farmer's poultry house.

"Both together would not make decent out buildings for such a court house and jail as Nanaimo is entitled to have.

"The treatment that this town has received at the hands of the Provincial Government is simply disgraceful."

The Nanaimo Free Press, however, decided the people of Nanaimo were squawking too much, and so editorialized:

"What do the inhabitants of Nanaimo want?

"Do they expect the government to provide them with planked sidewalks?—that the government is to do everything for them, and that they are to do nothing for themselves?

"Verily, it is nearly times these good fellows awoke to a sense of the miserable condition of their town, from one end to the other.

"It would be difficult to find a town in a more pitiful plight, and this is a town boasting of its wealth and importance.

"Victoria and New Westminster are sufficiently public spirited to themselves make public improvements; they do not expect everything done for them at the general expense, and why should not Nanaimo follow suit?

"It would be well if the people of Nanaimo would be impressed with the wholesome sentiment of the axiom 'God helps those who help themselves.'

"If Nanaimoites prefer the cheap and nasty, and like their money better than improvements and decency, so be it, but let us hear no grumbling about it."

The Colonist, however, preferred to think the government was neglecting Nanaimo:

"The Free Press says Nanaimo is in a pitiful plight. "If so, that only shows how shamefully the government treats it. The government forgets the people of Nanaimo have contributed their full share of taxation.

"We have no hesitation in saying that what The Free Press says about the people of Nanaimo is a wanton and atrocious slander—upon one of the most important and respectable communities in British Columbia.

"The people of Nanaimo are honest men, working for a respectable living; and that is rather more than The Free Press can claim for its masters."

MARION JOAN DUNSMUIR— Mrs. Houghton . . . bride in early-day Nanaimo.

All through 1874 there was talk in Nanaimo of incorporation.

There were many who didn't want it, preferring to live unfettered by too many laws.

However, in December The Colonist noted: "Nanaimo to be incorporated—Mr. Alexander Dunsmuir has arrived in Victoria by the steamer Maude, the bearer of a petition to the lieutenant-governor praying that the town of Nanaimo may be created a municipality.

"With everything fair and square, and with a good liberal start by the provincial government, Nanaimo ought to find it to her advantage to have control of her own local revenues and works.

"But, most assuredly, it is due to Nanaimo that she should have a fair start, for the provincial exchequer is largely indebted to Nanaimo."

Alexander Dunsmuir, who carried the petition to Victoria, was the younger son of Robert Dunsmuir, Nanaimo's very most important citizen, the owner of the coal mines which made Nanaimo thrive.

I think young Dunsmuir, then in his twenties, may, in some measure, could be called the father of Nanaimo and this I had not known before I did this research. There is, you see, something new always turning up in history.

Alexander Dunsmuir came to be a problem. He went off to San Francisco and took to the bottle, dying in his forties.

Nanaimo's first civic election came in January of 1875, the contestants being Mark Bate and James Harvey, a Dunsmuir son-in-law.

Mark Bate won, and his councillors were John Bryden, another Dunsmuir son-in-law; R. Brunn, J. Dick, J. Hirst, R. Nightingale, J. Pawson and W. Raybould.

The Colonist noted: "After the official declaration of the winner, the friends of the new mayor 'chaired' him—the election appears to have been a most exciting one, but good order, and, for the most part, for Nanaimo good nature reigned throughout.

"The mayor and councillors were immediately sworn into office, and held their first meeting, when His Worship expressed the hope that all differences would be sunk, and that all would work for the good of the community.

"The next evening Mayor Bate entertained the city council at a champagne supper at Peck's Hotel.

"The building known as the 'old stone house' will shortly be fitted up and converted into Nanaimo city hall.

"This building was erected in 1850, by Mr. Isbister, for the Hudson's Bay Company, and is built of stone, the walls being two feet thick."

Here are some social notes from The Nanaimo Free Press at this period in Nanaimo's history:

"A number of persons assembled on the Departure Bay Road to witness a race between Mr. Peck's horse Billy, and Mr. Quennell's horse Billy. The race from the brow of the hill just beyond the Millstone Bridge to Departure Bay and back.

"Mr. John Fear (with 50 pounds of shot to make weight) rode Mr. Peck's horse, while Mr. Quennell rode his own horse, Mr. Q's Billy winning easily — distance, six miles, time of winning horse, 20 minutes."

"Mr. Planta of Victoria Collegiate School has been appointed to the charge of the Nanaimo school."

"In response to an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Webb and Mr. J. Westwood, a large number of the residents of Nanaimo wended their way to the Millstream bridge to take part in a farewell picnic given by mine host and hostess of the Miners Hotel, prior to their departure for 'England, home and beauty'."

A Cross for Little Jean

Two and three-quarter miles south of Lund on the British Columbia coast, and five miles north of Powell River, a large rock looms out of the Gulf of Georgia. It stands roughly a quarter mile offshore. On dark nights shadows of the mainland coast obscure the rock.

Allowing for wind, tide and storm there is ample freeway between the rock and regular shipping lanes. A ship in trouble with this grey mound of granite would be seriously off course.

Yet, nearly 30 years ago, on a dark, wet and gloomy night a passenger vessel did strike the rock with tragic consequences.

Today, boats sail past the rock and give it little thought other than perhaps to ponder its curious name — Dinner Rock.

It's a cold, grey, bleak and lonely rock, perhaps three or four hundred feet across, a resting place for seagulls, cormorants and migrating birds. Here and there are tufts of scattered brush, rock moss and time eroded crevices and that's about all, but not quite all, for on this empty barren rock there stands a cross. A small wind and rain-battered cross.

The story of the white cross on Dinner Rock has been all but lost in the mists of time, and lives today only in the memory of those who survived the tragedy of one of the worst sea disasters on the B.C. coast.

The cross was erected by M. Henry Pavid in memory of his then, only child who lost her life when the motor vessel Gulf Stream foundered. For years after, Mr. Pavid, in a small boat, travelled the 13 hazardous miles from Refuge Cove to the rock to paint and care for the cross.

The Gulf Lines motor vessel the Gulf Stream, a 146-foot vessel, under command of Captain Craddock left Westview, three and one-half miles south of Powell River, at 7:30 Saturday night, Oct. 11, 1947.

"It was the blackest night I have ever known," later said Ray Ketchum, second officer who was at the helm from the time the ship left Westview until the grounding. "There was a three force or 20-mile-an-hour, wind blowing — not really rough but very dark and black."

The ship after leaving Westview was alive with lights, gay with the chatter and laughter of passengers and the sounds of music from an accordion played below decks. Saloon and stateroom lights glowed warmly. Two children were asleep in their bunks, another on a wide settee.

Suddenly, a series of grinding crashes shook the vessel. Lights went out, women screamed!

The Gulf Stream had climbed 30 feet up the barnacled slopes of Dinner Rock! She hung there for several seconds like a grotesque, bewildered sea monster, then, with a heavy crash, fell over on her port side, leaving the stern submerged. Lights went out as water poured into the vessel bringing with it death and destruction.

Henry Pavid, who with his wife and 18-month-old daughter had boarded the vessel at Westview enroute to Refuge Cove tells his story:

"There was a moderate southeast wind blowing as we pulled out of Westview, three and one-half miles south of Powell River, at 7:30 last night.

"Quite a heavy sea was running and it was raining. It wasn't foggy, but it was thick. Visibility was fairly low. My wife and I were in the stern cabin of the boat. Our baby, Jean, a year and a half, was asleep on a wide seat.

"There was only one other couple in the cabin with us.

"I found out later they were Mr. and Mrs. Fleck. They were going to Refuge Cove, too.

"We had been visiting my parents. We were going back to Refuge Cove where I work as a boom man.

"It was just about an hour after we left Westview that it happened. The first thing was a jar. Not too hard. Like we'd hit a sunken log.

"Then, there were more jars and the bow of the boat seemed to be rising in the air. The first thing I thought about was saving our youngster. I started to rush across to her. My wife screamed.

"Suddenly the right side of the boat lifted quite heavily. Jean slid right down the bench and I missed her. My wife went sliding past me too. I was knocked down by the force of the grounding. All the lights went out and we were in complete blackness.

"Then the water started to rush in because we were so far down by the stern. It seemed like the whole cabin was full of water instantly. I was panic-stricken about my little daughter. I felt so horribly helpless. I felt it wasn't true. It couldn't be true.

I was floating inside the cabin. Next, I was under water trying to hold my breath.

"I couldn't hold it any longer. I started to gasp for air and swallowed some water. I was sure I was drowning. Suddenly I popped up to the surface.

"The boat was lying on its port side and the cabin was completely flooded.

"Because of the blackness I couldn't see anybody else. I didn't know where my wife or my baby were. When I looked up I was right by the window. I smashed it with the palm of my hand. Then I had to pry the pieces out so I could crawl through.

"I squeezed out through the window and landed on the side of the steel hull. The Gulf Stream was lying flat on her side. Because the beach on Dinner Rock slopes so steeply, the ship's bow was about 25 feet up in the air.

"There was a terrific commotion up ahead of me. People were hanging on to the side of the boat and the swell was breaking over some of us.

"I crawled up the steep hill, pulling myself along by the guard rail. I got hold of a life belt — one of the crew members was handing them out — and crawled back to where I had broken the window.

"Mr. Fleck was just coming out the window and my wife was right behind him.

"The stern was still sinking fast and the water was almost over the window when my wife got out.

"My intention was to get down there again to see if I could get hold of my youngster, but it was too late. The baby was drowned somewhere inside that black, flooded cabin.

"My wife said she didn't see the baby after the water came in. Little Jean had just disappeared. We were both so shocked it just all seems a blank now.

"I pulled Mr. Fleck and my wife up to the highest part of the boat and made them secure. There was no rope to lash them to the rail, so they just hung on there for dear life. Other people came out of the blackness towards 'midship and some of the crew and I helped them to hang on.

"The four lifeboats and rafts were all near the stern half of the ship and were completely covered by water. There was no chance to launch them.

"I was badly cut about the face and bleeding badly. I don't know how it happened but I must have cut myself crawling through the broken window.

"The ship's bow was sticking well up above the beach—too far for anybody to jump down. The crewmen got a hawser, made a loop in it.

"The women were lowered by this rope to the beach one at a time. Then the rest of us, about 25 I think, followed them down.

"The people who drowned were completely out of sight inside the ship. I think they were in a cabin below decks.

"When we were sitting in the stern cabin we could hear an accordian playing dance music in the stateroom below us.

"Every one once in a while you'd see a crew member going down there.

"When we landed on the beach we found it was very steep and rocky. There are no trees on the rock only some brush. We didn't try to move from there. Some of the people were badly injured and we were all suffering from shock.

"Lucky for us the fishpacker Betty L. was coming right behind the Gulf Stream when we ran ashore.

"Nobody in Powell River knew about the sinking so they had to phone for ambulances after we dokced.

"Then we were all taken to the hospital.

"I figured the ship was going pretty well full speed when we hit. After the crash everybody seemed to be doing everything they could to help each other. The crew was very good. They did everything they could for the passengers.

"I've been on the water for 15 years and I would say the visibility wasn't bad. It was navigable all right. The Gulf Stream has a searchlight. I think it carries about a mile. It wasn't turned on, though.

"I'm going to demand a full investigation of the sinking and I'm telling my story to the provincial police."

Among those listed dead and injured in the wreck of the Gulf Stream were: Dead: Mrs. Kay Elliot, 1125 West Hastings; and her adopted son, Lyle Frederick Elliot, 2. Douglas Frederick Lipsett, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lipsett, 1125 West Hastings. Mrs. S. Fleck, Refuge Cove. Jean Pavid, 18 months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Henry Pavid, Refuge Cove.

When diver Unwin came up with the first victim he reported that little Jean Pavid's body had apparently drifted away from the wreck. "The baby isn't there," he said. "I saw a baby bottle but I left it."

Describing the loss of his wife, S. Fleck, whose leg had been broken recently and the cast of which was lost in the crash, said he followed M. Henry Pavid through a smashed window after the crash.

"I was yelling that my wife was still down there but they told me everybody was out," he said. "I knew she was still there but I couldn't move because the cast had broken on my leg."

The Pavid baby, asleep in the rear salon on the main deck was washed away from her parents and drowned as heavy seas surged into the blackened room.

"It was all over in about 10 seconds," Capt Jack Craddock said. The Captain added that he had checked the ship on her course about 40 minutes previously and had left the second mate, Ray Ketchum, on watch in the pilot house.

This, he said, is normal procedure aboard ship.

From her hospital bed in Powell River, Mrs. Walkem, widow of George Walkem, former president of the Gulf of Georgia towing company, described her rescue.

"I was flung against the wall, and a big heavy man who had been sitting on a settee, was thrown from it and landed on me. As I struggled up the big man stood on my chest and pulled himself out through the doorway, his weight cracking my ribs.

"Then Mr. Peterson came and cried, "Come on," as he broke a large window with his hand. I yelled, Don't go without me. He said he wouldn't and hauled me through the opening. He undoubtedly saved my life.

"At this point the other two passengers, the Russell sisters, also took hold of me to follow us out, but a board or some object struck June (Miss Russell) in the stomach and knocked her out.

"Her sister Beverley supported her and kept her head above water. Peterson took me up top and dragged me along the hull toward the bow, where he lowered me to the rocks. I learned later that Johnny Van der Gracht, the cook, had rescued the Russell girl."

Said Mrs. Eunice Ellis of North Vancouver who was in the ship's forward lounge. "Before I realized what had happened, I was waste deep in water and I heard my son, Elmer Ellingson, Salt Spring home . . . a labor of love.

RIVENDELL

Two years ago a story appeared in the ISLANDER called Island Interlude and this story, Rivendell, is about the same young family, David, Cathy and Justin, after they left the smaller Gulf Island on which they had been living and eventually found the land and the life for which they had been searching.

On Salt Spring Island they discovered some acreage which had been homesteaded a hundred years ago and had now lain neglected and untenanted for several generations. Here, they decided, they could make the sort of life they wished for themselves and their four-year-old son. They could farm, raise their own food to a great extent, and achieve some sort of serenity which they could not do in the city.

They left the log cabin where they had been so happy. They gave their chickens to friends, arranged for Baggins, the cat, to be looked after by the new occupants of the cabin. They sold their boat, Pippa, packed their few household belongings and moved to Victoria. Here David went back to his library work and put in what was to him, the longest year of his life.

Justin grew and went to kindergarten and Cathy went about life in an apartment, the saving grace of which was the magnificent view they had of the city and the misty backdrop of the purple mountains rising from the sea.

This was a year of disillusionment, particularly for David. City life was not for them — they hated to see, from their high balcony, the smog from the mills drifting out over the morning city. They hated to see the lovely old houses being ruthlessly demolished to be replaced by sterile apartments and they were never without the sound of traffic.

Cathy took Justin for walks in the beautiful Government House gardens and he watched the mallards sailing over the still dark pools. She took him to the provincial museum, which he loved, and she took him to the Undersea Gardens, but the small boy couldn't have a dog or a cat, couldn't run or shout in the apartment and couldn't play outside because of the traffic.

One weekend in April, 1973, David went to Salt Spring and felled 20 trees with a Stihl power saw which Cathy had given him for a birthday present the previous year. This initial clearing was to enable him to build a road into the homesite they had chosen.

In July, after 11 months, David resigned from his job. Once again Cathy packed up her treasures and stored them. They purchased two tents, sold their VW beetle and bought a 1965 VW pickup and also a small Ford tractor.

They pitched their tents under the maples and arbutus on a high spot of the property. Justin occupied one tent, sharing it with Gelert, the eight-months-old Great Dane and half golden retriever which they got from Mother Cecelia of the Good Shepherd Shelter. They named him Gelert after the famous hound of Bedgelert of the Welsh tale, a story which Justin will tell you at the drop of a hat.

Cathy did all her cooking over an open fire. Water for washing was carried from a spring 200 yards away and drinking water was brought from Ganges.

They felled trees and under four huge cedars they erected a most artistic log outhouse, good practice for building their future house.

They set about doing the necessary clearing and the ruins of a very old habitation were respectfully removed. David and Cathy felt, that on this land of theirs something of the spirit of those who long ago had lived there still lingered.

David felled and trimmed 70 logs, eight inches to 12 inches in diameter and 30 to 40 feet in length. He hauled them by tractor to the building site and in one week he and Cathy, "assisted" by Justin, peeled them with an instrument called a "spud" lent to them by a friend. They rolled them over with a peavey and did 10 a day.

On Aug. 4, 1973, the cement was poured for the foundations of the house. Strangely enough, according to information in the provincial archives, it was on this date, Aug. 4, 1873, that the land was pre-empted by William Daniel Anderson and Crown grant was issued Aug. 26, 1885.

Also in the archives is a letter written 40 years ago by William Daniel Anderson to Major J. S. Matthews, the late Vancouver City Archivist. He writes: "My family or at least the Anderson family are not of African or negro origin on my Father side. He was a Scotsman born in Dumfries, Scotland, known as Black George bein like a lot of Scots. My mother was born near little Rock, Ark. She is half Irish and Cherokee. I was born in Victoria in the 1st of September 1856, went to Salt Spring Island on the 13 of October 1860. Then came back to Victoria at the age of 17 and served an apprenticeship in the Albion iron works machine shop, at the age of 24 became chief engineer of steam tug Pilot."

It is thought that William Daniel Anderson's father was George Henry Anderson, farmer, who pre-empted land on Ganges Harbor in 1861. Although Mr. Anderson says that his father was not colored his name appears in a "Partial list of colored immigrants to British Columbia, 1858-1871." The Andersons seem to have been amongst the negroes who came to Vancouver Island in the late 1850s to escape persecution in the United States and who were permitted by Governor Douglas to settle on Salt Spring Island.

After the logs were peeled David and his father, with mallets and chisels, saddle-notched each log and fitted them into place, raising them by hand with the aid of a tripod and chain block, lent by the same good friend.

When the house was 13 logs high, four large cross beams, 26 feet long, were hoisted into place. The 36-foot ridgepole was raised and 26 rafters cut, hauled, peeled and put into position. On this day a group of young friends arrived to give a hand as was the custom long ago.

David next cut logs and traded them to the local mill for planks for the roof. He built window frames into the logs and set in glass at very little cost. In the gable ends he set beautiful triangle and lozengeshaped panes.

In November, with snow on the ground, they thankfully struck their tents and moved into the house. At this time there were no doors or windows and no ends in the gables and the openings were covered with sheets of plastic giving to the great room a somewhat dim and religious light!

There was a wood stove in the kitchen area, the floors were down but not yet pegged and the logs not chinked. It was not until after Christmas that windows were in, a Franklin stove installed and chinking completed.

Before the house was finished David took time off to build a chicken house and prune the old gnarled pear and apple trees which had certainly not been touched for over 40 years but which produced a surprisingly good crop of apples that Fall.

Hens were purchased and three geese, Spiro, Buttercup and Brownie. Poor Brownie later became the prey of a maurading coon. Four pregnant ewes were domiciled in the upper field and a third interest purchased in a spoiled black ram.

An artist friend, Kenneth Bloomfield, carved on a massive driftwood log the name they chose for the place, Rivendell, from their favorite Tolkien books and this hangs at the second gate in to the property.

Today, 11 months after they pitched their tents at Rivendell, the lovely house stands in the sunlit clearing. Around three sides is a wide verandah with rustic pole railings and stone facings. There is a garage with rough shake roof—very rough, says David, as it was his first attempt at cutting cedar shakes.

A log woodshed and workshop is half-way completed and will have a shake roof and stone foundations in keeping with the house. In the upper field, golden now with broom, is the chicken house, a covered run for 12 goslings born at Rivendell and of never ceasing interest to the circling ravens and hawks, and there is a smaller pen and house for Cornish game chicks. There is a new orchard coming on, pears, apples, plums and cherries and an English walnut and a large fenced kitchen garden, entirely the work of David's 76 year old father and where Justin gathers, with great joy, the first young radishes.

Across the field the tumble-down sheep shed has been repaired and here lives Mouser, a small tabby kitten. There is a sheep corral and a larger corral and shelter for Minstrel, the beautiful half-Arab gelding which David rides when he has time and which Cathy will ride next Fall. Minstrel was in the nature of a gift.

Running downhill from the house is a belt of woodland where cushions of emerald moss and giant sword ferns glow in the fugitive sunlight drifting through the firs and cedars. In these woods are the remains of four great cedar pillars which must have framed the original barn. Now trees, probably 60 years old grow amongst them. Cathy calls this her Woodhenge.

In the house great changes have taken place. A platform, 24 by 12 feet was built over one end for a sleeping lift, with a rustic pole railing and beneath the loft was built a bedroom for Justin, a kitchen and a bathroom.

Cathy has collected, the appropriate furniture for the rustic type of dwelling—an ancient churn, an oak desk, an old drop-leaf games table. Brass Aladdin lamps shed a soft radiance an a large bookcase on one wall holds their treasured books. In Justin's room is a red carpet, his own bookcase, and all the treasures dear to a small boy's heart including a jar of weed and tadpoles.

Beside the Franklin where bark fires blaze in the cool evenings is a quaint hooded cradle which rocks gently at the touch of a foot and this is for a newcomer to Rivendell who is expected to arrive soon. This is an event eagerly looked forward to by Justin and he knows all about it. It will be beautiful, he knows, and meanwhile he takes great care of "Kate" and "his baby."

At the farm they have been discovering relics of the early settlers, rusted tools and very old bottles. They have found a crumbling Dutch planter's hoe, horse shoes, an iron stirrup and a cracked iron cooking pot which once long ago may have hung on a crane over an open fire. A recent thrilling discovery was the initials "J. A." carved into a rock outcrop at the back of the house. Could these be the initials of James Anderson who died in 1946 on Salt Spring, mentioned in the Vancouver Province in 1946 as a "noted negro pioneer?"

There are no doubt many young families searching for this type of life. David and Cathy feel that they are lucky although more than just luck has been entailed. There has been lots of hard work and there is much more to come. David feels doubly fortunate in that he could build such a house for less than the cost of the cheapest new car on the market today. The trees and the labor were theirs, and so, too, was the dream which they are realizing for themselves and their children. It is to be hoped that the future will allow them to continue living in the way they have chosen.

Jean Erickson at work.

Hooking the Future

"Rest all you can," was the advice the doctor gave Mrs. Jean Erickson upon discharge from hospital. The time was the mid 1930s, the place Victoria, and Mrs. Erickson had been seriously ill.

Enforced rest can be both depressing and boring to a naturally energetic person. Mrs. Erickson had grown up on a Nova Scotia farm, which meant with proper respect for the work ethic. Her after-life had been a busy one. Characteristically, she immediately cast about in her mind for an occupation which would give her something to think about but not be too strenuous.

Her thoughts went back to what might be termed the family craft. A Pennsylvania Dutch grandmother had brought the art of rug-hooking to Nova Scotia and it had been passed on from mother to daughter.

Jean remembered that she had hooked seven rugs for her hope chest before leaving home at the age of 17. She had learned to hook when only 10 years old.

She hadn't thought about making rugs for a long time. During the First World War she came west to work in a bank at Wyngard, Saskatchewan, and in 1919 married the accountant just back from overseas service.

Being already well supplied with rugs, she had no reason to make more, and her busy life as wife and mother of five didn't leave her much time anyway. Now, however, was the time for a return engagement which Jean embarked upon in a manner typical of the Depression era, with as little expense as possible.

The next-door neighbor was repairing the floor of his porch and discarding long, narrow strips of board. Jean asked if she could have some to make a frame on which to set up her rug. Then she searched her old trunk, and sure enough came up with a hook. So far, so good.

Then she went to a grocery store and bought a burlap sugar sack for the munificent sum of five cents, hemmed it into a square, attached it to the frame and was ready to take off.

She couldn't quite follow her mother and grandmother's method though. They had carded and spun the wool from their own sheep, then combed the woods and garden for plants out of which to make suitable dyes.

Jean remembers that golden rod produced a pale yellow dye, elderberry ed, and beech nut leaves a lovely brown. Even tea was used for an ecru shade.

"Mother used to put alum with her concoctions," she says.

Not having sheep to shear, Jean fell back on her children's worn clothing, which she cut into narrow strips. She could keep to the family tradition of designing her own pattern, though, and she decided on checks or small squares as being a simple one on which to start.

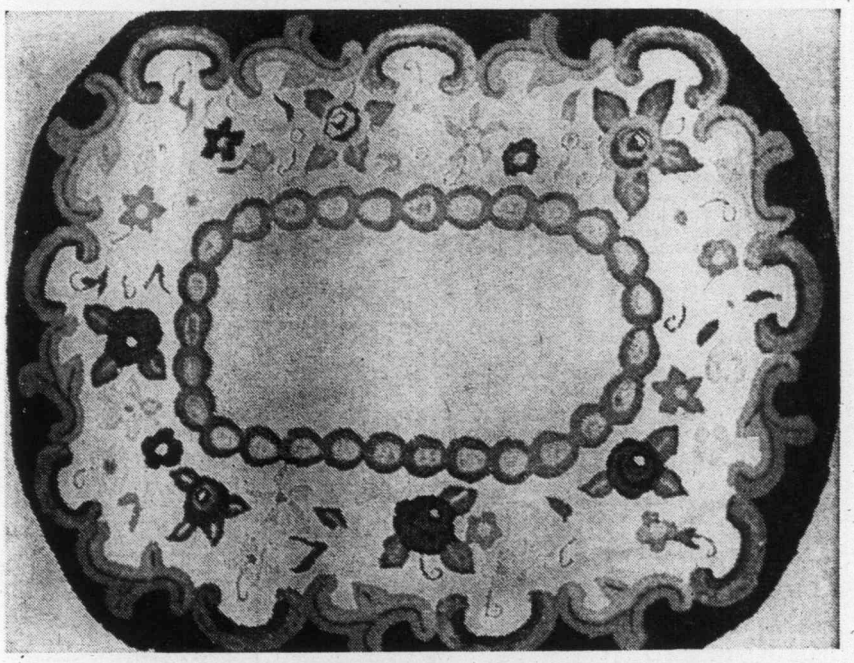
She set up her frame in front of the dining room window and was soon happily engaged in the old craft which came naturally to her fingers. A new rug was just what she wanted for her kitchen.

"One day I saw a neighbor coming," she told me, "so I hid the rug, but she had seen me through the window and wanted to know what I had been doing. So reluctantly I showed her. She admitted it wasn't very pretty but said she liked my work. Then she asked me if I'd make a couple for her. She had antique furniture brought from England by her mother in her hall and thought hooked rugs would go well with it."

Jean found that she was enjoying the revival of her old craft so much that she was quite willing to undertake the commission, especially as the lady supplied her with discarded clothing to use.

When the rugs were finished, the new owner was delighted. She gave a tea to show them off to her friends, and as a result Jean received orders for 11 rugs.

Quite unconscious that she was paving the way for a future career, Jean accepted these orders and many more of the same. She says now, with pride, that her rugs went all over the world. One destination she remembers particularly was a leper colony in Fiji. A Victoria doctor going there to work was given one of her rugs as a farewell gift.



One of the finished products.

Her success led to the offer of a teaching job at the Academy of Arts, which she held for two and a half years.

In 1943, the real value of her paying hobby became apparent. Her husband, whose health had never been good since his war service, died. The two youngest Erickson boys were still at home and in school. Jean was able to supplement a small pension by her rug-making which permitted her sons to finish their education.

Her original designs, subtly blended colors, and expert workmanship have kept her rugs as prime favorites right up to this very day. What is even more to the point, she enjoys doing them as much as ever.

"I get just as much pleasure today as I did with the first one," she says.

After her family no longer needed her, Jean took several breaks. She went back to Saskatchewan for a couple of years, to California for awhile, and back to Nova Scotia.

She must have still kept up her rug hooking to some extent, though, as she tells a story about her brother gathering up the discarded white underwear at a place of detention somewhere in Nova Scotia and bringing it to her. She didn't say whether she used vegetable dyes to color it, but more probably relied on the commercial products.

She also did a stretch as part time saleslady in an antique shop which she enjoyed. She is very interested in old things. She tells me that her father made all the furniture for their home from maple trees cut on his own farm.

Jean lives in Courtenay now as two of her sons are settled in the Comox Valley. She is as busy as ever with her hook but she is working now for posterity. With three daughters-in-law and numerous grandchildren there's lots of that. She hopes that her rugs will become heirlooms.

She still doesn't grow her own wool, but depends on used clothing for her material. She finds Goodwill Enterprises an excellent place to replenish her stock.

She says rather wistfully that she'd really like to go back and end her days in Nova Scotia where they began, but with all her children in British Columbia such a removal is unlikely.

Oh, I almost forgot, she's kept up the tradition by teaching at least one of her two daughters to hook rug. I'm not sure about the granddaughters.

In any case, she has found a happy and constructive means of filling her golding years.

Darkest Africa

As a child I absorbed endless tales about the Dark Continent from my elder brother's bookshelves; tales of exploration, of deserts, jungles and winding rivers; of great white hunters, man-eating lions and giant tuskers; of brave voortrekkers crossing the mighty veldt; and of the Boer War, Mafeking and General Smuts. This hodge-podge of scattered, unrelated and often unrealistic information did very little to help me understand the Republic of South Africa as it is today.

By VAL HAIGH

After a stay of only two months in Durban, one trip to a game reserve, and visits to a few other coastal towns, my view of South Africa is necessarily limited. White South Africans become incensed with outsiders who, after a few days in the country, set themselves up as authorities on South African racial policy; yet some things are so patently obvious that even the most casual observer can not help but be aware of them.

Apartheid does work, up to a point. That is to say that the different races and creeds do, at least on the surface, live and work together in peace. The policy of a place for everyone and everyone in his place does have the effect of letting each know exactly what is expected of him.

The Bantu (Black African) working as teaboy or road sweeper, knows that he will never be a manager, a banker or an administrator; the Indian, working as mechanic, clerk or teacher, knows that however hard he works, however brilliant his mind, there will always be doors closed to him; the non-Afrikaaner White knows that while in theory all (White) men are equal, he will never be quite as equal as the ruling Afrikaaners; and the Afrikaaner knows that to remain top man on the totem pole will require endless vigilance and that, right or wrong, he must always be 100 per cent behind his all powerful, authoritarian government.

The undercurrents which ripple beneath the surface of what Prime Minister Vorster refers to as "political stability of the first order" makes strangers to the country, used to freedom of speech and action, uneasy. It is, after all, a police state, and foreigners soon become aware of this.

Europeans who have travelled widely in Africa, both in dependencies and in independent states, assure me that the Black in South Africa is better looked after and has a higher standard of living than his counterpart in any other country in Africa. He lacks only that vital possession, freedom.

I only gradually became aware of the practical, physical effects of apartheid. in its simplest form the world of the South African is divided into White or non-White, European or non-European. Non-Whites can then be divided into Colored, Indian or Bantu.

As Whites we found ourselves segregated to our own beaches, buses, playgrounds, park benches, trains, taxis, theatres, cinemas, schools and living areas. We did not mix with the other races at the post office or municipal counters, nor in the libraries nor museums, nor in public conveniences, nor ambulances. We did our shopping in the same supermarkets and stores, but here there was a tendency towards natural segregation since Bantu and Indians preferred to patronize stores in their locations.

In six different offices in Durban,

Yacht Club in the centre of Durban.

in which I worked as a temporary typist, I found that teaboys and messengers were always Bantu. They were usually treated well, but in one office no-one spoke to the teaboy except to complain about the tea. I had the impression that for some of the people there he simply did not exist at all as a person.

Indians were generally employed as back office clerks. We in the front offices always seemed to be White. Where Indians were sales representatives they generally had the same conditions and opportunities as Whites, but could not attend cocktail parties or other social office events. Heads of departments, managers and executives were all White.

I worked in the office of a garage; here the mechanics were Indians, the pump attendants Bantu, the management White.

Each group knew what its job opportunities and limitations were and though occasionally non-Whites were upgraded into slightly less menial jobs it was always done for economic reasons, never humanitarian ones. It was a strange world with invisible barriers over which few people ever stepped.

It takes time to learn the rules of segregation. In public places I found myself becoming nervous of sitting, standing or waiting in the wrong place. I waited half an hour one day at an unmarked bus shelter before I finally managed to flag a White municipal bus to a stop.

"I thought you were just standing there," said the driver reprovingly, "that's a non-European bus stop dear."

In the post office I avoided the obvious trap of going to the wrong counter only to have Nicola come up to me and hiss, "you're sitting at a non-European desk Mum," as I sorted my mail.

The South African assumption that the white is a superiour being is infectious. It is ego-building always to be treated with respect and called Madam and Baas. It is very pleasant to have black servants waiting on you, always smiling, willing and deferential. How easy it would be to take it all for granted. One day I found myself attempting to browbeat a Black messenger boy who did not want to deliver some papers, in a way I would not have done, had he not been Black. I wondered then how long it would be before I began to believe that as a White I really was superior.

I enjoyed working in Durban but made poor wages. Durban was financially very disappointing for us although we had arrived full of good intentions and energy. The three of us, Susan, Ernest and I, were all set to go to work immediately and build up our cruising fund for the long run home. A change of government policy greeted us. Aliens could no longer work without a permit, which was difficult to obtain. The hardliner Afrikanner Immigration man was even more specific.

"You can not work in South Africa," he said, "don't try. Don't even look for work." This, we discovered later, was not entirely true, but it shocked us into a state of depression and indecision.

In the end I was lucky to have my month's work and Ernest to do some work on a boat for a friend, but we were not much richer for it. Susie and Nicola stayed home and mended Tryste's sails and sanded and painted her hull. Had it not been for the fact that we were waiting for our new mizzen sail to arrive from England we could have moved on to Cape Town where the administrative climate was more liberal; as it was we stayed.

Durban was an attractive town, well laid out with plenty of trees, grass and flowers, and with a handsome skyline of brown, grey and gold skyscrapers. We were made welcome at the yacht club where they had opulent showering facilities, lounge and dining room. Although Tryste was moored rather far out this was no hardship since there was a 24-hour taxiboat service supplied.

Our visit to the game reserve at Umfolozi was a delight, and the dreaded sail around the Cape of Good Hope, often a nightmare of storms, was almost a pleasure trip.

We weathered one bad blow, an-

FIRST DOUKHOBORS MADE OWN TOOLS

When newspaper headlines tell of arson, nude parades and criminal behaviour by the Sons of Freedom we are inclined to load all Doukhobors into the same boat.

By ERIC SISMEY

This is wrong. Orthodox Doukhobors, while holding views different from our own, are excellent farmers and capable business men. A third group, the Independents are fully assimilated into Canadian life.

In 1899 Tolstoi petitioned the Tsar of Russia to permit emigration of the Doukhobor sect to Canada where religious freedom and exemption from bearing arms was promised. In 1908, 6,000 Doukhobors arrived in British Columbia under the leadership of Peter V. Verigin. Settlement was largely in West Kootenay at Slocan Junction, at Shoreacres and Grand Forks where their industry soon brought the wild land under cultivation.

The community, guided by Peter Verigin, did well in spite of internal troubles stirred up by the Sons of Freedom until Verigin's death in 1924 when a bomb under his seat in a Kettle Valley passenger train exploded.

Utensils were carved from wood.

Succeeded by his son, V. V. Verigin, an inept leader, the society lost much of its cohesion during the depression in the late 1920s.

Now what has been written above is merely an introduction to what follows. In the early days of settlement in British Columbia and when they had little money to buy needed tools they made them. When they had no money to buy horses they harnessed themselves, mostly women, to drag plows through their fields.

With increasing prosperity many of the home-made tools were put away in sheds, in attics and some, no doubt carefully treasured.

My photographs reflect credit to past Doukhobor industry. It was with these crude tools, these implements and with their sweat and tears that the farm lands we admire today in West Kootenay and Grand Forks were first brought into yielding their bounty.

DARKEST AFRICA

chored in the dubious lee of a lighthouse island called Bird Island. Here a lonely Afrikaaner, hamstrung by his own red tape, would have loved some company but "You do not have a permit," he mourned — and so it was impossible for us to land. We would have liked to visit the penguins, seals and cape gannets that swarmed over the island too, but that also was forbidden us.

The worst feature of the 800-mile trip was the tremendous amount of traffic. Two lanes of steamers run continuously round the Cape, but we often came across freighters well outside their appointed lanes. We kept a constant watch. In one 24-hour period we counted 33 freighters.

At several small coastal towns along the way we found people friendly and hospitable. At some of them Africaans was the first language and English a poor second.

We approached Cape Town at sunrise on Christmas morning. It was memorably beautiful with row upon row of mountain peaks finally culminating in the great flat bulk of Table Mountain and the Lion. Below the mountain, spread along the shores of Table Bay, lay Cape Town, a handsome, well laid out city, with much exceptional, modern architecture.

Each day we waited for the table cloth, a thick white cloud which neatly capped Table Mountain, to disappear. The first day it cleared Susan and Nicola climbed the mountain on foot with a friend, in the heat of the day. It took them six hours to reach the summit. They arrived home exhausted, long after dark.

A few days later Ernest and I took the easy way up by cable car and wandered over the rocky plateau dotted with heather and wild gladiolus where wide views of Cape Town and the surrounding bays, hills and valleys spread below us.

We spent the last of our money on stores in Cape Town and, not having the price of four tickets to the New Year's dance, set sail on the afternoon of New Year's Eve to the accompaniment of paper streamers thrown and horns tooted by exuberant friends.

We expected to stop at St. Helena, a lonely dot 1,400 miles across the South Atlantic. If bad weather caused us to change our minds it would be the end of February, 1974, before we again saw land. Then we would find ourselves at last in our home hemisphere, north of the equator, where, among the dark-skinned people of the West Indies we might find the way of life a little easier to understand.

MURIEL WILSON

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Let's say it with cookies. There's a time and a place for everything and what better time than now to fill up the cookie jar. Whether they be drop cookies, squares, frosted bars or macaroons, I know of no better way to please each and everyone in your household. Plain as a gingham apron or elegant as a velvet gown there is nothing that can quite take the place of cookies.

Grandma used to say that the badge of a good mother, wife or hostess was a well-filled cookie jar . . . cookies for lunch-box treats, unexpected company, casual entertaining, for stuffing little boy's pockets or tiding one's appetite over until mealtime.

If you like your baking to stay moist remember honey is a fine ingredient. Today our cookie recipes use honey as part of the sweetener.

CHOCOLATE HONEY BROWNIES . . . Two-thirds cup all-purpose flour, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon ginger, one-third cup shortening, two squares unsweetened chocolate, two eggs, one-half cup each sugar, honey and chopped nuts and one teaspoon vanilla.

Sift measured flour, baking powder, salt and ginger together. In a small saucepan melt the shortening and chocolate over hot water. Beat the sugar gradually into the eggs then beat in the honey and the chocolate mixture.

Now add the flour mixture and mix well. Add the nuts and vanilla. Pour into a greased nine-inch square pan. Bake in preheated oven 350 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes. This can be frosted with a thin butter icing or icing sugar can be sifted over the top. Cut in squares or rectangles. Makes about 20 brownies. The honey in these keep them beautifully moist (that is if you can keep them long enough to find out). And you would be surprised what that small quantity of ginger does for the flavor.

Just as a point of interest . . . ginger is native to Southeast Asia but it also comes from Jamaica. It was one of the first Oriental spices known in Europe; Marco Polo wrote of finding ginger in China. It is the dried and peeled roots of the ginger plant. It is light buff in color and has a hot, spicy, sweet flavor. It is available whole or ground. It is one of our most versatile spices, it can be used alone or in combination with other spices in dozens of different foods from cakes and cookies to Oriental dishes . . . lamb, pork, beef or veal to stewed fruits and to vegetables and of course in all sorts of pickles.

Spicy, honey rocks are a delicious drop cookie that totes well, especially nice for lunch boxes.

SPICY HONEY ROCKS . . . one cup raisins that have been plumped in sherry, fruit juice or hot water, one cup shortening (can use half bacon drippings), one cup brown sugar packed, one-half cup honey, three eggs, three cups all-purpose flour, one teaspoon baking soda, one-half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons ground cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoon ground cloves, one cup chopped nuts, one teaspoon vanilla and sesame seeds.

Blend together the shortening, sugar, honey and eggs. Sift dry ingredients together and beat into the batter, add the drained raisins, nuts and vanilla. Drop by teaspoonfuls on greased baking sheets two inches apart. Sprinkle with sesame seeds. Bake in a preheated 375 degree F. oven for about eight to 10 minutes or until no imprint is left when touched lightly with the finger. Do not overcook.

Another lunch box favorite is tarts, they carry well. A nice sweet to end a meal.

HONEY TARTS . . . One-half cup honey, two tablespoons butter or margarine, two eggs beaten, one-half cup raisins, one tablespoon juice, one-quarter teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon Angostura Bitters and three tablespoons chopped nuts, walnuts or pecans, and pastry to make eighteen medium-sized tart shells.

Cream the butter with the honey and stir in the beaten eggs, raisins, nuts and lemon juice. Blend in nutmeg and Bitters. I like to add just a dash of salt although the original doesn't call for it. Spoon the mixture into unbaked tart shells and bake in a preheated 425 degree F. oven for about 15 minutes or until done.

In this recipe it's the honey plus the combined flavor of nutmeg and Bitters that make these tarts just a little different.

The word cookie covers a wide range of shapes and forms of delectable sweets, from rolled out dough to spoonfuls of dough dropped on a baking sheet to dough baked like a cake and cut into squares or bars when cooked. There are also rolls and balls which seem to come under the heading of cookies.

HONEY PEANUT BALLS . . . Two-thirds cup honey, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two cups vanilla wafer crumbs and half a cup chopped peanuts. Blend honey, peanut butter and vanilla. Mix in crumbs. Shape into balls and roll in the finely crushed nuts. Chill. Makes about three dozen balls.

CRISPY HONEY TREATS . . . three-quarters cup honey, one-half cup peanut butter, four cups rice crispies and one six-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate chips or bits.

Heat honey until it bubbles, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and blend in peanut butter. Add cereal and blend well. Be sure that all the cereal is well coated. Press evenly into a greased eight by eight square pan. Melt chocolate pieces

My favorite way is to decorate gift packages!

Using the green tabs for the stems, colorful flowers can be designed. The flower part can be made as large as you want by adding additional rows of the tabs.

BABY'S MOBILE

DEAR HELOISE:

When our new son began noticing colors and moving objects, I made a "mobile" from my sewing remnants.

I picked out the gayest cottons, cut out irregular shapes and sizes in duplicate, then sewed them together with bright shades of yarn from my stitchery projects. The yarn makes loops and "tails" around the various pieces and really is gay to see.

I then hung them by single strands of threads at various lengths from the light fixture over our table. They're lightweight, and the slightest breeze makes them swing and turn.

The baby is delighted just sitting in his infant's seat on the table and it is especially helpful when I'm feeding him.

It not only cost nothing to make, but it was fun and satisfying to make something for our son.

RIGHT ON! LEFT ON!

DEAR HELOISE:

You have shared several ideas for helping children to put their shoes on the right feet, and now I would like to share my idea.

I have a 4-year-old boy who is in and out of the house fifty times a day. Every time he wanted his shoes on, I was feeding the baby or otherwise occupied, and he never put them back on the right feet.

I took a large sheet of heavy paper and drew an outline of his shoes on it. Then I let him color the shoe drawings, and I wrote

"left" and "right" below the proper ones.

Now he matches his shoes to the picture, which I leave on the floor for him at all times.

He hasn't gotten them on the wrong feet since, even when he is in a terrible hurry.

When you brush your hair the net will go to the bottom of the bristles and catch all the stray hair and a surprising amount of dandruff!

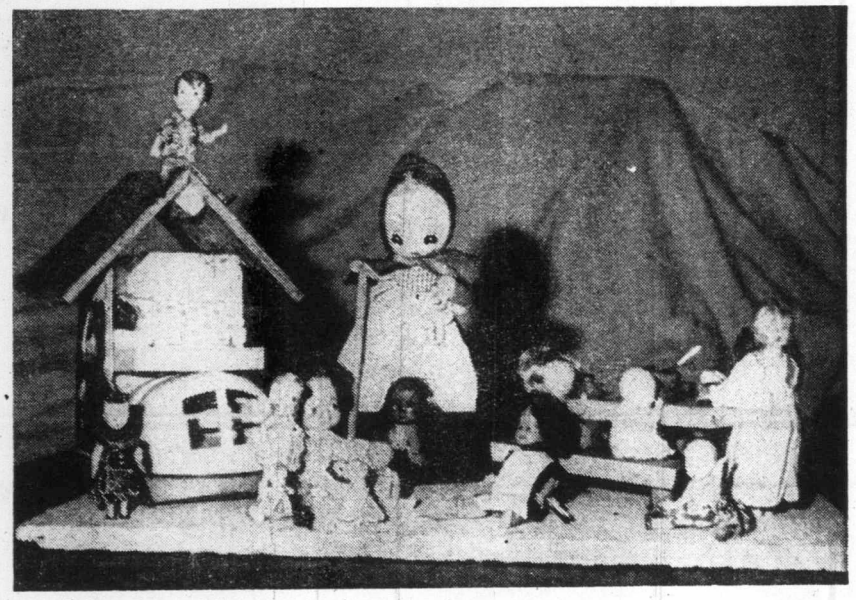
The room was absolutely full of dolls. Which ever way one turned, one found oneself being eyed by a doll. Big ones, little ones, funny ones and solemn ones. Some were historic and some were modern. Some were clothed in silks and satins, while others cowered naked in boxes. Never in my life have I seen so many dolls gathered together in one place. There was no other explanation for it – this had to be –

The Doll's House

By MARGARET BELFORD



The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe

The owner of all these dolls is Mrs. Florence Chalifour who tells me that she has raised eight children of her own, and then goes on to report that she also has 34 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. All of which would presuppose one to believe that she must herself have got past the age of playing dolls. However, that presupposition would be wrong.

Florence Chalifour was born in London, England. As a young girl during the First World War, Florence lived in Bexhill and occasionally worked as a volunteer hostess at an army service club there. It was at that club that she met the man who was later to become her husband, Amede Chalifour.

At the war's end, the Chalifours came to Canada. Prior to the war, Amede had been a gold miner in the Yukon, but they did not return there. Instead, they headed for northern Saskatchewan where Amede's family lived. The year was 1919, and Florence had much to learn.

On arrival at Prince Albert, the welcoming committee for English war brides was appalled when they heard that Amede proposed taking his young English wife to live at Debden. There was, they said, nothing there at all.

Since Amede had not been there himself, he was in no position to argue, though he did feel that surely his family must have some sort of home. However, the powers-that-be were adamant and announced that Florence would stay with them in Prince Albert while her husband went on to see what Debden had to offer. To the immense relief of both of them, Amede was able to return very soon with the information that there was ample accommodation, and since his family was a large one, Florence would not lack for company.

Florence certainly had company. However, she tells me now, she found that the population of Debden was 99 per cent French and one per cent English. She herself made up that one per cent! In other words, it was a good thing that her husband spoke enough English to communicate with her for none of her new relatives did. Her mother-in-law, she says, had not one word of English.

However, in no time at all she had Florence busy with household chores — not the least of which was the making of lye which was, of course, later used in the making of soap. Florence remembers to this day the big outdoor vats, and also the burners in which the wood ash smouldered to be turned into lye as water was poured over it.

When one comes to think of it, it must have taken a good deal of determination for the young Florence to accept her new life. Anything more unlike the life to which she was accustomed would be hard to find.

She recalls that her first arrival at Debden was in November. The whole world seemed buried in snow, and since there had been at one time a forest fire there, the only trees showing were a lot of burned out pines. The loggers looked to her eyes like over-stuffed bears walking around on their hind legs. There was little relaxation and it is not surprising that in retrospect her main preoccupation in the early days seems to have been the collecting of beef and mutton tallow for that awful chore of making soap.

The nearest town to Debden was Prince Albert and that was a hundred miles away. There was one train a week so there was little chance of dropping into town for a spot of shopping and fun. This also meant that the nearest doctor and hospital was also a hundred miles away, so of course all Florence's children were born at home.

So what does a young English girl, far from friends and family do to keep up her interest? Unending work is not the answer, though one supposes that Florence had plenty of that. Well, she was always a great collector, and to begin with, since she was fond of poetry, she would copy or cut out any verses that appealed to her. She still has many volumes of poetry saved from the past.

With the coming of her children, of course, she was more than fully occupied, and with them all her old love of dolls came once more into the forefront.

All children need dolls so Florence started right away making rag dolls for them. Unfortunately, however, she started off her family by having six boys in a row — not a girl among them. In those days, a boy playing with a doll would certainly not have been approved of. What is more, her husband didn't exactly like her preoccupation with dolls so she had to keep quiet about it. With the coming of a daughter, however, she could give free rein to the purchase or production of dolls, and this she did.

There is no doubt about it, though her children had dolls, it was really Florence who loved them most, and she finally admitted that collecting dolls was something of an obsession with her. By the thirties she had so many that she was also exhibiting them, and winning prizes with them into the bargain.

She has now been exhibiting for the past 40 years, and her dolls have appeared at many fairs, including the PNE. She has also had a collection shown in the provincial museum in connection with the Victoria doll club, and at the present time, it looks as if a number of her dolls will soon be on their way as part of a Canada-wide exhibit.

In the early days, Florence made all the clothing for her growing family of dolls. Nowadays, many in her collection are what she calls character dolls, and in many cases these come ready clothed. An instance of this is one figure which is very dear to her heart, and this is a doll from Korea. He is known as The Korean Gentleman, and is a slim, tall gentleman of great elegance who sports a long grey beard. He is but one of many, of course. So many that it would be completely impossible to list them all.

In my wanderings around the doll room I came across dolls that rolled their eyes, or their heads; old-style rag dolls; dolls in splints and plaster, and dolls on crutches; dolls that talked and those that didn't. There was even an old-fashioned Miss Muffett doll gazing disapprovingly at a Barbie doll.

Many of the dolls are out on display, but around the walls there are also a number of cartons and all these are stuffed with dolls which may be awaiting repair or redressing. One such carton was full of Kewpee dolls of all sizes, dating from away back. Does anybody remember when these dolls were all the rage? One hears now that they are once again becoming popular and the old ones are now worth a lot of money in the collecting field.

Another carton was full of clowns of all descriptions. Merry clowns; sad clowns; and clowns with a difference. A lot of these were awaiting Florence's sure hand in repair, or even in retouching their typical clown faces.

One of Florence's newest ventures has been creating groups of dolls. This side of her work has a great appeal so far as I am concerned. She started out by bringing to life many of the old nursery rhymes and fairy tales. Thus, on a specially made wooden stage one finds a scene depicting that old nursery rhyme — Ride a Cock Horse to Banbury Cross.

Here is a scene right out of the English countryside, complete with little hedges and fences, animals in the fields, and, of course, that "cock horse" loping down the lane with his rider atop him, and in the foreground a signpost of Florence's own making which points the way to the famous old town of Banbury.

On another stage, we find that harried old woman who lived in a shoe and had so many children she didn't know what to do. There stands the old woman grasping a stick in her hand, and there beside her is an outsize in colorful boots. Inside it can be seen tumbled beds and bits of furniture, while all about little dolls of all sizes represent those teeming children.

At present, Florence is also working on the cow that jumped over the moon, as well as Winkin, Blinkin and Nod. The day I visited, she had just completed making the clothing for these last three.

One very large undertaking is a presentation of Henry VIII and his wives. It is not completed as yet, but Henry and three of his wives were already on show. The clothing of these figures is absolutely beautiful and quite authentic as to detail. Florence tells me that her daughter is helping her with this project, and the result is breathtaking. Rich velvets, satins and furs go into the costumes, as well as jewelled head-dress and pearl encrusted gowns.

In order to make absolutely sure that no error is made, Florence and her daughter work with the aid of a book of colored reproductions which are authentically correct as to costumes for the various queens. I must say I just loved Catherine Parr and the long fur cuffs on the sleeves of her gown.

Though Florence must get a great deal of satisfaction from doing all this work, she has another source of satisfaction as well. Each year, she works hard making and clothing dolls which in time are put aboard the Christmas Ship which sails around the islands and distant points of the coast taking Christmas cheer to the children of those places. With respect to the Christmas ship, however, Florence has one beef.

She does not think enough toys are provided for boys who, after all, usually want something with a bit more go to it than a doll. Because of this, she would like to remind people that if they are contributing they should also include toys for boys.

Florence Chaliflour's smallest doll is little more than a quarter of an inch in height, while her largest measures in at 36 inches. Quite a size spread there.

She has in her collection several apple dolls. She has tried her hand at making these herself, but finds they don't appeal to her as much as some others she has. At the present time, she has a collection of more than 300 dolls. She knows she has 300 hundred because she has counted that far. One gets the impression, however, that there could well be a few more hiding away somewhere awaiting discovery!

Florence's favorite doll of all is actually not so very old. It is the clothing which makes for its appeal. Among Florence's treasured possessions is an old picture of her great-grandmother sitting beside a small table on which are placed a candlestick and a bible. The great-grandmother is very grandly dressed in a black silk dress with a cameo brooch at the high neck, and on her head is the traditional black lace cap which, I believe, was worn by all dowager ladies.

That gown is correct down to the last detail. Where the original dress was decorated by a silken fringe, the doll's gown has the same decoration taken from the same old dress. There is even a tiny cameo brooch at the neck, and old lace at the wrists. In showing her, Florence lifted the skirts of the dress to show me the beautifully embroidered petticoat beneath. As you may guess, that petticoat was also made from one owned by great-grandmother!

There is just one thing apart from the doll which is not old, and that is the dolls hair. From under her demure black cap peeps an equally demure hair-do. Grey hair, parted in the centre and drawn down over the ears to a tiny bun at the back. Is it usual for dolls to have grey hair? In this case it is, for Florence made the little wig from her own hair!

Florence, a peppy little person with a great sense of humor, admits to being in the eighties.

With a long full life behind her, she strikes one as being still as full of energy and go as she must have been on that far-off day when she first saw the blighted pines of Debden. She certainly has no time to sit and grow old for her many activities will continue to keep her young for many a year to come. She is living proof that the person with an absorbing hobby stays young at heart. There is just one thing she would like to find, and that is a little Korean lady to go with her Korean gentleman.

"One of the most colorful figures this coast has ever seen," one historian has termed Morris Moss, the handsome Jewish pioneer whose adventures as a trader, customs officer, sealer and miner were more colorful than fiction.

Lochaboo Island Castaways

Although Morris Moss' career has been covered more than once over the years, including our own contribution in these pages some months ago, few historians have detailed one of the heroic trader's most harrowing adventures; that of castaway, when, with two crewmen, Moss was shipwrecked in Queen Charlotte Sound.

By T. W. PATERSON

The epic voyage had been beset with problems from the very beginning. Earlier, the wandering entrepreneur had chosen Bella Coola as the site of his trading post. He had been en route to the gold fields, by way of Bentinck Arm, when he first realized that there was more gold to be made as a merchant than as a miner, and observed that Bella Coola was ideally situated for a post.

However, he first attempted to make his debut as a trader at Williams Creek, packing in a valuable shipment of merchandise to sell to the miners at Williams Creek.

But, for all of his intentions, his party made it no farther than Quesnel Forks, where it was turned back by an unusually severe blizzard. Unable to press on, and unwilling to pack his goods back to the coast, the frustrated miner-cum-merchant decided instead to cut his losses by selling his stock right there.

Having recovered some of his investment, a determined Moss returned to his original idea: open a trading post at Bella Coola. This in mind, he bought a second shipment of drygoods, hardware and provisions, and boarded the northbound Hudson's Bay Co. steamer, Labouchere. Alas, upon arrival at Bella Coola, he learned that he had lost most of his native clientele to an epidemic of smallpox!

Once again, he returned to Victoria. He remained convinced as to Bella Coola's potential as a trading centre on the busy Bentinck Arm route to the Cariboo diggings, but had no choice except to try his luck again in the Interior. A born optimist, he took this latest setback in stride, taking every opportunity to promote Bella Coola as a winter stop-over for those bound for the gold fields.

Finally, he convinced a number of miners of Bella Coola's charm, they agreeing to winter there if he, in turn, opened his post. Thus assured of a clientele, Moss chartered the schooner Rose Newman, loaded her to the decks with supplies, and prepared to sail from Victoria—only to be foiled once more.

Before the Newman could clear harbor, Moss was approached by the agent for the Koshuma coal mines, Robertson Stewart explaining that the little outpost on the west coast of Vancouver Island was dangerously short of supplies.

Although a shrewd businessman, Moss was also good-hearted and, characteristically, after much pleading by Stewart, agreed to postpone his cherished Bella Coola venture as a personal favor.

When, at last, the heavily-laden Rose Newman did sail, it was for Koshuma, Moss and company arriving late in November of 1864, after being mauled by winter gales. Upon discharging a quantity of provisions for the grateful miners, Moss cleared harbor for Quatsino.

Again, the little Newman battled her way northward along the exposed west coast, through mountainous seas and gale force winds, to successfully land a quantity of her cargo at the little settlement.

Before continuing on to her ultimate destination, however, he had no choice but to remain there for a week, due to the weather, when, overcome by impatience, and worried that the miners at Bella Coola were depending upon him, Moss determined to proceed regardless of the storms.

Aware that they could continue without break, and anxious to complete his voyage, the trader informed his crew that he proposed to set sail. His three Indian seamen immediately deserted, sure that the Newman would founder in such seas, Capt. Walters and his mate, Ben Spain, agreeing to remain with the schooner.

The native crewmen, as it turned out, were right: the Rose Newman did founder. She was not long at sea when, according to an old account, "the inevitable happened. Three men (of whom one was captain and another an amateur) could not keep the schooner afloat in the dangerous, storm-swept waters, and they had not proceeded far when, with a crash, the mainsail and the jib were blown away. To complete the picture, a dense fog closed in about them, so that they could barely see the length of the schooner . . ."

When word of the tragedy eventually reached Victoria, it was to the effect that the Rose Newman had been wrecked during a blizzard in Queen Charlotte Sound. Moss, Capt. Walters and crew having escaped without casualty, the schooner and her cargo being a total loss.

A later report indicated that the schooner had been running for Bentinck Arm when a storm carried away her mainsail and smashed her upon the rocks, although $500 worth of cargo was saved.

What the brief newspaper reports overlooked was the fact that Moss and companions had survived one of the more remarkable ordeals of ship-wreck in provincial history.

"For three days they drifted at the mercy of the waves before they struck a rock," our early record continues. "The waves dashed over the weakening vessel, and they clung to the rigging for their lives. Through the wind and waves they thought they heard some breakers and they jumped overboard. After a difficult struggle with the waves, weakened though they were by fatigue and exposure, they miraculously reached land."

For what had seemed an eternity, Moss, Walters and Spain clutched the rigging, trying desperately to see through the fog and waves crashing over them. It was Moss who first chanced the surf, shouting: "Every man for himself; I'm going to breast the breakers!"

With that, he plunged into a maelstrom of wave, undercurrent and rock. When, miraculously, he reached the shore, Walters and Spain followed, the three taking shelter in the rocks. As they huddled together for warmth, unable even to see about them, their ordeal was worsened by the first snowfall of the season.

Finally, dawn brought a break in the fog and improved visibility, the castaways discovering that they had been shipwrecked upon Lochaboo Island, northwest of Safety Cove.

Stranded without matches or drinking water, their immediate prospects were grim. Fortunately, their situation improved considerably when the tide carried in two sacks of flour which had broken away from the wreck.

A succeeding low tide enabled them to recover other provisions from the Newman, including a dry keg of gunpowder and a flintlock musket.

By firing into some dry moss, and blowing frantically, the castaways succeeded in starting a fire — a fire which they zealously maintained throughout the balance of their three-month-long ordeal.

Further salvage efforts resulted in more sacks of flour, molasses, some liquor, and canned goods, when, spirits revived, they constructed a crude shelter of driftwood, rocks and the schooner's foresail.

Then began a 90-day wait. As their store of foodstuffs dwindled, the three men supplemented their spartan diet with clams, passing the time by exploring their island prison.

During their initial survey, they found numerous human remains, indicating that, until ravaged by disease, Lochaboo Island had boasted a fair-sized Indian settlement. But, throughout the lonely winter of 1864-1865, Moss, Walters and Spain were alone with Lochaboo Island's ghosts.

December passed uneventfully. Then January. Their few supplies, despite rationing, diminished steadily; even with their clam hunting.

Each and every day without fail, the bored castaways paced the beach. How many times they scanned the grey horizon in search of a friendly sail, they could not remember. But no sail appeared, the signal poles they had erected about the island serving as little more than silent monuments to their memory and the increasing gravity of the situation.

When three months had passed without so much as an Indian canoe passing by their isolated prison, their hopes of rescue were fading, when, one morning, as they ate a meagre breakfast of clams, they heard a shout from the beach.

Charging outside, they were overjoyed to see three Indians in a canoe, standing offshore.

The strangers were unwilling to approach, however, remaining out beyond the surf as the delirious seamen shouted and waved for them to land.

Not until Moss recognized one of the natives as a Bella Bella halfbreed named Yellow Charlie, and identified himself, did the wary Indians land.

Understandably leery of the three shouting, grinning and bearded skeletons that greeted them, the natives were reluctant to ferry them 40 miles to their village.

But, after negotiation, it was agreed that Moss would accompany them to the village, their canoe being too small for the others, who would be picked up later.

Upon their being reunited, the castaways met an old prospector named Sebastopol, who agreed to take them to Fort Simpson aboard his sloop. Amazingly, Moss refused the offer — being determined to push on to Bella Coola, his original destination, despite all that had happened.

Capt. Walters and the mate Spain were more than willing to accept, and, when the villagers agreed to Moss' remaining there until a northbound vessel called, the men parted.

Almost immediately, Moss regretted not having sailed with Sebastopol and his crew when his hosts began to make it clear that they regarded him not as a guest, but as a prisoner.

Although he had the run of the camp, they kept him under watch as they "slowly relieved him of the little wealth he had left."

After three months of confinement and hunger on Lochaboo Island, Moss now found himself stranded in the Bella Bella camp. Forced to pay for his food and shelter, Moss saw the last of the goods he had salvaged from his schooner disappear. Reduced to the rags upon his back, he could nothing but wait to be rescued a second time.

With growing resentment, Moss waited, unable to leave the camp as the Bella Bella tribesmen had selected a barren rock for their village as protection against Haida raids. Making escape impossible was the fact that the natives kept hundreds of dogs, which roamed the island and ensured, in the process, that he did not slip away in a canoe during the night.

When the last of his salvaged goods had been bartered for food, Moss had no choice but to trade away his clothing. Almost naked, and convinced that his callous "hosts" would let him starve when he had nothing left to trade, Moss was becoming desperate when he secretly asked several visiting Indians to smuggle a message for help to Bella Coola.

When the obliging visitors departed, Moss settled back to wait once again; this time confident of eventual — and final — salvation. A week after, 40 canoe loads of Bella Coola Indians answered his appeal and his rescue was official. Panic-stricken at the sight of the rescue fleet, Moss' captors were more than willing to release him, and he was free at last.

Ironically, upon reaching Bella Coola, the long-suffering trader found that yet another cruel blow awaited him.

Although he had lost every article of trade aboard the Rose Newman to the sea, and to his piratical hosts, he had been confident that, with the stock of goods already at Bella Coola, he would be able to open for business — belatedly, but more or less as planned.

Much to his chagrin, he found his clerk bedridden, much of his stores missing and unaccounted.

Combined with the loss of the Rose Newman's cargo, the epic voyage had cost him four months' privation and 2,000 pounds.

But shipwreck, and temporary poverty, were all part of life on the B.C. frontier as far as Morris Moss was concerned. As the record so graphically proves, he experienced considerably greater adventures in his career, surmounting all obstacles — natural and man-made — to retire a highly successful, and much respected, businessman.

Nanaimo Neglected in Early Days

ushered in right royally by the young folks who were astir early in the morning — the procession was headed by Miss Sarah Anne Bate, Ex-Queen, and Miss Katie McGregor—Queen-to-be."

For years the leading people of Nanaimo were the Dunsmuirs, and prominent, too, was a young bachelor, Edward Gawler Prior.

It is interesting that James Dunsmuir and Prior were the only two men in our history to be both Premier and lieutenant-governor, and both yere young together in Nanaimo.

No concert in Nanaimo was complete for many years without the singing of Prior and Mrs. James Dunsmuir.

In 1879 a big event in Nanaimo was a certain wedding, as reported in The Free Press:

"St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was crowded to overflowing with ladies and gentlemen anxious to witness the ceremony of uniting in the holy bonds of matrimony Charles Frederick Houghton, Lieutenant-Colonel, Deputy Adjutant-General of Military District No. 11, and Miss Marion, third daughter of Robert Dunsmuir of the Wellington Colleries.

"—the bride, handsomely dressed in white satin, leaning on the arm of her father — proceeded up the aisle — on the return of the wedding party from the vestry into the church the organ pealed out the beautiful strains of the Wedding March as the bride and groom proceeded to their carriage-in-waiting.

"Misses Jessie, Effie and Maudie Dunsmuir, sisters of the bride, and Miss Maggie Harvey, niece of the bride, acted as bridesmaids, while Mr. Basil Heathcote of Departure Bay and Master John Bryden acted as groomsmen.

"The newly-married couple and their guests proceeded to the residence of the bride's parents, and there a handsome 'dejeuner' awaited them.

"At noon Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Houghton embarked on the steamer Maude, specially chartered for the occasion, and proceeded to Victoria.

"As the steamer moved away from Hirst's wharf, twice three hearty cheers were given for the happy couple, and an old shoe, as an emblem of good luck, was thrown from the wharf to the steamer.

"Amid the waving of handkerchiefs, tooting of whistles and ringing of bells, the steamer turned round Cameron Island, and was lost to view."

In 1881 the people of Nanaimo and Wellington honored James Dunsmuir, The Free Press noting: "The highlight of the evening was presentation to Mr. James Dunsmuir of a gold watch and chain, and a silver tea service to Mrs. Dunsmuir.

"The watch and chain and the tea service (six piece) were obtained from C. E. Redfern, Victoria jeweler, watchmaker and silversmith, and are really beautiful articles.

"On the watch is the following inscription: 'presented to James Dunsmuir, Esq., as a mark of respect by the employees of the Wellington Collieries, Feb. 4, 1881."

I wonder where this watch and tea service are now. Surely they must be somewhere.

How I'd love to see them.

Saving Trophy Fish

Every angler sometimes thinks about keeping a particular fish as a mounted trophy. It could be a big fish, or simply an unusual specimen. One of the latest trends is to collect immature fish of big game species, since these are often more difficult to acquire than the adult sport fish itself. Whatever the reason, mounted fish do make handsome displays in an office or den.

Here are some suggestions from Mercury outboards' fishing experts that will help you preserve your trophy in excellent condition for delivery to a taxidermist.

Use a landing net if possible; never club the fish. This could damage the bony structure of the head and make it difficult to obtain a life-like mount.

Don't let the fish flop around loose in the boat. He'll lose scales and the final mount will be unattractive. The best method is to place the fish on ice in a large chest.

Don't clean the fish. The most common damage to trophy fish comes from improper cleaning. A taxidermist will find it difficult to rebuild a fish that has been split down the belly. (He usually makes an incision on the side where it won't show when the fish is mounted.)

Freeze the fish carefully. Use cardboard to protect the fins and tail. Wrap the fish only in plastic. Never use newspaper, since it will probably stick to the scales when the fish is thawed and could pull them loose.

Take the fish to the taxidermist yourself. You'll want to discuss with him the mounted position and other important details.

NEW BOOKS and AUTHORS

Franklin Russell has been described as the most interesting and accomplished writer in the nature field since the late Rachel Carson. I agree with the adjectives but I don't care for the comparison. And I dislike even more the comparison of Russell to Thoreau.

Miss Carson, of blessed memory, was a dedicated scientist with a rare ability for communicating with laymen. Her writing, although enthralling, was always that of a disciplined scientist, and never more so than when, in her dying months, she warned man that to destroy nature meant self-destruction.

Carson, the scientist, was uncharacteristically sensitive, and it was her sensitivity — which endeared her to laymen and earned her the unjust opprobrium of her peers — that brings her closest to Russell.

The comparison of Russell to Thoreau is far-fetched because for all his intelligent observation of nature, Thoreau was chiefly interested in the state of man. A rebel, who gloried in non-conformity, Thoreau's aim was to change society: compare him to Rousseau if you like, but to Russell, never.

Franklin Russell is his own man. A professional naturalist who writes like a poet, he describes the natural scheme of things in the Henry Williamson (Tarka and Otter) manner but without Williamson's propensity for interposing man.

Season on the Plain, by Franklin Russell; McClelland & Stewart; 313 pages; $8.95.

The New Zealand-born Russell is widely known for his books with a Canadian locale, books such as Watchers at the Pond, The Secret Islands and Searchers at the Gulf. His latest book, Season on the Plain, is set in Africa and provides an unusual and extremely original look at the natural history of the African plain.

Using his customary fly-on-the-wall technique, Russell centres his narrative on an "island" or rock formation in the plain and describes in graphic detail the astonishing variety of animal life that exists on it and flows past it during the migratory season.

The setting is obviously a composite of several actual locales, made necessary in order to pack into this fact-filled fictionalization as much as possible of the vastness, color and drama of life in this harsh part of the world.

Russell, whether acting as a dispassionate observer or presenting the viewpoint of specific animals as they hunt, mate and establish territory against all natural enemies, is at pains to present a comprehensive overview.

All natural life is discussed — grasses, trees, insects, birds, reptiles, grazing and carnivorous animals, also parasites and microscopic organisms — in addition to other forces affecting life — rain and drought, breeding and migration cycles, disease and age.

Season on the Plain is a masterful explanation of the interdependence of animals, birds, insects and vegetation and the cycles of nature, of day and night, season and year.

Narrative interest is sustained by the introduction of four main "characters" — a leopard, a baboon, a lion and a hyena.

The leopard has been forced out of its territory; the baboon has been ousted from his troop; the lion, a solitary nomad, is past his days of glory; and the hyena is a female with a litter of cubs to feed.

The "characters" are observed, not anthropomorphized. The only departure from reality is that they do tend to dominate the story. But Russell, good naturalist that he is, never lets you forget that they in fact play secondary roles to the real arbitrators of African life.

Season on the Plain shows clearly that these arbitrators — ants, termites, flies, mosquitoes, and other of the countless parasites — without strength, speed, guile or substance, are the hidden influences that shape the reality of the African wilderness.

As in all his books, Russell emphasizes the only certainty: that glorious and triumphant life is distilled from death. I know of no writer who makes the point quite so eloquently and with such touching beauty and stark drama as he does.

Are We Heading for New Victorian Age?

Many a good book has failed through an unfortunate choice of title. THE ANGEL MAKERS, published in 1958, didn't exactly fail, but sales were retarded. The fault was compounded by the forbidding sub-title: A Study in the Psychological Origins of Historical Change—1750-1850.

Reviewed by E. D. WARD-HARRIS

Much of the content concerns women's role in society, so I suppose we can thank the current women's liberation movement for causing the publishers to issue an new edition of this classic work.

Whatever the cause, be grateful. If you missed The Angel Makers in 1958, don't miss it now.

Modern history is still being taught in the wrong way; the emphasis remains on dates of rulers, accounts of battles and analyses of treaties. You may blame the academics for this. Most of them are too idle to do any original research, but they're smart enough to realize that whereas a little stealing is considered theft, wholesale plagiarism passes as scholarship. And so we get repetition ad nauseum.

Social history—the really valuable material—is still in a very primitive state, simply because it requires hard work to obtain the data —privately-published books, unpublished manuscripts, pamphlets of the period and, above all, obscure diaries.

Gordon Rattray Taylor, author of The Angel Makers, wanted to know something about the use of cosmetics, because being visible, and therefore reliable evidence, their use would provide an objective clue to social attitudes. He couldn't find anything. In fact, the first history on this topic was published in 1972.

The Angel Makers, by Gordon Rattray Taylor; Heinemann; 338 pages; $12.95.

Another example is the complete absence of any comprehensive account of the changes in methods of bringing up children.

Fortunately, Gordon Rattray Taylor was undaunted by the lack of ready-to-hand material and set about digging it out for himself. The 16 pages listing sources, including two pages of anonymous works and other of private diaries consulted, shows what can be done if one has the gumption and an enquiring mind —attributes seemingly totally alien to the academic historian.

The value of Taylor's research is that he is able to show that permissiveness, restrictiveness, and back to permissiveness, has been a cyclic phenomenon in most western societies and that we are possibly on the brink of a new age of prudery and repression.

Social history also points to the astonishing decline and rise in women's role in society and to the likelihood of women being again forced into or demanding the role of housebound ministering angels (hence the title of the book, incidentally), as conceived in Victorian fantasy.

If this seems an unlikely thesis, consider the fact that condemnation of vice and pornography (but not, of course, its elimination) goes hand-in-hand with the idea of the sexless woman.

The role of women is only one facet of Taylor's book, though possibly the most important as, of necessity, their attitudes were responsible for the early conditioning of children.

What Taylor has done is to allow the facts to speak for themselves. Then, and then only, he has interpreted them, relying basically on a psychological explanation in each instance.

The technique of using psychological insights to illuminate historical processes makes fascinating reading, particularly as Taylor explores many aspects of social behavior—from sexual morality and religious conversion to duelling and even landscape gardening—to explain personality-patterns underlying social mores of the period.

Wisely, Taylor has told his story in terms of personalities and their family backgrounds: Wesley, Rousseau and others are examined with startling results. Those unacquainted with this period of English history will also discover, with some astonishment no doubt, that the middle class was more "moral" in the 18th century than in the Victorian period.

In fact, the Victorian period was nothing like as angelic as its surface appearance. Even Queen Victoria, when young, was a gay person. She didn't become dull until the hypocritical religious fanatics, and, of course, the awful Albert, gained ascendancy over her and the rest of the population.

The Angel Makers is the most exhaustively documented study of social attitudes of the period I have ever read. Replete with footnotes which cannot be ignored because in many instances they add to the story, the book is difficult to read. It is most rewarding if read slowly: a speed-reader would gain nothing at all from it.

I must conclude with a quotation, which proves Taylor's main point that only ignorance of historical fact allows people to assert that moral standards have declined:

"The world is passing through troubled times. The young people of today think of nothing but themselves. They have no reverence for parents or old people. They are impatient of all restraint. They talk as if they alone knew anything, and what passes for wisdom with us is foolishness to them. As for girls, they are forward, immodest, and unwomanly in speech, behavior and dress. . ."

Those words, which the kids of today must have heard hundreds of times, were written by Peter the Hermit—in 1274.

The standards of the past were no better than they are today; certainly they did not seem so at the time. The only thing we learn from history is that nobody learns anything from history; society merely repeats itself—as The Angel Makers makes apparent.

Magruder Provides His Version

American Dream Became Watergate Nightmare

The simplest and most accurate way to judge the character of a leader is to take a close look at his chosen intimates. The whole Watergate mess is readily understandable when one views the incredible gang of ambitious, power-worshiping opportunists hand-picked by Richard Nixon to serve him in the White House.

Reviewed by E. D. WARD-HARRIS

An American Life, by Jeb Stuart Magruder, Atheneum—distributed in Canada by McClelland and Stewart; 319 pages; $10.

To me, the most frighftful thing is that these guilty men have failed to show contrition. One gains the impression that if they had the chance to do it all over again, they would do it all over again, using hindsight to avoid the mistakes that trapped them.

One of Nixon's bright young rogues was Jeb Stuart Magruder. He is temporarily out of circulation, playing tennis and golf at a secure Californian rest camp which is laughingly called a prison.

To make sure he is not forgotten he has left us a book to read—his own, titled An American Life: One Man's Road to Watergate. Translated, that means in effect, "How did a nice normal American boy have the bad luck to get into this mess?"

Magruder is a convicted perjurer so one is apt to take anything he writes with a grain of salt, but his story has the ring of truth and I'm prepared to give it credence.

In the prevailing paranoid, power-mad, above-the-law atmosphere in Nixon's White House, Magruder, out of misplaced loyalty and a comforting sense of belonging to the elite, agreed to the famous cover-up story in the firm belief the White House would get away with it.

He was obviously shocked to find that his superiors left him holding the bag and I think he was flabbergasted to discover that his 'friends' —Dean, Haldeman, Erlichman, and the others had taped his confidential chats with them—with a view of saving their own hides.

Magruder was naive and in a way one feels sorry for him. But only in the sense that one has sympathy for a minor crook who has been tricked by smarter crooks.

There's no point in going into this book in any detail. In essence it's the story of a young man who lived the American dream: poor boy becomes rich executive, marries a nice girl, has four children, campaigns for the Republicans, is recruited by the president's top aide, joins the White House elite, tastes power and gets drunk on it.

The man's real character is revealed in a brief paragraph in the first chapter.

When he was seven, he writes, his family was treated to the use of a relative's house in a town near Cape Cod.

"I was awed by the elegance of the other houses there and I made up my mind to see the inside of all of them, which I did by meeting people on the beach and wangling invitations."

The seven-year-old boy never really grew up and his awe, envy and ambition drove him until he was able to enter any elegant house he chose. And 30 years after Cape Cod he is lodged in a very large building as a captive.

Is he finished? Not on your life. He sees a rosy future ahead for himself and his family. Has he learned his lesson? Yes. He'll be a lot smarter when he next claws his way to riches and power. Is he sorry for what he has done? No sir. He was just damned unlucky. He doesn't say that, but that's what the 319 pages of this book add up to.

The result of many years of effort by enthusiastic amateurs, with professional help and advice, this book is profusely illustrated by both color and black and white photographs and is well printed on quality glossy paper. As a natural history project it's first class, but it's difficult to see what useful function it will perform.

Like so many manuals produced by well-meaning, dedicated souls this book is far too complicated for the amateur and not complete enough for the professional, so it falls between two stools.

Editor's Memoir A Sheer Delight

My Green Age, by Edward Weeks; Little, Brown; 342 pages.

Edward Weeks is one of the most respected men in the American literary world, noted for his acumen and good taste. It is in character, therefore, that he should write a memoir instead of burdening us, as so many lesser people do, with a complete autobiography.

The former editor of The Atlantic, who is still an editor with the Atlantic Monthly Press, dwells on the highlights of his life during a chosen period — 1900 to 1939.

The early years of gay abandon evoke a period when life was orderly, ordained and fun. A taste of war (1917-18) was followed by a period at Harvard and then at Trinity College, Cambridge — both described lovingly but not too seriously.

Whilst at Harvard, Weeks spent one summer tutoring the son of a rich financier, fell in love with the boy's sister and eventually married her. After a spell with a New York publisher (the unorthodox Horace Liveright), Weeks moved to Boston as assistant to crusty old Ellery Sedgwick, editor of The Atlantic. And there he remained, eventually succeeding Sedgwick in 1938.

Ted Weeks discovered Canada's Mazo de la Roche, edited and encouraged Nordhoff and Hall (Mutiny on the Bounty), got to know, and became mentor to, many of the greatest writers of the period. Interesting, certainly, but so what? you may ask.

Well, simply this. Edward Weeks has led a full and satisfying life and in My Green Age he relates his experiences with such charm and vitality that his memoir is far and away the most delightful book I have read this year. Everyone will enjoy reading My Green Age for its style and grace. And for those particularly interested in publishing, this book is champagne — the very best vintage at that. — E.D.W-H.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

yelling in the darkness; For God's sake mother, put on a lifebelt. But I couldn't seem to find one. The steward, L. Mosman, then helped me out through some opening, and we managed to get ashore.

By a strange coincidence, Captain Robin West of the rescue vessel Betty L. llved in the apartment at 1125 West Hastings which was operated by Mrs. Kay Elliot, one of the victims. He did not know she was aboard the Gulf Stream.

Gulf Lines, an enterprise created two years earlier by a group of Vancouver war veterans, under navel vet T. N. (Ted) LePage, had established a name for itself in coast shipping circles with prompt and dependable service.

Mrs. Elliot was taking her adopted son, Lyle and her nephew, Douglas, to Squirrel Cove on Cortes Island, for a holiday.

Later, a marine investigation opened in Vancouver, following a three day coroners inquest held in Powell River.

Captain John Craddock, in command of the Gulf Stream when she crashed, told the admiralty court that he and second officer Raymond Ketchum shared watches on the northbound run. He turned the watch over to Ketchum shortly after leaving Westview at about 7:40 p.m. Oct. 11.

He said he had checked the course and gave the compass bearing of 285 to his relief.

Captain Ernest Landheim, B.C. pilot with 17 years experience on Powell River Company vessels, told the court that with tide and wind conditions as they were the night of the crash, the set of the ship would be towards shore. He estimated it would be about half a knot. He also stated that Dinner Rock is very difficult to see at night because of high land behind it, destroying the outline.

Richard Sullivan, federal steamships inspector, stated that the MV Gulf Stream was 100-A-1 at Lloyds, and conformed in every way with regulations of the Canada Shipping Act. Captain Craddock said the vessel's compasses were adjusted for deviation Dec. 20, 1946, and were checked regularly three times a week. He explained that ship's stern was filled with water in a few seconds after the crash and there was no way the trapped passengers could have been saved.

Second officer Ketchum testified that, when he took over the watch from Capt. Craddock after leaving Westview, he was able to see the lights of Sliamon to starboard. He said there was a heavy overcast ahead and did not pick out Mace Point on the port bow.

He explained that, when the Ragged Islands light failed to appear, he thought it would come out from behind the overcast in a short time. He said he thought, if the ship were off course, he would have picked up a shoreline and so was not "terribly worried."

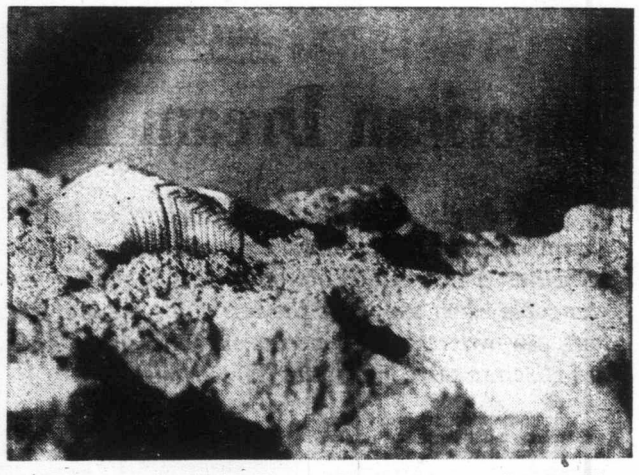
Captain Roy Barry, regular skipper of the Gulf Stream, termed Capt. Craddock as a morally fine man. He said he had trained Ketchum from an able seaman and considered him throughly competent. He said, however, that the proper action of a mate who was doubtful of his course would be to send for the master.

The years have passed. Many tides and many currents have washed over and past this cold bleak rock. Seasons have come and gone. Winter storms, summer calms. New flocks of migrating birds, cormorants, ducks and seagulls have flown over or stopped to rest on Dinner Rock.

The years have died, and the tears have dried, but a cross still stands on Dinner Rocks. A cross for little Jean.

A cross that is a grim reminder to all who guide ships that they must ever be alert, awake, guardians of their ships and watchmen of the night.

A small area of cobble or flagstone pavement formed from a thin bed of sandstone on Fossil Beach near Collishaw Point, Hornby Island. The beach itself is so broad at low tide it appears in photographs taken from satellites in space 500 miles above.



Coming to rest with other pebbles on underwater sand more than 60 million years ago, this inch-long, fish-shaped, chevron-striped, banded agate can be used as a semi-precious stone when removed from the sandstone it rests in and is polished.

Grooves and Pavements

By PETER THORNE

One of the most interesting tricks nature has up her sleeve is to produce rock formations that look like the work of man. Hornby and Denman Islands in the northern section of the Strait of Georgia have a number of fascinating examples.

Unlike many of the Gulf Islands to the south where the beds of sandstone, conglomerates and other sedimentary rocks are often so steeply tilted as to be almost vertical, the rocks of these two islands are tilted only slightly. The rock formations are formed from sediments laid down about 65 million years ago near the end of the age of dinosaurs.

Hornby Island is particularly well known for its fossils which date from that remote time near the end of the Cretaceous; fossils of animals that lived in shallow marine waters such as ammonites, bivalves, crabs (rare) and the like.

The rocks these animals are fossilized in are as interesting as the fossils themselves.

Of the most common type of rock to be found it is the sandstone that makes the most interesting features.

As it is laid down in layers of varying thickness ranging from a few inches to many feet, the degree of formation development varies.

Some of the thinner layers will weather along cracks (joints) and other lines of weakness to give an interesting paved effect, appearing like cobblestones fitted together remnant of an old Roman road. This type of pavement, if thin, does not last long as the individual pieces can be easily disturbed by a few good storms. Sometimes when the sandstone is thicker and in several layers, the rock weathers leaving very square-shaped plates descending in shallow steps.

As one approaches Repulse Point, near the south end of Denman Island, a number of smooth, rounded grooves one to three inches wide can be found crossing over the sandstone rocks. The grooves are quite straight and cross and join one another forming triangle, diamond shapes and trapezoid patterns. A few isolated large rounded boulders up to six feet in diameter arise from the sand and a single furrow will run down the face of the rock right in its middle.

The sandstone layer these are in is up to 12 or more feet in thickness and the entire life cycle of the grooves can be seen on the beach. The grooves are solution grooves which grow from water dissolving and wearing away the rock. The end product is the dissection of the original stone into isolated triangular and squarish boulders with many of them looking like pillows and giant arrow heads.

For those who like specimens or souvenirs pocket size (one-ton boulders are cumbersome) occasionally gem quality banded agates can be found in conglomerates. These could be described as fossil gems; pebbles laid down over 60 million years ago at the same time as the fossils.

As the two island's beaches are all but buried in some areas with the ever-present oyster (one bank of oyster shells on the north end of Hornby Island is so thick and white it can be seen clear across to Fillongley Park on Denman Island), non-gem pearls can be found attached to the insides of the occasional dead oyster washed up on the beach.

It is a curious fact that despite being considered "useless" pearls, they are much harder to obtain than the real gem quality pearl, particularly cultured ones which can be bought cheaply if unmounted, in many jewelry stores.

The grooves and pavements are only a few of the forms the beaches with sandstone take; whatever your reason for visiting or holidaying, there is always something of interest awaiting you around the next corner on the islands.

. . . but margin for compromise is vanishing in the "kraal" of Deep South

● The author of the following story recently returned to London from a two-month tour of southern Africa.

By GAVIN YOUNG
Colonist - Observer Service

LONDON — "We are already at war," South Africa's military chief of staff warned the other day, and quite suddenly his voice has become only one in a doomsday chorus in the Deep White South of Africa.

While their timid counterparts in Ian Smith's Rhodesian dream world to the north play down the black guerrilla war on their doorsteps, some newspaper editors in Johannesburg are sticking dramatically blownup pictures of huge tanks on their front pages, with captions like "Our iron fist packs a powerful punch." A knockout punch, white Afrikaners tell one another smugly, destined for the oncoming jaw of black African nationalism.

Since the coup in Portugal last April, the government of Prime Minister Balthazar Johannes Vorster in South Africa has been encouraging white South Africans to "think warlike."

Nevertheless, those blond, crewcut solders of apartheid crouching out in the bush along South Africa's northern frontiers have in their kitbags an 11-page, government-issue booklet designed to help them win over the Black Menace, as far as may be possible, with kindness.

"Avoid the bad habit of abusing a Bantu as an 'ape' or 'baboon'," the booklet's author, Dr. P. J. Riekert, advises, "if a hand is extended in greeting, take it. Your hand will not change color."

The officially induced war psychosis and this clumsy booklet illustrate two things: First, Vorster's intention to meet the upsurge of black aspirations in South Africa with irresistible force, and second,

Thousands prepared to face Carmen fury

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hurricane Carmen smashed into the marshy Louisiana Gulf coast Saturday night and then stalled with wind gusts up to 150 miles an hour swirling around its centre. More than 100,000 persons fled their homes ahead of the storm.

The first hurricane of the 1974 season to make a U.S. landfall already had taken four lives in moving from the Atlantic Ocean through the Caribbean and northward in the Gulf of Mexico.

As Carmen's winds zoomed inland, the projected path ahead of the storm was virtually deserted.

Carmen's "eye" stalled about 20 miles offshore west of Grand Isle, a spit of land near the mouth of the Mississippi River. Only 20 coast guardsmen remained there, riding out 100-mile-plus winds in a reinforced concrete communications centre.

Ahead of the storm residents waited throughout the night in scores of evacuation centres. The Red Cross described the evacuation of 45,000 persons in Mississippi and nearly 60,000 in Louisiana as a smoothly co-ordinated operation.

The "eye" of Carmen was less than 70 miles from New Orleans where the city's 600,000 residents took to shelters and sandbagged homes and stores well in advance of the storm.

Mozambique whites rebel

Reuter, — AP

A clandestine former service-men's organization calling itself the Dragons of Death seized control Saturday night of Mozambique's main radio station in Lourenco Marques and claimed its supporters in the police and the army now controlled the territory.

There was no confirmation of this report from any other source.

The occupation of the radio station came in the midst of festivities to celebrate an agreement on independence signed in Lusaka, Zambia, earlier in the day between the Portuguese government and the Frelimo guerrilla movement.

The broadcast demanded immediate independence for Mozambique without the participation of Frelimo — the Mozambique Liberation Front.

Several hours after the station was taken over, an announcer said Police and army in Mozambique had sided with the Dragons, and the whole territory was under the control of these forces.

The rebel radio said supporters had taken over the capital's airport, the post office, power station, oil refinery and the important provincial towns of Beira, Nampula, Quelimane and Vila Cabral.

In Lisbon the Portuguese government and armed forces said that right-wing demonstrators who seized a radio station in Mozambique were broadcasting false and alarming reports, giving the impression of a rebellion there.

Police and army appeared to have made no immediate attempt to put a stop to the broadcasts in Mozambique.

The radio station called on all police units to report to their posts, while the leaders of the Dragons and the army in Mozambique would be holding a meeting at the government house here.

The radio station branded Portuguese Foreign Minister

Citizens army in Tory plans

LONDON (Reuter) — A citizens' army to help the government maintain law and order in Britain will be set up if the Conservatives win the next general election, a senior party spokesman said Saturday night.

Geoffrey Rippon, Conservative spokesman on foreign affairs, said such a force would have to be created "for home defence and duties in aid of the civil power."

Rippon's remarks were the first indication that the Tories are trying to seize the initiative on the law-and-order issue from assorted former army officers who have announced similar volunteer forces in recent weeks.

"We must harness the voluntary spirit and sense of patriotism" which, Rippon said, "imbues" people now desperately seeking an opportunity to serve their country."

Meanwhile, the Sunday Times said Prime Minister Harold Wilson told Queen Elizabeth Saturday he planned general elections for Oct. 10.

Evel dubs rocket

By JIM WILLSE

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — All the hullabaloo, hokum and hype will be left behind for a few moments today when Evel Knievel straps himself in a toy-like missile for his ride across the Snake River Canyon.

The time for the army of promoters and pitchmen to ballyhoo incredible danger of the canyon jump is largely passed: they have sold just about all the tickets they are going to sell.

Even Knievel, never one to minimize his own heroics, rates the probability of landing safely as "100 per cent — and that's it."

Still, there is that chance . . .

"Sure, he should make it. If we can put a man on the moon, we ought to be able to shoot one across a canyon," John Lewis, a 30-year-old schoolteacher from Kansas City, said Saturday. "But then again, when I look at that contraption and that canyon, I kind of wonder."

It is the spectacle of the 600-foot deep canyon and the pipestem-thin launch ramp above it that makes the jump such a public relations man's dream.

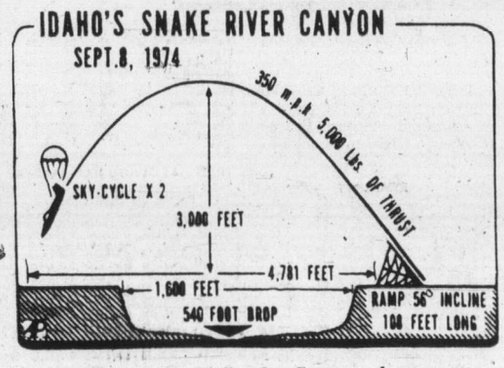

Diagram of Snake Canyon leap

"Look at that," says promoter Robert Arum, pointing at the 13-foot Sky-Cycle missile that is dwarfed first by the 108-foot launch rail and then by the crevice beyond. "If it's a fraud, then it's a fraud. Let it speak for itself."

Arum's Top Rank Inc. and other backers have already paid $6 million to Knievel, the 34-year-old son of a Montana auto dealer. If they have calculated the appeal of the stunt correctly, they may realize as much as $27 million, with 60 per cent going to the star.

It seems simple enough. Build up enough steam in the missile's engine to produce 400 miles an hour — the velocity needed to carry it well beyond the 1,600-foot width of the canyon — then bring it down by parachute.

The chief engineer, missile developer Robert Truax, says the chances are about the same as for a test pilot trying out a new plane for the first time.

Everyone connected with the promotion is fond of reminding skeptics of the two test firings that wound up in the canyon.

Yet Truax says the first was intended only to test the ramp and surprised no one by

But he's concerned for industry

Hip-shooter has nothing to hide

By GORDON LEGGE

TORONTO (CP) — When the petroleum industry was caught in the federal-provincial crossfire over sharing of tax revenues, Jerry McAfee was one man who got upset.

It was an understandable reaction for the president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

But unlike many corporation executives, McAfee did not sit fuming in his seventh-floor office at Toronto headquarters while lieutenants were dispatched to carry the word.

Instead he mounted a series of speaking engagements in eastern Canada and the Maritimes to criticize sharply the governments and vigorously defend the industry.

"Unfortunately, the Canadian oil industry today is caught as the bone of contention in the middle of a jurisdictional tug-of-war between the federal an dvarious provincial governments," McAfee said at the time.

"Instead of working out rational solutions on an intergovernmental basis in the interests of Canada as a whole, they each take another bit out of what is already a badly bitten industry.

"While the industry, for its part has demonstrated its willingness to co-operate with every reasonable request of governments, I, for one, do not think it should be the role of industry to try to resolve conflicting, overlapping and sometimes deliberately preemptive government policies."

Talk such as that has earned Jerry McAfee the label of the "Texas-Irish hip-shooter" but also a reputation as one of the industry's most articulate and effective spokesmen.

Yet it is in the area of communications that McAfee suggests that both he and the industry could be doing a much better job.

"We've been so badly misunderstood in spite of our best efforts in the past," he said in an interview. "We've got to find a better way of getting our story over, a better way of communicating with people and with government."

In five years as Gulf Canada president, McAfee, 57, has made a point of carrying the message in his easy southern drawl to anyone who cares to listen.

He has addressed himself to the industry's traditional problems — taxation, future oil supplies, exploration, prices, the role of government — and more recently to — nationalism, the environment, inter-government disputes, and the world-wide energy crisis.

What he has said has not been all that unusual. His stand on the industry's problems are those universally voiced in the industry.

But in these uneasy times McAfee is concerned about an erosion of public confidence in big business and big government.

For his part he wants to restore confidence in business and says the industry has nothing to hide.

When Gulf's net earnings for 1973 were 58 per cent higher than the previous year and the industry was under attack for the substantial profits, he invited financial writers to discuss the results.

He said: "We've called this press conference to announce our 1973 earnings of which we are pretty darn proud. Far from being apologetic or negative, it's the other way around. We worked hard to achieve these results."

He went on to say that the figure that counted was the return on investment which was 10.1 per cent — a fair figure, he said, but by no means astounding.

Communicating, he stresses repeatedly, is the single most important factor in solving any problem.

"I don't know any way to answer questions except straight on top of the table. If I don't know, I'll tell you right off the bat. If it is something we are not prepared to talk about I'll tell you that too," he told visiting reporters.

Not that he won't dodge an uncomfortable question. Normally genial and unassuming, he will frown a bit indicating some displeasure and then, like the seasoned politician, smoothly sidestep the question with some verbal manoeuvring.

His company, 68.5 per cent owned by Gulf Oil Corp. of Pittsburgh, Pa., is he country's second largest refiner, third in terms of sales of refined products and natural gas and fourth in production of crude oil and natural gas liquids.

Gulf accounts for 20 per cent of Canadian refining capacity, has 10,000 direct employees and 7,000 outlets including bulk plants, distributorships, and service stations.

After more than 30 years as an oil man, it's hard to separate the man from the industry.

His association with Gulf began with his father who spent more than 40 years in Gulf labs as a research scientist. Jerry McAfee grew up in Port Arthur, Texas, with a Gulf refinery in his back yard.

His high school and university vacations were spent rolling barrels in that refinery for 40 cents an hour.

He received a degree in chemical engineering from University of Texas and a doctorate from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1940. He spent the war years with a small independent working on the design and start-up of aviation gasoline plants. In 1945, he returned to Port Arthur to "put down roots" with Gulf.

That lasted about five years until he eventually started moving around, spending much of his time in research and development. He holds 17 U.S. patents.

He moved to Canada in 1967 as executive vice-president and in 1969 was appointed chief executive officer.

His climb up the corporate ladder was probably in part due to two personal characteristics he exhibits. One, he is considered decisive by his colleagues, offering a "sense of purpose," and he exudes optimism.

"I'm a great believer that each individual has a certain contribution to make at a given time and a given place and it's up to us to make the best contribution we can," he said.

So when is a person successful?

"The only measure of development is within a person," McAfee said. "And if he gets satisfaction, genuine satisfaction, out of what he is doing then he is a success, no matter what his particular role in life turns out to be.

"The measure of a man's success is the degree to which deep down in his heart he has been of some service to his fellow man."

Unless a person can feel at the end of the day he has done something for other people, that person might as well have not got up in the morning, McAfee said.

Head down, he pauses for reflection and then adds with a wide grin: "It's a great business to be in and I wouldn't be anywhere else."

Chrysler's 75s

Up, up and up

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Friday it would have little choice but to raise prices several times during the 1975 model year on top of an expected $400 to $500 introductory price boost this fall.

Company Chairman Lynn Townsend said there would be "repricing, probably several times, during the model year" as long as costs continue to rise.

Unlike General Motors and Ford Motor Co., Chrysler hasn't said exactly how much it plans to increase prices this fall, but Townsend said the boost will be "right in the ballpark" with the firm's two chief competitors.

BOND WEEK

Crossroads pause

TORONTO (CP) — Activity on the bond market continued to be mixed this week as investors stand at the crossroads between rampant inflation and a severe recession.

The short end of the market was unchanged while mid- and long-term issues gained about one-quarter point. Provincial and corporate issues were up about one-quarter point.

Dealers said the main activity consisted of liquidating unsold balances of new issues.

The process was more difficult because of the apathetic mood dominating the market before Labor Day.

They said current Canadian monetary policy indicating a high plateau for interest rates offers two alternatives: either rampant inflation or severe recession capable of producing major movements up or down respectively.

Day-to-day money was available at 8½ per cent. Three-month treasury bills were traded at an average of 9.10 per cent, unchanged from the previous week, and six-month bills at 9.20 per cent, also unchanged.

Barnsley must remain

BARNSLEY, England (Reuter) — Defence Secretary Roy Mason demanded this week that the legendary brewery of this Yorkshire mining town be kept open because the quality of Britain's beer must be preserved.

Mason said modern brewers are "thrusting upon the consumer a form of alcoholic fizz . . . just a cold, insipid, clinical version of traditional bitter beer."

He issued his call to save the Barnsley Brewery through a group known as Campaign for Real Ale, which maintains that the traditional British pint of beer is in danger of extinction as brewers substitute cheaper chemical processes for the proper aging of beer in the barrel.

Erotic sculptures a feature of temples

KHAJURAHO, India — The 1970s have been described by many Canadians as liberal years.

They say, for example, it is a time for unabashed sexuality and freedom in motion pictures, books and the arts. And in everyday life.

This so-called liberation, of course, disturbs some people. They point to the downtown areas of major Canadian cities such as Montreal, Toronto or Vancouver — scorning the honkey-tonk atmosphere of porno theatres, body-rub parlors and book stores.

But controversy over such issues is hardly new. And, in fact, some of the most sensuous works of art can be found 500 years before Columbus discovered America.

Khajuraho, in north-central India, is a classic case. It flourished from the 9th to 13th century as the religious and political capital of the Chandella kings before being destroyed under a Moslem invasion. Khajuraho is now just a small, unimportant village. But the temples of the Chandella kings remain (20 of an original 85) built with a few exceptions between 950 to 1050.

The sculptures in these temples depict feasting, music and dancing — and handsome men and voluptuous women immortalized in stone for all to see in the most intimate and varied postures of sensual love. There is probably no equivalent in the world to these sculptures. For the mature adult, a trip to Khajuraho can be a most rewarding artistic and spiritual experience. Here are human and divine forms throbbing with life, all carved with great skill. In fact, they are masterpieces. And all these results were achieved in just 100 years — a rather remarkable feat.

But why this passion for building such temples with the intricate carvings? Basically, India was extremely well off at this time. People had riches, the land bore plenty of food, and all amenities for the good life were there. The seclusion of women which was to follow in other rules was unheard of at the time. People dressed in richly ornamented clothing, and their biggest worry was in getting to all the fairs, hunts, feasts and music and dancing festivals which went on. Thus, the climate was perfect for creative efforts — and temple building came to the fore as the major form.

The Chandellas ruled for five centuries before being overcome by Mahmud the Turk, who began the Holy War against the "idolaters" of India in 1100. By 1200, the Sultans of Delhi had complete rule over the once glorious and fun-loving Chandella kingdom.

The temples were built as a sort of haven for the gods by the Chandella kings. There are no other temples like them in any other part of India, even though they are dedicated to such deities as Siva, Vishnu and the Jain Tirthankaras (perfect souls). Each temple stands on a high platform. The larger shrines have a central sanctuary for the honoured god and one more at each corner for the lesser deities. But the most noteworthy aspect of the Khajuraho temple is the shikara, or spire, which is surrounded and flanked by a number of similar towers which appear to push each other toward the sky.

The sculptures which have given Khajuraho its reputation are the "mithuna couples", those "rioting figures of love and lust". These figures are carved out in minute detail.

They were formed because of the Tantric doctrine, a popular cult during Chandella times. It emphasized the woman as the dominant principle of creation and taught that the senses are the equal of the spirit so that their imaginative indulgence could lead to heaven as well as more vigorous paths.

But one must remember that although the carvings of the mithuna groups are sensual, many do portray the tenderness and tranquility of human love fulfilled.

The temples are in three groups in an area of about eight square miles. The largest and most important is the western group, comprising the oldest and largest temples. The eastern group are comprised of Brahman and Jain shrines situated close to the present Khajuraho village. The southern group are a mile south of the village, but only two temples remain. However, they are worth the visit.

STAMP PACKET

Collector interest high

By LESLIE DREW
Colonist Staff Writer

Collector interest in the Broken Dollar variety of Die 1 of the latest Canadian $1 stamp depicting Vancouver appears to be unflagging, judging from auction catalogues.

Harnat has some superb examples coming up at its public auction in Toronto Sept. 29, and the estimated cash value, which the firm says is meant to represent the true market value, is illuminating.

For a vertical pair, one with the variety, the ECV is given as $10 to $20 plus; a block of four, one with the variety, rates an TCV of $20 to $30, and a horizontal strip of four, three with the Broken Dollar variety and one with the Broken Dollar and dot after Postes, carries an ECV of between $75 and $100. All have never been hinged.

Two in set of four due Sept. 23

Total printing of the four additional 8-cent Olympic commemoratives in the Keeping Fit series, to be issued Sept. 23, will be 60 million.

The issue uses the latent or hidden image engraving technique introduced with the first Olympic commemoratives March 22 (the image of the 1976 Olympic Games symbol becomes visible when the stamp is held obliquely toward a lightsource), and this time the stamps are red-colored, with four designs setenant on one sheet, depicting showshoeing, skiing, skating and curling.

Cabbage rots in fields for lack of pickers

And some Peninsula farmers are blaming federal government immigration policy, welfare programs, and unemployment insurance for the shortage of fruit and vegetable pickers.

The labor shortage cost him about 25 per cent of his crop this season, he claimed.

He said the government "should take these long-haired hippies and instead of paying them welfare, make them go to work. Work or starve."

Besides welfare and unemployment insurance, Ratcliffe complained that farmers can't compete for reliable help because there are "too many jobs paying too much money."

"When I started out I was able to hire girls 14 to 22 years old who were good personnel. Now all we get are punks, 11 to 16-year-olds whose mothers want us to babysit."

He added that some vegetable growers are lucky enough to hire East Indian immigrants, but the government has cut off new immigrants.

He said Manpower started an in-depth counselling program in June and as a result 15 welfare families are moving to jobs outside Victoria.

And a minimum of eight persons receiving unemployment insurance are interviewed every day and given jobs if they want to work, or taken off insurance benefits if they don't.

He added he had received no complaints from local farmers and no requests for immigrant labor.

Tom Michell, a director of the Saanich Fruit Growers Association, and an executive of the Island Vegetable Association, said some growers of cabbage and other vegetables are suffering from the labor shortage now, and potato growers will probably be added to the list when that crop has to be stored.

"We've been getting lots of calls from millhands looking for work because of the strike, but I'm disappointed that they are leaving the East Indians out," he added, referring to government immigration policies.

Stan Klubi, president of Saanich Fruit Growers, said farmers are also plagued by a decline in labor "quality."

He said students and youngsters are not prepared for outdoor work in summer heat and are easily discouraged, although good pickers can earn more than $20 a day.

St. Aidan's United gets new associate minister

Rev. Clare Holmes will be installed as associate minister of St. Aidan's United Church at an induction service and reception in the church at Richmond and Cedar Hill Crossroad at 7:30 p.m. today.

He will share the ministry of the 700-family congregation with the present minister, Rev. Rae Allan.

Holmes will also serve for one-third of his time in a team ministry at the University of Victoria. He will share offices at 103 Lansdowne Commons block with Rev. Marlowe Anderson, Anglican, and Rev. Leo Robert, Roman Catholic.

Holmes, a native of Vancouver, comes to Victoria after five years as minister with the Port McNeill Anglican-United Fellowship.

Previous to the Vancouver Island charge he ministered for five years at Lynn Lake, Man.

The South Pacific. See it from your dining room window.
See Moorea—the island that inspired the dream of Bali Hai—on a Royal Viking Line South Seas cruise. And see Bora Bora, Papeete, Tonga, Fiji, Samoa, Australia and New Zealand, as well.
The next South Seas cruise sails from the West Coast in late October, which is the perfect time of year to see this part of the world. And there's still time to make a reservation.
Or you can see the South Seas plus the East Indies and the Orient on a Circle Pacific cruise that sails in February.
Your home for these voyages is the all First Class Royal Viking Star or Royal Viking Sky. Of Norwegian registry. And spirit.
With dining rooms set high on an upper deck, and virtually walled with windows, to give you a view that stretches from horizon to horizon. These rooms are spacious enough to seat every passenger at a single, relaxed seating. You come to your table in your own time—and don't have to rush through the meal to make way for someone else.
And when you're not sampling the superb international cuisine, you can enjoy the same view from the adjacent main lounge. (Again, large enough to comfortably accommodate everyone aboard.) Or from the observation lounge, above the captain's bridge on the highest deck of the ship. Or probably from your room; 94% of our passengers have outside staterooms.
And every day you'll be looked after by a crew that numbers three for every five passengers. They're very Norwegian in attending the ship, very Continental in attending you.
Our 46-day South Seas cruises sail from Los Angeles on Oct. 22, 1974 and Jan. 5, 1975. (From San Francisco on Oct. 24 and Jan. 7.) Our 69-day Circle Pacific cruise sails Feb. 24, 1975 from San Francisco, and Feb. 25 from Los Angeles. And if you haven't time to take the full cruise, you can take only the part that suits you best and fly home. Or fly to meet the ship, and cruise home.

Forest fire hazard high

Despite some rainfall in southern British Columbia and Vancouver Island, the fire hazard remains high to extreme in most areas of the province.

Camp fires are still prohibited in the southern half of the Vancouver Forest District, including Vancouver Island south of Nootka Sound and Kelsey Bay, and all areas south of Bute Inlet on the mainland.

Careless smokers and escaped or abandoned camp fires are blamed for a large portion of the 172 new forest fires reported last week. Of the 143 fires still burning, all are contained and none is considered extremely serious.

Although B.C. Forest Service has not imposed any travel restrictions, hunters and other travellers in or near forested areas are requested to use extreme caution. Gas stoves are recommended rather than open fires.

To date, 1,935 fires have occurred, compared with 2,534 fires for the same period last year. Estimated firefighting costs to date are $4,448,731 compared with $7,400,000 for the same period in 1973.

Students to study in U.S.

NANAIMO — While Vancouver Island residents get ready for winter, a group of 20 Malaspina College students and their two instructors will be studying in California.

Plans have been completed by the college to offer a study program for English and geography students at Golden West College, Huntington Beach, 40 miles south of Los Angeles.

The spring semester at Golden West will run from Jan. 6 to April 18, just when the weather in B.C. can be most unpleasant.

The students will continue their regular Malaspina College study schedule with Shirley Goldberg responsible for the English course, while Robert Slobodian will teach geography.

It is estimated that the cost to each student for travel, room and board and three major field trips will run to $800. Six students have already signed up.

Long road back home

It's different, not only in design but also in its weight, which came close to 500 pounds. Giant sculpture, made of red cedar, is work of Samuel Wagstaffe of Tofino. It was one of 1,300 pieces displayed Thursday and Friday at Victoria's Open Space by 450 B.C. artists and craftsmen, most of them from Vancouver Island. Pieces were offered for sale to provincial department of public works, which bought 48 of them. Wagstaffe's sculpture, priced at $2,000, didn't sell. He now has task of taking it back to Tofino.

By STEPHEN BREWER
Colonist Reporter

As the morbid and curious looked on, Esquimalt police continued their search Saturday for clues which might lead them to the "miniature Jack the Ripper" who had murdered two women the day before.

Only the Closed sign in the window of Ray's Food Market, and the swarm of tired, anxious policemen inside, hinted at the bizarre double murder which had taken place there the afternoon before.

An RCMP tracking dog — flown in from Vancouver for the investigation — sniffed disinterestedly in the weeds around the 1325 Esquimalt Road corner grocery.

In his office two blocks down the street, Esquimalt police Chief Arthur Burton talked wearily of his department's search for the "brutal, vicious" murderer, the "miniature Jack the Ripper" who had killed Jane Isabel Plume, 51, of 1153 Munro, and Florence Isabel Bevan, 62, of 1324 Lyall, sometime between 2:05 and 2:30 p.m. the day before.

The clues were slim.

Police were searching for a man reported to have been in the store at 2:05 p.m., when the last witness they have so far interviewed had left it.

The man — described as being between 5'9" and 5'10", in his early 20s, clean-shaven and with dark hair — was heard talking to Mrs. Plume about a can of shrimp when the witness left.

What role, if any, that man had played in the mystery surrounding the murders was unclear, even to Burton.

In disbelieving tones, the chief talked of the murders:

One woman had been stabbed 40 times, the other 29; both had been beaten.

"He left virtually no clues," Burton mourned.

Every lead is being checked — a man in Hope was questioned Saturday, but police have been unable to place him any closer to Esquimalt than Gabriola Island the day of the killings.

"Every kook" on the lower end of Vancouver Island was being questioned, checked and checked again, Burton said.

Calls were going out to any city in North America where similar crimes had been committed in the last few years.

Lead after lead has turned up nothing.

"What set him off? What was it" Burton asked.

"Was this some guy off the street, going through the till when he was surprised, who panicked and stabbed them with a knife from his rucksack?

"Or was it something in their family backgrounds, some grudge?"

But questions were all the police had: The only clues were a single bloody footprint on the floor of the store and the theft of about $80 from the cash register and one woman's watch.

Nothing else made sense; everything else raised new questions, not answers.

Why was there no sign of a struggle in the tiny, crowded storeroom where the murders had taken place?

Where was the weapon used in the savage, brutal attacks?

Why was one of the bodies warmer than the other when police arrived on the scene?

Who was the grey-haired man reported to have unlocked the store's door just after 2 p.m. — was he the murderer?

Or was he an innocent passerby, too frightened by the scene of carnage he witnessed inside to do anything but flee?

Did he even exist?

Tahsis mill goes on short week

TAHSIS — Frank Grobb, vice-president of Tahsis Co. Ltd., said that because of the depressed world lumber market and a shortage of logs, the company's main sawmill here will go to a four-day work week, starting Monday.

Grobb said there won't be any layoffs among the mill's 525 workers, but warned production is dependent on sales, which are poor and could get worse.

COURTENAY — Tenders are expected to be called next month for a new region district office building to be located on the Comox Valley exhibition grounds in Courtenay.

Based on current estimated construction costs, the building will cost close to $350,000, Comox - Strathcona region board directors have been told.

The proposed building, covering 8,600 square feet of main floor space and 1,000 square feet of basement and storage area, is to be constructed across from the entrance to G.P. Vanier high school, and close to the new $1,800.00 arena-pool building which is expected to open in November.

The lands on which the building is to be built is within the agricultural land reserve, but the B.C. Land Commission has approved the proposed construction as a non-conforming use.

The building will have a simple design with three basic units and a board room, architect Alan Murnaghan said.

There will be an administration wing, planning and building department, and the board room.

The building will be constructed to permit a second-floor addition when required.

The board room will be 48 feet by 24 feet, and have space for about 40 members of the public as well as board members.

Exterior of the building will blend with the adjacent school and recreation complex, and will be of modular brickwork facing and cedar board. It will be electrically heated.

An unusual feature of the interior will be movable walls.

The region board offices are now in rented quarters on Fifth Street in Courtenay.

The decision to locate the board offices in Courtenay met with stiff opposition from some members in the northern part of the district. They wanted the offices in Campbell River.

Students busy in Courtenay

COURTENAY — Students hired by the city, under the Sweep '74 program, have been busy this summer polishing up Courtenay's beauty spots.

Road superintendent Robert Waugh told council that students maintained the mile of flowers and other flower beds in the city, brushed back and cleaned off sidewalks, and cleared brush for a new park near Pidcock Avenue.

Malaspina shows film classics

NANAIMO — A program of film classics from Germany, Russia, India, Canada, Italy and France has begun at Malaspina College.

Fifteen films will be screened over eight alternate Friday eveings.

The first three are Cabinet of Dr. Caligari, a 1919 German classic directed by Robert Wiene; Battleship Potemkin, made in Russia in 1925 by Serge Eisenstein; and Street Musique, a National Film Board short.

The other films booked for the fall film festival are Pather Panchali (Indian, 1958); Aparajito (Indian, 1959); World of Apu (Indian, 1960); Mon Oncle Antoine (Canadian, 1971); Metropolis (German, 1926); Alphaville (French, 1965); Red Desert (Italian, 1964); K—9000: A Space Oddity, and Zabriske Point (Italian, 1970).

Co-ordinator Shirley Goldberg said admission charges will be minimal.

COURTENAY — After trying for the past three years to get a road impoved, city council has learned that the department of highways is in the process of doing something about it.

The department has asked council for an estimate on reconstructing and asphalting of the back road from Dingwall to Ryan Road.

The estimate was provided by road superintendent Robert Waugh — it came to $35,700.

The department has not given council any details on the project.

NANAIMO — A petition signed by 18 prospective students was more than enough to convince Malaspina College authorities of the value of a literary program offered during the past two years.

The course, which runs for two hours every Monday, with Shirley Goldberg as instructor, resumes on Sept. 9 to the relief of those who had heard rumors it might be cancelled.

Last year the emphasis was on Canadian and American authors and this year the students will concentrate on contemporary German and Italian writers.

QUALICUM BEACH — Contributions from civic and private sources will be used to upgrade the local airport owned by the village.

The Aero Club has already extended the ruway by 400 feet. Pacific Logging company has donated $500 toward cost of installing a culvert, and Parksville municipality will contribute gravel. The village also set aside some funds toward the improvements.

Village council has applied to the department of transport for a grant to be used to upgrade the airport, including the paving of the runway.

NANAIMO — Malaspina College has appointed two faculty members and the college bursar as its representataives on the recently established Morrell Wildlife Sanctuary Foundation.

The foundation was set up to administer the sanctuary which will be developed from a 250-acre parcel of land southwest of Nanaimo, donated to the province earlier this year, by William Morrell of Nanaimo.

Named to the foundation were biologist Dave Kerridge, forester Dave Smith and bursar Oliver Neaves.

One of the terms of the donation of the land was that it be preserved as a sanctuary, and used by the college.

Other groups such as the provincial government and fish and wildlife branch will also be represented on the foundation.

QUALICUM BEACH — Council is seeking public opinion on the need to close Bay Street, a steep hill descending to the island Highway. Many east-bound vehicles find it impossible to enter the highway without pulling across the wrong side of the highway, council says.

Being guide means entertaining as well

By GRANIA LITWIN
Colonist Reporter

A guide not only has to be a good fisherman but also an entertainer, according to 22-year-old UVic student who is recognized as one of Campbell River's top Tyee Club guides.

Michael Oliver, 2660 Lansdowne, explained: "The challenge of guiding is not only learning the art and science of fishing, but making it with people in every walk of life.

"If there are no fish, then we have to talk and entertain them," he added.

Oliver said he was "very fortunate" to be classed one of Campbell River's top tyee-fishing guides this summer.

Painter's Lodge manager, George McCreadie, said that Oliver last week guided his clients to successive catches of big salmon weighing in at 40, 42 and 39 pounds.

The exceptional nature of the young guide's big week was not only the weight of the fish, but that it was a slow year, and they were caught under the strict rules of the Tyee Club.

The club, virtually synonymous with Painter's Lodge where it began 50 years ago, requires fishermen to row their own boat. Outboard motors are out.

Anyone can fish the river, but it is definitely not by motorboat that one gets a place in the famous tyee year book, or wins one of the envied prizes ranging from a bronze button, for a 30-pound salmon, to a ruby for 70 pounds or over.

Rules also stipulate the use of a klinker built dinghy and 15-20-pound test line.

The club, established in 1924, has attracted over 650 people so far this year, from all around the world.

During his six weeks at Painter's Lodge this summer Oliver guided fishermen from England, Switzerland, Florida and France.

"I would be most reluctant to class myself with the great guides of the river," said Oliver, who has been a guide since he was 18. "I am very much the lucky amateur."

But the fact is that Oliver, back in town to enter his fourth year of English at the University of Victoria, is regularly booked in advance, as a guide, though he works only a short season during his summer holidays.

Oliver said guides often get up about 4:30 a.m. and don't go to bed until 10 p.m. The guide has to row the boat, set the lures, let out the line, and tell the fisherman when to strike. He also has to clean the fish.

All of Oliver's good catches this year were made in Frenchman's Pool on Gibbs-eight spoons and light tackle, which mean 20-pound test line.

Oliver plans to take some time out of his creative writing classes this winter to return to Campbell River and do some fishing himself, steelhead this time.

Cougars obtain goalkeeper from Memorial Cup champs

By STAN COOPER

Victoria Cougars, on the eve of opening their 1974-75 training camp, have acquired a player who may go along way to making it a winning season for the Western Canada Hockey League club.

He's goalkeeper Bob Leslie, a five-feet-10-inch, 175-pounder who served as backup to all-star Ed Staniowski with Regina Pats last season.

Cougar coach and general-manager Patty Ginnell said the 19-year-old should be in Victoria for the start of training camp which opens Monday morning at Victoria Racquet Club.

"I've been after a goalkeeper with Western Canada League experience," Ginnell said, "and when Del Wilson phoned to say Regina was going with Staniowski and a younger goalkeeper as backup, I grabbed Leslie."

The goalkeeper was acquired for "future considerations" and if he sticks with the Cougars, Ginnell will either send the Pats a player or make a cash settlement.

"Who knows, he may be another Foubister," Ginnell continued, referring to Jim Foubister, most valuable player with the Cougars in '73-'74. Foubister was picked up as a free agent from Winnipeg Clubs midway through the campaign and was responsible for much of the Cougars' success in the last three months of the season.

He'll be one of 11 netminders vying for the spot vacated by Foubister, who is trying for a position with New York Islanders, the team that nabbed him in the National Hockey League's amateur draft.

Ginnell has invited about 80 players to camp, including 21 defencemen, 17 centres, 15 leftwingers and 17 rightwingers.

There are 11 holdovers — backup goalkeeper Glen Anweiler, defencemen Rick LaPointe, Tim Williams, Rick Peter and Jerry Nicholson; centres Mel Bridgman, Derek Haas and Al McLaren, leftwingers Danny Lucas and Peter Morris and right-winger Bruce Van Camp.

Cougars will work out at the Racquet Club this week and move to Memorial Arena, Sept. 16. The team will play six exhibition games, three in Victoria, two in Kamloops and the other in Nanaimo.

Exhibition action starts Sept. 21 when Nanaimo Clippers, the Cougar affiliate in the B.C. Junior Hockey League, play host to the WCHL Kamloops Chiefs.

Cougars will play Kamloops at Memorial Arena, Sept. 22 and 23 before moving to Nanaimo for a Sept. 24 game with Seattle Totems of the Central Professional Hockey League.

Then it's on to Kamloops for games, Sept. 25 and 26, and Cougars will wind up their pre-season schedule with a Sept. 28 game against Seattle at Memorial Arena.

GORDON BROWN, a former Manitoban who spent 18 years as an accountant with Eatons before moving to this province some time ago, has been appointed as the new manager of the Victoria Curling Club. Brown, who was a member of Winnipeg's Deer Lodge Curling Club for 15 years, was picked from 20 applicants and starts his new job tomorrow . . . Ed Danielson aced the 154-yard eighth hole at the Nanaimo Golf and Country Club on Labor Day, but was sharing the spotlight a minute or two later. Ex-Victorian Bob Cunningham, playing in the following foursome, stepped up and duplicated the shot . . . it was just a bit of an improvement on what happened at Cedar Hill two weeks earlier. There, during play in a club seniors' competition, Tom Skelton aced the 126-yard 12th hole and Dave Fyvie came along a few minutes later to also find the cup with his tee shot. The only difference was that there was a foursome between the quartets which included Skelton and Fyvie . . . Duncan curling veteran Ron Harper has been improving steadily after suffering a stroke in July, and everyone will welcome the news that a complete recovery is expected . . . Eastern Football Conference placekickers are getting field goals with dullish regularity — 61 in the first 21 games — but they haven't come close to matching last season's performance on converts. They got the extra point 111 times out of 113 chances in 1973 but have already failed five times this season . . . Sports Illustrated has done it again. This time it was the Boston Red Sox who headed for obscurity after an SI feature story, and in view of many such incidents in the past one doesn't have to be that superstitious to believe that SI notice might have had more to do with the pennant race in the American League East than the pitching of the Baltimore Orioles. If memory serves, New York Yankees went into a slump earlier this season after a similar story, and it would be only fair to get the Orioles featured before the schedule runs out.

JIM MOODY, hoping to get a second Victoria team in the Northwest International Fastball League, has a sponsor ready and has Don Bates interested in moving to the city. Bates, the 18-year-old pitcher for Saskatchewan in the Canadian men's softball tournament, would certainly make an excellent start for a new club . . . already here from Saskatoon is Dennis Bayak, who gave up his job with a radio-station there to accept a job with Victoria Cougars. He'll do their publicity work, and also the play-by-play action for the club's radio broadcasts . . . Bill Sturken, and you have to be an old-timer if you remember when he was a man-about-town and among the tenpinners at Arcade Alleys, was a recent visitor to the city . . . Marv Levy, coach of the Montreal Alouettes, says about football that "offence sells tickets, kicking wins games and defence wins championships." It's a good summation, and scores prove that coaches are interested least of all in selling tickets. But then selling tickets is really no problem if a team wins often enough. Fans, unfortunately, are likely to get more excited by dull 9-4 victories, if there are enough of them, than they are about 35-41 defeats . . . Don Pries, a hustling infielder here in the days when the city had a professional baseball team, has moved up another rung. He quit his job as assistant to general-manager J. Frank Cashen of Baltimore Orioles and is now assistant to Jim Wilson, who heads up the Central Scouting Bureau, which will handle scouting duties for 17 of the 24 major league clubs . . . coach Pat Ginnell of the Victoria Cougars likes his players on the rugged side, and Gordie Roberts, the 17-year-old Detroit defenceman who recently threw in his lot with the Cougars, had a lot of statistics which interested Ginnell. Not only were there 25 goals and 53 assists while playing in the Tier Two Southern Ontario Junior League last season, but there was also that impressive penalty total — 340 minutes . . .

PADDY LANIGAN finally got back to Victoria, but he had to retire to make it. He is, of course, most likely to be found at Royal Colwood . . . Reg Midgeley, who injured his knee during a round of golf in Bellingham, is waiting for the date for the removal of a cartilage . . . it was only about 10 days ago that a female caller, who explained she had been out of the country, wanted to know who had won the Stanley Cup last spring. Her telephone call came less than 24 hours after someone had called to ask how the 1972 Team Canada-Russia hockey series had ended, and then wanted to know who had won when told that it had produced a 4-3-1 result . . . John Robertson is now a former Montreal sports columnist. He recently shocked his managing editor by accepting a lucrative contract and becoming a Montreal hot-liner . . . Bud Dunnett is at work trying to form a lawn-bowling club in Parksville . . . Ron Poole, who started his B.C. Junior Hockey League career with Victoria Cougars and ended it with Kamloops Chiefs last season, left Saturday for London, Ont., to try and win a spot with Washington Capitals, one of the two new NHL clubs this season . . . Mrs. W. Rowan, 4110 Torquay, won the new car raffled off by the Victoria Baseball Association . . . one thing that certainly seems evident is that Russ Jackson is among those who look better without a beard . . . best news yet for the future of professional lacrosse is the appointment of Robert Wussler as the Columbia Broadcasting System's vice-president in charge of sports. He is determined to make his network No. 1 in sports, and one of his thoughts is that professional box lacrosse has a chance to make it as a TV sport. That would seem to indicate that the National Lacrosse League is to get is hoped-for television exposure . . . the B.C. amateur baseball championship is to be decided in Victoria next August, and it won't be long before committees start the planning. Unless the format is changed, it will take a maximum of 11 games to decide the winner . . . and there was a bit of a shock the other night when I came home and turned on the television set. Thought for a minute that Eddie Borde had decided on a new career instead of retirement, but it was just George Gobel trying to avoid retirement.

Morgan cracks home run

Reds edge Dodgers

Joe Morgan's two-run home run spoiled Mike Marshall's record-tying appearance and kept the Cincinnati Reds late season hex over the Los Angeles Dodgers alive.

The eighth-inning blast capped a comeback that gave Cincinnati a 7-5 win over the first-place Dodgers and moved the Reds to within two-and-a-half games of the National League's West Division leaders.

Marshall, who tied the record of 92 appearances he set with Montreal Expos last season, came into the game in the sixth inning.

He got Tony Perez to ground into a double play to end the inning, but in the eighth, he gave up a one-out walk to Pete Rose and then Morgan hit his 20th home run of the season.

The victory was a big one for the Reds, who had lost, 3-1, to the Dodgers Friday, but have now won three of their last four games with Los Angeles and are threatening to steal a second straight pennant from the Dodgers.

Dodgers, who have been in first place since April, play their last game in Cincinnati today, and have a three-game series with the Reds starting Sept. 15 in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles appeared to be on the way to an easy win Saturday, nailing starter Clay Kirby for five runs in the first two innings.

But Cincinnati's relievers Pedro Borbon, Tom and Clay Carroll and Fred Norman combined to shut out the Dodgers the rest of the way.

Dave Concepcion made it 5-3 with a home run in the third inning and Johnny Bench got the Reds to within a run with his 28th home run of the season in the fourth inning.

Cincinnati drove Andy Messersmith from the mound after Bench's homer, tying it at 5-5 on Concepcion's run-scoring single after a walk to Dan Driessen and a single by Cesar Geronimo.

Pittsburgh edged Montreal Expos, 6-5, in 12 innings, to stay ahead of the Cardinals, who got by New York Mets, 2-1, on Lou Brock's two-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning.

Brock didn't steal any bases Saturday — he was picked off first base once — but is only three behind the major-league record of 104 set by Maury Wills of the Dodgers in 1962.

Shutout string cut

The Orioles won their 10th straight, eding Cleveland Indians, 3-2, in an American League game Saturday, but had their shutout streak stopped one inning shy of tying a major-league record.

Charley Spikes hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the ninth inning and the Orioles missed the record of six consecutive shutouts set by the 1903 Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Orioles also fell short of the major-legaue record for consecutive shutout innings of 56 held by the same Pirates. But the Orioles, who hadn't been scored on since the eighth inning of a 7-1 win over Kansas City last Sunday set an American League record of 54 innings, seven better than the record set by Cleveland Indians in 1948, while posting a record five straight shutouts.

In their 10-game winning streak, the Orioles have allowed nine runs, while scoring 39.

Saturday's win kept the Orioles tied in second with Boston Red Sox, who ended an eight-game losing streak by defeating Milwaukee Brewers, 4-3, in 10 innings, and moved them to within a game of the New York Yankees.

At New York, Graig Nettles homered in both games and the Yankees split a doubleheader with Detroit Tigers losing 8-3 in the opener and taking the second game, 1-0.

Rizzuto in WIHL

NELSON (CP) — Garth Rizzuto, 27, of Winnipeg, a veteran of both the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association, Sturday signed a one-year contract as player-coach of Nelson Maple Leafs of the Western International Hockey League.

Rizzuto was drafted by Vancouver Canucks of the NHL in 1970, then jumped to Winnipeg Jets in the WHA for the 1972-73 season.

Dolphins aiming for first win

If Victoria Dolphins intend to prove they can win in the Big Four Junior Football League, it's not likely they'll get a better opportunity than today.

The winless Dolphins tackle North Shore Cougars at 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Both teams are winless in three starts this season and while Dolphins have the poorest defence record in the league the Cougars have the worst offence record.

Despite head coach Dave Rosbrough's prediction that the usually-powerful Cougars would generate more offence this season, they have managed only six points so far.

Last season the Cougars averaged 19 points a game and finished second in the league with a 5-2 record, with both losses inflicted by champion Vancouver Meralomas.

North Shore has finished second to the Meralomas for three straight seasons.

The Dolphins offence has managed only one touchdown and a total of 13 points, but they will have the benefit of home park and a two-week rest.

Rugby tie

DUBLIN (Reuter) — The Irish XV and the Irish Rugby Football Union President's World XV drew 18-18 in the Irish Rugby Centenary International at Landsdowne Road Saturday.

Halftime score was 12-12.

Barry Legh and former-Victorian Rob Hindson represented Canada on the World XV.

UBC bounced

SASKATOON (CP) — University of Saskatchewan Huskies opened their 1974 Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season Saturday by overwhelming University of British Columbia Thunderbirds, 63-0.

Chris ponders in the rain

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert was given 24 more hours Saturday to ponder and plot her predicament—hanging by her fingernails in the United States Open tennis championships.

A cold, drizzling rain forced postponement Saturday of the women's semi-final, in which Evonne Goolagong leads the Wimbledon titleholder and No. one seed, 6-0, 4-3, and the semi-finals in men's singles.

The suspension delayed until Monday the championship matches, with the men and women competing for a $22,500 victor's purse.

The winner of the Goolagong-Evert match will meet second-seeded Billie Jean King, a three-time winner who beat Julie Heldman of Houston, 2-6, 4-3, 6-1.

Boersma helps Liverpool maintain unbeaten run

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool attacked brilliantly for 90 minutes Saturday to defeat struggling Tottenham Hotspur 5-2 and remain undefeated at the top of Division I in the English Football League.

Phil Boersma scored three goals for Liverpool, which has now won five of its first six games, and drawn the other, for 11 points. Boersma's goals made him the top First Division scorer with five.

Ipswich retained its unbeaten home record with a 1-0 win over Everton and remained in second place with 10 points.

Manchester City drew with Coventry 2-2 to stay in third place with nine points.

After its defeat Tottenham dropped to last place with just two points after six games.

Coventry took an early 2-0 lead on goals by Brian Alderson and Colin Stein, but Manchester United came back with goals in the last 20 minutes by Rodney Marsh and Alan Oakes.

Alan Hudson and John Ritchie scored for Stoke City.

Coventry now is the only First Division team without a win, following Birmingham City's surprise 1-0 win at Queen's Park Rangers. Centre half Joe Gallagher scored the goal after an error by the Londoner's debut goalkeeper, Richard Teale.

In Division Two, Manchester United lost its perfect record when Nottingham Forest held them to a 2-2 draw.

It was not until the 80th minute that Sammy McIlroy scored the equalizer after Forest had scored two straight goals after being down 1-0.

Soccer study aids players

LONDON (Reuter) — A government study has recommended that players should have a bigger say in the running of English League soccer.

A report on British professional soccer by the commission of industrial relations suggested that club captains or representative of the Professional Footballer's Association should be present at talks on contracts and that there should be collective discussions between managers and players on all matters affecting their livelihood.

It also recommended that players should be represented on the game's decision-making bodies, and they should be allowed legal representation at disciplinary hearings.

The proposals by the commission of nine men and one woman, who took 15 months to prepare their report, are not enforceable — the commission can only make recommendations.

But the Professional Footballer's Association says it is in favor of the report and the English Football League has agreed to study its recommendations carefully.

Leisure Road charges from behind to win Brighouse Belles Handicap

VANCOUVER (CP) — Favorite Leisure Road came from off the pace to catch Patti Ruth once again and go on to win the $8,500-added Brighouse Belles Handicap, Saturday at Exhibition Park.

Leisure Road, who has a habit of winning by no more than necessary, moved up to take the lead on the outside by a nose entering the stretch.

Patti Ruth, who had set all the pace, dug in down the straightaway and lost by three-quarters of a length.

Leisure Road, ridden by Andy Smith, covered the one and one-sixteenth miles in 1:45 2-5 — her fastest time of the season for the distance. It was the four-year-old filly's fifth victory of the season in which her margins have ranged from two lengths to a neck.

One of those victories came in an allowance race July 1 when Leisure Road again caught Patti Ruth at the top of the stretch and went on to win.

The Brighouse Belles winner paid $3.80, $2.40 and $2.30. Patti Ruth paid $2.50 and $2.70; the three-year-old Our Diamond paid $2.70.

The $5,987 winner's share of the purse brought Leisure Road's season earnings to $20,883.

Handicap victory

Yachts in port

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A race between losing contenders in the America's Cup was postponed for 24 hours Saturday because of foul weather.

Rain, accompanied by winds up to 40 miles an hour, soaked Newport and the area offshore during the morning. Small craft warnings flew along the New England coast.

The race, considered extremely important for its bearing on next week's start of the best four-of-seven America's Cup series between Australian challenger Southern Cross and the U.S. defender Courageous, was to start at 10 a.m. today.

The four 12-metre yachts scheduled to compete are the U.S. hopefuls Mariner and Intrepid, the Australian Gretel II and the French entry, the France.

Victoria taxi firms oppose rival's bid to unite

Application Monday

. . . to operate across entire peninsula

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

At least two Victoria taxi firms will oppose an applic-

At least two Victoria taxi firms will oppose an application by C and C Taxi Service Ltd. to consolidate its Sidney Taxi and Transportation Co. with the main Victoria operation.

The application, which requires the approval of the Motor Carriers Commission (a provincial body), will be heard Monday morning at the provincial courthouse.

The protesting companies, Island Taxi and Blue Bird Cabs Ltd., argue that such a consolidation would give C and C a competitive advantage in the Saanich Peninsula, an area of growing population.

John Prevedoros, general manager of C and C, said Friday that his company is only planning ahead and trying to provide an economical taxi service for peninsula residents.

The heart of the matter lies in the restrictions placed on companies in this area with regard to their operation zones. City companies, for instance, can only pick up and unload passengers within a five-mile radius of Victoria's city hall.

They may take passengers to the 10-mile radius Sidney zone but not pick them up. However, Sidney Taxi can pick up passengers but is limited to its present eight cabs. A consolidation would mean that all 42 C and C cabs could operate fully in both areas.

Prevedoros said that if all his cabs (C and C is the biggest here) were allowed full rights in both areas, his would be a far more economical operation with one result being fewer applications for fare increases. He said his cabs would be driven fewer unproductive miles.

There are, at last count, 29 taxi firms with approximately 140 cabs operating in the Greater Victoria area.

Donald French, manager of Island Taxi and one who is opposed, said the same rights should be provided to all carriers in the area.

"That would be the ideal situation," he said in an interview. "As it is, if this thing (the application) goes through, it would give C and C the whole thing and that smacks of a government-approved monopoly."

French pointed out there are stiff fines if the zone rules are broken. "There's a Mountie out at the airport now whose job it is to check out cabs," he said.

French is in opposition

The Colonist has learned that one company recently was charged with a violation but it was later withdrawn.

"And none of this should have to happen," French added. "The companies in this area by and large have gotten along quite well over the years. Now I'm afraid this feeling may disappear."

Blue Bird manager Bruce Woodward said that he too would be appearing at the hearing and interprets the C and C application as a potential restriction to business.

Woodward said the zones were laid out in the late 1930s and bear little relationship to today's situation.

"They certainly need updating," he added.

With zones as they are, there is an area between Royal Oak and Elk Lake where it is not legal for residents to call either Sidney or Victoria for taxi pickup.

Key operating areas in the Sidney zone are the international airport at Patricia Bay and the two ferry terminals. The only other company operating in the zone is Beacon Taxi of Sidney, a small firm that began last year.

C and C has exclusive rights granted by the federal government to pick up and deliver passengers at the airport but cabs operating under its name can only deliver passengers to the Victoria zone, Prevedoros stated.

"Sidney and the peninsula is a growing area," Prevedoros said. "Why, they need more cabs out there."

The C and C manager asked:

"Why didn't they (the other companies) thihk of applying for the zone? I think they now see that I've got a good idea.

"We didn't oppose Beacon's application when they started up but we could have," Prevedoros said. He added that C and C made a similar application for increased business a year ago but the commission asked him to resubmit it.

"And now we have this hearing. Well, I welcome it as it will clear the air," he said.

"I've got the only union-driver operation in western Canada here," Prevedoros said. "I pay top wages and fringe benefits and I have to keep the wolf away from the door by operating the best way I know how. It's up to an employer to do the best he can.

"You know one of the last rights we have these days is our right to go broke," he added with a chuckle.

Chase hits 140 mph

Reserve Constable Dan Canyluk of Richmond was injured when his car went out of control on a corner during the chase shortly before midnight Friday.

Police stopped a man who had led the chase, which began when officers spotted a car speeding through residential areas of Richmond at about 60 miles an hour.

One patrol car pursued the speeder and was joined by two others. Three other patrol cars joined in just south of the George Massey tunnel on Highway 99.

Zailow was to appear in court Monday.

Thirty-five die in plane crash

JAKARTA (AP) — Thirty-five of the 39 persons aboard a Garuda Indonesian Airway plane that crashed in south Sumatra on Saturday are dead, Indonesia's official Antara news agency reported today.

Quake rattles South Mexico

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — An earthquake registering 4.5 on the Richter scale shook southern Mexico on Saturday morning, but police said there were no reports of damage or injuries.

The seismological station at Mexico City said the three-second quake's epicentre was 180 miles southwest of Mexico City.

Crash kills Calgarians

INVERMERE, B.C. (CP) — Two Calgary residents were killed and another was seriously injured when their car went out of control off Highway 93 near Marble Canyon and struck a culvert.

Police identified the victims as John K. Neill, 80, and his wife Elizabeth, 75. The car was driven by their daughter, Elizabeth Rennie.

A spokesman for Kelly Douglas Co. Ltd., which operates the Super-Valu chain, said in a telephone interview from Vancouver there are no plans to open new stores in Victoria in the foreseeable future.

The spokesman said at one time the company had five stores in the Victoria area. He did not know when the company began to phase out the stores.

There are approximately 100 Super-Valu stores in Vancouver and throughout the province.

The spokesman, Tom Dole, said Victoria was the only place in B.C. where, "we lost our shirt."

He blamed the wrong choice of stores and wrong locations for Super-Valu's lack of success in Victoria.

The company bought old stores, mainly in downtown locations, which was a wrong move, Dale said.

Someday, he predicted, Super-Valu will have another go at Victoria, but not until "we can do it in a big way."

At the moment, there are too many grocery stores in Victoria; the competition would be too fierce to promise any degree of success for new stores, he added.

The announcement that the last store would close its doors for good came earlier this week in newspaper advertisements.

The building is slated for demolition and the land is to be sold.

Several years ago, Vancouver developer J. A. Reid held an option on the property. He planned at that time to build a $7 million commercial-residential complex on the site, but failed to reach agreement with the city over the project's density and height.

Reid said Friday he was "still involved" in the possible purchase of the land, but added there are no immeiate plans for development.
